SECOND CHAMBERS.

There was somewhat of an unusual interest to outsiders in the recent election in Boston, as a peculiar issue was at stake. It was the retention or abolition of the dual chamber. It appears that Boston's municipal affairs are managed by two bodies, the board of aldermen and the common council. At the election on Monday an act to consolidate these two chambers was rejected by a majority of nearly 6000.

The Herald strongly supported the reform, but the Herald while, undoubtedly representing the better sentiment of Boston, does not always, nor, in fact, often, represent the majority of the electorate.

Discussing the subject of two chambers, the Herald considers the question at issue as it bears on state legislatures, and favors the dual system in these cases, it points out the difference between city and state government, and what it says may be applicable to us as well as to its more intimate readers.

"We are not agreed that single legislative chambers are expedient for both the state and the city. The city is in the nature of a great business corporation. Its affairs are substantially business affairs. No business corporation establishes two boards of directors to act in concurrence for it, and no town government, out of which the city is an outgrowth, institutes two boards of selectmen. A state legislature has broader bearings. The state, under our form of government, is as much a distinct entity as is the general government. There is the sovereignty of the people in both. There is no sovereignty of the people in the cities. They are established purely for convenience in local administration. They do not institute government policies. They only administer policies that the state has instituted for them. The state even directs how they shall administer these policies. Their analogy to business corporations is plain, therefore, while their analogy to states is only fanciful. A single legislative chamber such as the amendment to the city charter provides is, in our opinion, a wise move, but it should not be identified in principle with a single legislative body for the state, which would not be a wise one."

THERE IS HOPE

Their hope for those who suffer from biliousness and liver complaint. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the liver and restores health and vigor. Here is the proof:
Dear Sirs— I was troubled with biliousness and sick headache, and could get no relief until I tried B.B.B. I have taken four bottles and am now completely cured. I recommend it as the best cure for all liver troubles. Mrs. GEORGE HADDOX, Walkerton, Ont.

Engineer Garden in Charge at Warden.

Charles Garden, who has been engaged in location work on the east end of the road all summer, arrived in Warden Saturday with his nephew, H. Connell, and M. Harris. Mr Garden has been assigned as engineer in charge of construction of fifty miles of road, with headquarters at Warden. His work will extend twenty-five miles each way from Warden along the line of construction.

Mr. Garden had walked over most of the survey in his allotment east of the river, and Monday started forth along the line to the western limit, returning Wednesday afternoon. He then visited the new camp of Smith & McKenzie and held a conference with Mr. Smith relative to the work included in Mr. Smith's contract.

Mr. Garden is a brother of G. H. Garden, who surveyed the crossing of the river at this place, and is now engaged on the work at Moyie lake. He has let the contract for a two story dwelling house which is now in course of construction, and as soon as it is completed will bring his family here to reside. —Wardner (B. C.) International.

Shall and Will.

There are probably no two words in the English language which are so frequently used incorrectly, or which cause so much trouble to writers and speakers, as the two written above. On this subject it is appropriate to quote from Richard Grant White, an excellent authority on correct English words and their uses. "The radical signification of 'will' (Anglo-Saxon 'willan') is purpose, determination; that of 'shall' (Anglo-Saxon 'sceal,' ought) is obligation. 'I will do' means I purpose doing—I am determined to do so. 'I shall do' means, radically, I ought to do; and as a man is supposed to do what he ought to do, 'I shall do' came to mean, I am about doing—to be, in fact, a mere announcement of future action, more or less remote. But so, 'you shall do' means radically, you ought to do; and, therefore, unless we mean to impose an obligation or to announce an action on the part of another person, over whom we claim some control,

'shall,' in speaking of the mere future voluntary action of another person, is inappropriate; and we, therefore, say 'you will,' assuming that is the volition of the other person to do thus or so. Hence, in mention on the part of another of an obligation or inevitable action, which we mean to control, we say, I or we 'will,' you, he or they 'shall.' Official orders, which are in the forms of 'you will,' are but a seeming exception to this rule of speech, which they, in fact, illustrate. For in them the courtesy of superior to subordinate, carried to the extreme even in giving command, avoids the semblance of compulsion, while it assumes obedience in its very language. 'Should' and 'would' follow, of course, the fortunes of 'shall' and 'will.'"

The Baby Boy Covered With Eczema and Cured by Dr. Chase.

Mrs. Jas. Brown of Molesworth, Ont., tells how her boy (eight months old) was cured of torturing Eczema. Mothers whose children are afflicted can write her regarding the great cure, Dr. Chase's Ointment. Her child was afflicted from birth and three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured him.

How Women Should Rest.

Dr. Sarah French Battey, of New York, tells to a reporter of the New York 'World' how busy women may easily find the rest they need. A body, she says, is at rest, when it ceases to move. The mind is at rest when it ceases to be disturbed or agitated. When we put ourselves into a condition of absolute quiet and refrain from moving we are resting our bodies.

Every motion of the body, however slight, necessitates wear and waste of its tissues. Waste produces exhaustion and we feel tired. We need rest and sleep to put our bodies in the most favorable condition for their repair.

To sustain health, equilibrium between waste and repair must be maintained. In wasting diseases, fevers and in many forms of serious illness the waste or chemical action is very much greater than the repair or building up, hence the subject becomes emaciated and feeble. To restore this equilibrium is to restore health.

During the daytime, when there has not been sufficient rest at night, you can rest at odd moments, and so make up in part the deficiency. When you have acquired the art of resting you will be astonished to see how greatly refreshed you will feel for having taken advantage of time heretofore wasted in idle wishing for rest.

The best way to take a short rest is to lie flat upon the back, with the arms outstretched. This position permits of free circulation of the blood, and thus the blood cells that come to a wornout part laden with fresh building material to deposit are unobstructed and can accomplish more repairing in a given time than if a cramped position were maintained.

Next to lying flat upon the back the reclining position is most restful. In this position the head, feet and all parts of the body should be supported, and perfect quiet and freedom from movement maintained. The body should be relaxed as perfectly as possible.

If one has opportunity for sitting upright only, then make the most of this position. Place a rest beneath the feet and relax all muscles, and keep perfectly still for the few minutes you have to rest. It is very easy to learn to fall asleep for a few moments at any time when one has mastered the art of relaxing one's muscles at will. Even standing one may rest if one schools one self to do so. The muscles of the upper part of the body may be relaxed, care thrown aside and rest invited even for a brief moment.

YOU ARE A VICTIM.

Medical Statistics Prove that Eighty out of every Hundred are Tainted with Catarrh.

Are you one of the eighty? Foul breath, pains over the eyes, dropping in the throat and headaches denote it. Have you these symptoms? Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder never disappoints in a cure.

"For years I was a victim of chronic catarrh. I had tried all kinds of cures, and had been treated by numbers of physicians, but no cure was effected until I had procured and used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. The first application gave me instant relief, and in an incredibly short time I was absolutely cured from this distressing and disgusting malady." James Headley, Dundee, N. Y. Sold by Garden Bros.

English as She is Spoke.

Mrs. Housekeeper the other day was doing her morning marketing. With her come the stranger who was spending a week or two within her gates. Standing by while she snapped the beans between her fingers to see that they were tender, parted the husks to make sure that the corn was ripe, pulled the pears out of their paper wrappings and conducted herself generally after the manner of a careful housewife, was the clerk, order book in hand and obsequiousness on his brow. The visitor began it with:

"These tomattoes look nice. Get some—there's a dear!"

To which Mrs. Housekeeper replied: "Why, certainly, if you like them!" Then, to the clerk: "How much are tomattoes this morning?"

"I'm not sure; I'll ask. "Jim," calling to a fellow-clerk, "how much is them termaiters?"

"I'll ask the bos. Say," passing the word

further back, "watcher gettin' for tomattoes today?"

"T'mats?" Oh, two baskets for a quarter, I guess."

Therefore, to please her guest, who loved "tomaytoes," Mrs. Housekeeper invested in some "amahtoes," and Jim, who was investigating the price of "tomatatoes" for the benefit of the fellow-clerk who wanted to know how to sell "termaiters," was enlightened as to what he should charge for "t'mats." And the bystander was left marvelling at the infinite variety of "English as she is spoke."—Chicago Chronicle

ONE HONEST MAN.

Dear Editor.—Please inform your readers, that if written to confidentially, I will mail, in a sealed letter, particulars of a genuine, honest, home cure, by which I was permanently restored to health and many vigor, after years of suffering from nervous debility, sexual weakness, night losses and weak shrunken parts. I was robbed and swindled by the quacks until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but thank heaven I am now well, vigorous and strong, and wish to make this certain means of cure known to all sufferers. I have nothing to sell and want no money, but being a firm believer in the universal brotherhood of man, I am desirous of helping the unfortunate to regain their health and happiness. I promise you perfect secrecy. Address with stamp, W. H. HULL, F.O. Box 50, St. Henri, Que.

Our Sleeping Rooms.

A physician of note says we hear a great talk about malaria nowadays, but there is more malaria to be found in most modern bedchambers than anywhere else. The ventilation of a bedchamber cannot be too carefully attended to; and, as says Horace Mann, "seeing the atmosphere is forty miles deep all around the globe, it is a useless piece of economy to breathe it more than once." Yet nine mothers out of ten will carefully close all the windows, "for fear of colds and night air," and leave two or three children to sleep in a stifling atmosphere, and see no connection between the colds and throat trouble they have, and the vitiated air she compels them to breathe night after night. Let the morning air and sunshine into the bedroom as soon as possible after the occupants have risen; and if there is no sunshine and it is not raining, let in the air. Do not make beds too soon after they are vacated. You may get your house tidied sooner, but it is neither cleanly nor healthful to snugly pack up bed clothing before the exhalations of the sleepers' bodies have been removed by exposure to the air.

FAIRLY STAGGERED.

Mr. Samuel Humphries, retired carriage manufacturer, Strathroy, Ont., says: "For a long time I have had kidney troubles and pain in the back. I could not straighten up and often had to sit down until the pain and weakness went away. I have taken one dose of Doan's Kidney Pills and must say they are a great kidney medicine, because they have entirely removed all pain from my back, curing the urinary difficulties and benefiting my general health in a remarkable degree."
