A Beaufort Wedding.

The residence of J. Lee Esq., was the scene of a very interesting event on June 30th when his daughter M. Estella was united in marriage to Mr. Scott Owens. Rev. Mr. Bearisto of Glassville performed the ceremony. The bride who was unattended looked very pretty in a pale pink cashmere trimmed with cream lace and ribbon and carried some beautiful flowers the gift of Mrs. R. T. Mack of Fredericton. After the ceremony about fifty guests partook of a sumptuous repast and all joined in wishing the young couple a long and prosperous journey through life. A list of the presents is as follows:—Dining room furniture and cutlery, from father and mother of bride; counterpane, towels and cake stand, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Lee; cut glass water set, Ben Lee; cane rocker, Mrs. B. Scovil (sister of bride); silver teaspoons, Lizzie Lee; cream pitcher, Gertie Lee; set irons, Mr. and Mrs. M. The Only Perfect Dyestuffs in the World.

The scientific preparation of dyestuffs and putting them up in proper shape for family dyeing has been brought to perfection by Wells & Richardson Co., who are proprietors of the celebrated Diamond Dyes. These popular dyes have banished from the homes of Canada madder, fustic, logwood, cochineal, and all other antiquated dyestuffs. The work of home dyeing is now done quickly and successfully by Diamond Dyes; the process is one that would astonish our grand parents.

Today millions all over the world use the scientific Diamond Dyes in preference to all others. Diamond Dyes commend themselves to all who use them, because they are the strongest, brightest and fastest, and the easiest to work with.

Diamond Dyes, like all other perfect and popular preparations, are largely imitated in style of package and the way they are put up. These imitations are worthless and adulterated dyes, ruinous to all kinds of goods and dangerous to handle. Great caution is advised when buying dyes for home use. Ask only for the "Diamond"; see that the name is on every packet.

The Supposed Murderer.

In the last issue THE DISPATCH gave a report of the finding of the mutilated remains of a man in New York. Recent investigations threw suspicion on a man named Martin Thorn and an accomplice, Mrs. Nack. Thorn afterward owned that he did the foul deed.

A week ago last Saturday, according to the confession, Thorn went early to the Woodstock house and hid in a closet on the upper floor. In his pocket he had a loaded revolver and beside him was a two pound package of plaster of paris. Then he waited for the arrival of Mrs. Nack and the victim, Guldensuppe. He took off his shoes so that no accidental noise could spoil his carefully laid plan.

It was between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning when Mrs. Nack and her unsuspecting victim, Guldensuppe, drove up in the surrey which has been mentioned in the previous stories of the mystery. Thorn heard Mrs. Nack ask Guldensuppe a few questions about the house and heard Guldensuppe's answers. Then Mrs. Nack said: "Well, don't wait for me. Go through the house and see how you like it."

"Oh, I'll just stay here till you come back," Guldensuppe replied. But Mrs. Nack was anxious not to see the actual transaction of the tragedy she had planned.

"No, don't wait," she urged, "go and see the rooms up stairs. I think you'll like them."

Thorn, concealed behind the door of the closet, heard Guldensuppe's steps on the stairs as he complied with the woman's request. Carelessly Guldensuppe opened door after door until he came to the closet where Thorn stood. As the door opened Thorn shot Guldensuppe right in the head. He died almost instantly.

Thorn took hold of the body by the shoulders, dragged it down stairs and shoved it into the bath tub. Then Thorn went to the ground floor, where Mrs. Nack was waiting.

"It's done," said Thorn.

"I know," replied Mrs. Nack. "I heard it."

"Now go back to the city," said Thorn to Mrs. Nack, "and come back here at exactly five o'clock. Everything will be ready."

All the conversation and much more is embodied in this alleged confession. Mrs. Nack obeyed Thorn's injunction and the murderer returned to the bath tub. He cut off the head with a razor and saw. Then he packed the head closely with plaster of paris until it looked like a block of white stone. Then he took the legs off and after that the lower part of the trunk. He wrapped it up in the cheesecloth, then in the oilcloth, tied the bundles neatly, lit a pipe and sat looking at his handiwork. He sat there until Mrs. Nack returned in the surrey. Carrying the bundles with him they both took the ferry boat across to New York. On the way over they threw the bundles into the river. How one portion of the body was found in the woods is not explained in the confession.

When Thorn was arraigned, despite the apparently damaging evidence of this confession, he had a perfectly self possessed appearance.

Among the facts which have come to light since Thorn's arrest are several which indicate a great lack of caution in the methods employed by the alleged murderer. Thorn is said to have been taken the watch and chain from Guldensuppe's clothing and to have pawned them. Despite rumors to the contrary he appears to have made absolutely no effort to leave the city and beyond shaving off his moustache to have taken but a few steps to prevent his detection.

To prevent pale and delicate children from lapsing into chronic invalids later in life, they should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla together with plenty of wholesome food and out-door exercise. What they need to build up the system is good red blood.

Warming Up.

Two ancient citizens were discussing the chilly characteristics of the late month of May. A number of young men stood about them in the hotel lobby and listened.

"Why," said one, "this has been the most remarkable May I can remember since—let me see, when was it?"

"Along in the '60s, wasn't it?" said the other.

"No, it was early in the '70s."

"I don't remember any cold May in the '70s."

"Well, there was one just the same."

"You're thinking of the '60s."

"No, I'm not. I said the '70s."

"Well, there wasn't any cold May in either the '60s or '70s."

"There wasn't?"

"No; the coldest May I can remember followed the cold winter of '57."

"Bah! I remember that May very well. It wasn't a cold one by any means."

"It was colder than anything in the '60s, or '70s."

"I say it wasn't. I've got the whole thing down in my scrapbook."

"Well, you'd better go home and refresh your memory."

"My memory is all right. Pity you've lost yours."

"You're a doddering old imbecile!"

"You're a superannuated old hulk!"

"That's right, gentlemen," chirruped a younger man, "keep right at it. The thermometer has already gone up several degrees!"

But they both breathed hard and walked away glaring.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mrs. S. James, Seaforth, suffered for years with what is called old people's rash. She was treated by many physicians without any result. Mr. Fear, the local druggist, recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, which relieved the irritation at once and speedily effected a permanent cure of the skin eruption. Mrs. James also says Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her of Itching Piles which she had been troubled with for years.

A clergymen famous for his begging abilities was once catechising a Sunday school. When comparing himself—the pastor of church—to a shepherd, and his congregation to the sheep, he put the following question to the children: "What does the shepherd do for the sheep?" To the amusement of the audience, a small boy in the front row piped out: "Shears them."

Word comes from all quarters that the nearest and most satisfactory dye for coloring the beard a brown or black is Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers.

"I'm a man of few words," said Jones, during a quarrel with Brown. "I know that," was the quick response. "Your wife won't allow you to talk back."

Prominent Business Man of Peterboro Cured of Eczema.

Mr. Thos. Gladman, book-keeper for Adam Hall, Esq., stove and tinware dealer, Peterboro, writes the following facts:—"I have been troubled for nine years with Eczema on my leg, and at times the itching was something terrible; tried many eminent doctors and was pronounced incurable. I had given up hopes of even being cured when I was recommended by Mr. Madill, druggist, to try a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am happy to testify that after using two boxes I am completely cured."
