A Long Struggle.

"That it requires a persistent wooer to win the smiles of dame fortune is illustrated in the case of George Turner, the recently elected senator from the state of Washington," said C. R. Wellman of Spokane Falls, recently, to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat reporter. "I am a friend and neighbor of Senator Turner," continued Mr. Wellman, "and I never read in fiction of anything more interesting than his long struggle for fame and fortune and his sudden success. For years Turner was a struggling barrister. In the days of the boom he invested his savings in mining stocks that for many years were considered worthless. He became a candidate for United States senator in 1892, but the fight resulted in a deadlock. The governor of the state, after the adjournment of the Legislature, then appointed his principal opponent, John B. Allen, to the place. This is not a part of the story, but it is worthy of mention that this appointment resulted in a new ruling as to the eligibility of United States senators. It was held that as the vacancy to which Allen was appointed occurred during the session of the Legislature the governor had no right to appoint. But to proceed with the story of Senator Turner's fortunes. When the recent Legislature convened at Olympia he went to the capital and again declared himself a candidate for senator. The night of his election he received a telegram stating that a lucky find had been made in the Le Roy mining property, of which he owned 35,000 shares. When he returned to his home at Spokane his neighbors tendered the senator-elect a reception. While in the midst of a crowd of congratulatory friends another telegram was handed him. It told of the discovery of paying gold ore on property he owned in the Trail Creek country. Senator Turner's Le Roy mine stock is now worth $350,000, and the Trail Creek property will probably make him a millionaire. All this good luck was crowded into one brief week. I don't believe you can find the equal of this anywhere in actual life."

After Typhoid Fever.

"After I had typhoid fever kidney trouble ensued. I had terrible pains in my back, head and shoulders, and felt tired, drowsy and dragged out and had annoying urinary troubles. I have grown daily better since I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills. I have no pains of any kind, sleep well, feel rested; and the urinary troubles have completely disappeared." J. W. Douglas, Port Hope.

The City of The Future.

The modern industrial city has been dependent for its rapid expansion upon its superior advantages with respect to coal—that is, it must have either a navigable water front, or be a natural railway receiving and distributing centre, or be the natural focus of a coal and iron region. All this will be changed in the great electrical waterfall cities of the future. The power, as a rule, will be produced on the mountains, while the cities will be scattered far and wide over the foothills. There will be better air, more room, better drainage, more civilized conditions of living, than is the case with the present overcrowded industrial beehives, built, for the most part, on the swampy deltas or in the valleys of great rivers. Under the pressure of dear coal, and with attraction of cheap water power, the face of Europe will be changed.

As indicated by Lord Kelvin, the Highlands of Scotland will become industrially more important to Great Britain than the comparatively flat Midlands; Switzerland, Norway and Sweden, the Austrian Tyrol and Transylvania may become the industrial centres of Europe, owing to their superiority in water power. For the rest the course of manufactures will seek the sources of the great rivers, or of rivers not great which have a very rapid fall. In distant lands we find English engineers already making plans for saving the energy of the falls of the Nile, 15 miles below Cairo, and it is well within the bounds of probability that the Nile cataracts will some day supply the power necessary for running trains of cars from Alexandria to Khartoum. Not only are there magnificent falls on the Zambesi itself, in South Central Africa, but many of its branches in the Shire Highlands have rapid descents in level, admirably suited for the development of electricity by turbine wheels. We too, often think of Hindustan as a great plain, forgetting that the Himalaya Mountains, the highest on the globe, gave birth to the Ganges, the Indus, the Brahmaputra, and the Oxus, all of which, with their mountain tributaries, reach the plains after taking innumerable giant leaps down the mountain sides. It is nonsense to say that the development of this water power is visionary; the falls of the Zambesi are much more within the range of civilization today than any part of Montana, for example, in the United States, was 30 years ago.—E. H. Mullin, in Cassier's Magazine.

An ordinary cough or cold may not be thought much of at the time, but neglect may mean in the end a consumptive's grave. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and turpentine will not cure Consumption when the lungs are riddled with cavities; but it will stop the cough, will cure Consumption in its early stages, and even in its last stages gives such relief as to be a perfect Godsend to those whose lives are nearing a close.

Canada And The United States.

It is to be regretted that the Canadian government cannot bring itself to agree to suspend pelagic sealing for a year with an agreement on the part of the United States that during the time it will suspend the killing of fur seal upon the Pribyloff islands. The reason why the government in Ottawa is unwilling to take this step is not difficult to understand. A number of business houses in British Columbia are interested in this business, and to prohibit the continuance of it for diplomatic considerations would be unjustifiable unless compensation was granted to those whose business ventures were thus interdicted. So far as the American negotiators are concerned, it is their undoubted intention to secure the complete prohibition of pelagic sealing, and they are, no doubt, willing to recommend that payment be made to those Canadian citizens who suffer in being excluded from a business which they have every natural right to carry on. But this is a case in which a commissioner proposes but Congress disposes. The Canadians suffered what is recognized to be an unjustifiable loss in the seizing, some years ago, of their sealing vessels on the seas by the United States revenue cutters. The United States government has, in effect, acknowledged that it was altogether in the wrong, and yet Congress has not been active in providing the means to meet these claims.

If a general treaty with Canada can be put through, it would no doubt include a provision for the payment of this class of damages; although the administration is known to favor what will settle a number of disputed questions, one cannot state with absolute confidence that the Senate will ratify such a treaty after the President has agreed to it. We have senators, even one from this state, who have shown themselves to be little disposed to favor international arrangements which have for their intent the amiable settlement of disagreements. The jingoist statesman considers it convenient to have within easy reach subject for contention which can at any time be brought into prominence. It is on their account that Canada is unwilling to order a suspension of pelagic sealing. The ground is taken that under the Paris award no fur seal can be killed in Behring sea before the 1st of August next, and it is no doubt held that in the next eight months there is time enough to draw up a treaty and have Congress ratify it, if that body is supposed to take such action. If it is not so disposed, it is hardly worth while, from a Canadian point of view, to order a temporary suspension of seal killing. It will thus be seen that we are to some extent suffering by lack of confidence which people outside of our country entertain in the probability that Congress will act in accordance with the dictates of equity and good sense.—Boston Herald.

"My daughter had been ailing for nearly two years with nervous prostration, indigestion and other complaints which girls in their teens are subject to. For days at a time she was confined to her bed, and could retain nothing on her stomach. Our family physician finally declared she was in a decline. We despaired of her recovery. She gradually grew worse. I had found so little benefit from remedies I was skeptical about trying South American Nerve. I, however, procured a bottle and relief came like magic; the pain left her in a day, and after taking five bottles she was completely cured, and as well and hearty as ever she had been." Mrs. Geo. Booth, Orangeville, Ont.—Sold by Garden Bros.

Remarkable Dinner.

Perhaps the most remarkable dinner on record was that given by an antiquary named Goebel, in the city of Brussels. At the dinner were apples that ripened more than 1800 years ago, bread made from wheat grown before the children of Israel passed through the Red sea, and spread with butter that was made when Elizabeth was Queen of England. The repast washed down with wine that was old when Columbus was playing with the boys of Genoa. The apples were from an earthen jar taken from the ruins of Pompeii. The wheat was taken from a chamber in one of the pyramids, the butter from a stone shelf in an old well in Scotland, where for several centuries it had lain in an earthen crock in icy water, and the wine was recovered from an old vault in the city of Corinth. There were six guests at the table and each had a mouthful of the bread and a teaspoonful of the wine, but was permitted to help himself bountifully to the butter, there being several pounds of it. The apple jar held about two-thirds of a gallon. The fruit was sweet, and as finely flavored as if it had been preserved but a few months.
