BIGGAR RIDGE.

A meeting of christian friends was held in the school house on the evening of Thursday 10th of June to take steps for providing fortnightly preaching supply for this district and Foreston during ensuing year. At 8 p. m. Alfred Biggar called the meeting to order Rev. J. Home was appointed chairman and secretary. The chairman having shortly dwelt on the praiseworthy object of meeting. Hiram Biggar moved that Mr. Puddington Baptist missionary be requested to furnish such fortnightly preaching service. The motion was seconded by Alfred Biggar and carried. On motion of John Biggar seconded by John Huggard, Charles Dewitt. Alfred Biggar and John Biggar were appointed a committee to confer with Mr. Puddington regarding salary and were authorized to close agreement with that gentleman for his services. Chairman closed proceedings with a brief address.

On the evening of Monday 14th the school supply for winter wood was sold by public auction and after a while competition was knocked down to Harvey Biggar, Hiram Biggar and John

BUSY HARTLAND.

No Signs of Going Backward.

There is a good deal of speculation among business men as to Hartland's future, whether it will remain about as it is for many years to come, whether it has reached its height of prosperity or whether it will in a short time take a big forward plunge, and out-rival Woodstock. During the past ten years Hartland has had quite a boom. There has been a deal of new building, and an immense amount of trade has been transacted. The placing of a complete waterworks system in the village shows that its inhabitants have faith in the future. Many other signs of go-aheadness have been noticeable of late. Hartland started a band, and now the band is a first class musical combination as Florenceville could testify yesterday and Woodstock will probably agree on the 12th of July. Then in conjunction with the waterworks, Hartland organized a volunteer fire department, who are quite capable of protecting the property within the village boundaries. Nor is Hartland any longer behind from a newspaper point of view. Mr. Fred Stevens has a neat office, in which he does job work and from which issues every week a bright and newsy sheet The Adver-tiser. The quarters of The Advertiser are close to the railway station and a prominent sign is put out so that he who runs may read.

There are some fine buildings in Hartland, There are some fine buildings in Hartland, C. Humphrey Taylor's brick block, easily leading. This building would do credit to a city. It is occupied by Mr. Taylor, who lives over his store, and by Estey & Curtis, druggists. Another imposing building is the Woodworking Factory, which, by the way, is said to be doing a fine business this season. Of private building there has not been as much this season as in some recent years.

much this season as in some recent years, but, a general brightening up of residences is noticeable. There is nothing shabby about Hartland. Its appearance bespeaks the con-dition of its inhabitants, good-looking, well dressed and well-to-do. At present there is a good railway service, travellers from Woodstock having the advantage of three trains to Hartland. "The "suburban" is as popular in Hartland as in the other villages along the line. Perhaps their only complaint is that business does not warrant a train up river later than the noon-day express.

Merchants are not complaining excessively of the hard times. With their fellow business men, elsewhere, they see the silver lining, and share in the universal hope of improving business. Customers seemed to be plentiful in the stores, and, no one is kicking. The hotel accommodation is ample. The Riverside, the old established hotel has its patrons, and the Commercial, just opposite the station, conducted by Mr. Rideout, is a new, large and roomy house with every accommodation, including a spacious verandah where the traveller may sit after a well cooked and well served meal and survey with placed humor the bright and clean village beneath, the beautiful river, nowhere more lovely, and the rich and varied scenery of the surrounding country.
