THE CHAPLAIN'S RIDE.

The breathless watchers on the rocks could see that the chaplain gave the grey a single admonitory pat, when the intelligent animal with a supreme effort bounded straight toward the group of Indians. A few seconds later the grey reared so that his fine proportions stood out in clear profile against the dark plains, as the chaplain reined him suddenly in. The next instant he whirled to the right, and under cover of the dust cloud thus raised the rider eluded the sight of the two Indians on his left as he brushed with irresistible force past the other Indian, who vainly tried to grasp and tear Weston's lithe form from his secure seat in the saddle as he swept out into the clear space of the plain beyond.

An irresistible shout of encouragement to the pursued and of derision to the pursuers rose from the group on the bluffs, as the discouraged Indians gathered themselves together and made a desperate effort to overtake the flying horseman. But it was a stern chase, as sailors would say, and a losing game for the Indians. If the grey and Weston could only hold out 15 minutes longer the safety of both messenger and picnic party would be assured.

But what Harry Weston thought of as he rode on toward the fort was not of his own peril or safety, but of Cecil Grangely's preservation, for which he had devoutly prayed and which now he hoped was effected.

It was shortly after this episode that the grizzled old major, who happened to be strolling out by the portal of the fort that looked on toward the mountains, saw a big horse galloping in from the plain. A few moments more and the noble grey staggered in the gate, Chaplain Weston tumbled off his horse, spoke a few hurried words to the major, and then fell over in a death faint. A few minutes later still and two troops of cavalry trotted out of that same gate on their swift journey out toward the hills.

Meanwhile the little company on the bluff had no time to follow the chaplain in their thoughts, though, perhaps Cecil Grangely did, as soon as the fight with the Indians was upon them in dead earnest. Almost grudgingly the troopers, whose supply of ammunition was limited, returned the fire of the Indians. Slowly, but surely, the latter seemed to be closing in upon the devoted people from the fort when suddenly, just before the sunset shadows began to steal over the plain, two troops of cavalry were observed approaching swiftly across the open until, dividing into two squadrons as they drew near the cliffs, they swept forward on the gallop up to a point where they could dismount and send their skirmishers up among the rocks, whence the redskins were now scurrying like so many wild beasts seeking their lairs.

In a short time there was not an Indian (so far as the troopers could describe) remaining within a radius of a mile or two. The greetings between rescuers and rescued were most glad and hearty. Soon the "recall" was sounded and the whole party were on their way back to the fort.

When the fort was reached the colonel at once betook himself to the quarters of the chaplain, where the assistant surgeon was still attending Weston.

"My boy, you're a soldier!" was all that the bluff warrior said, but Weston blushed like a girl as he realized that that was the highest compliment that the old veteran could pay any one.

It is from that occasion that Chaplain Weston has always dated the real beginning of his success of a religious worker among the men of the 12th cavalry. To be sure, he had already gained the respect of the rank and file by his attention to the needs of Private Higgins; but by his dash and grit on the day of the picnic he had convinced the commissioned officers, once for all, that there was in him the stern, resolute stuff of which soldiers are made. That deed of daring effectually opened the hearts of the garrison to the young soldier of the cross. The attendance at church services gradually increased, opportunities of quiet, yet effective ministry to individuals were multiplied as time went by.

Yes, Harry Weston always considers that "the chaplain's ride"—which yet lingers as a gallant memory at the old fort—was blessed by Providence as a most efficient means to the accomplishment of good work in that particular field where the parishioners were all blue clad, where a saddle is often a pulpit, and the texts are as frequently deeds as doctrines.

And Cecil Weston agrees with him in that opinion.

"It's the devil for any one to tell me a secret, for it is sure to come out in print."—HAZLITT.

And now comes one Mrs. Charlotte Smith who protests against the nomination as mayoralty candidates of a couple of apparently innocent men whose only crime seems to be that they are bachelors. Mrs. Smith says:—"Bachelors have always been failures as chief magistrates and legislators in this and every other country. Both your candidates are bachelors, and bachelor politicians are narrow-minded, selfish, egotistical and cowardly. "David B. Hill of New York, who posed as the bachelor Presidential candidate, is a typical illustration of this class of men. He is morally selfish." She suggests the formation of anti-bachelor clubs, and adds: "We have too many temporarily married politicians on the market." The woman has one husband, if she has not chased the poor duffer into his grave at the point of her tongue, as so many of those women do, and she might leave the rest of us alone. There is a set of women in this world who make it a business to find fault with men. The energetic and garrulous Smith female, knowing that David B. Hill neither smokes nor drinks fires the brickbats of her eloquence at him because he won't get married. The poor, downtrodden woman? The poor dowdiest den nothing! It is about time we fellows started on a campaign for the emancipation of men. For the last 20 years women have gradually been taking men's occupations from them and reducing wages by this competition and if a man can't get employment at good wages how can he support a wife?

Two Perfect Colors Found Only in Diamond Dyes.

Perfection in color or shade is sure to captivate the hearts of the ladies, who are always unerring judges.

The lovely pink produced by the Diamond Dyes is a discovery that has gladdened the hearts of thousands. This Diamond Dye Fast Pink for Wool is clear, pure, brilliant and fast as a rock. One package gives a magnificent shade of pink on two pounds of goods—silk or wool; a medium shade on three pounds; or a light and delicate shade on four pounds.

Attention is also called to the Diamond Dye Fast Light Blue for Wool. This is a dye that gives a color far surpassing the light blues produced by European dyers.

Ladies having soiled white or cream dresses made from cashmere, nun's cloth or serge can have them dyed in rich shades of Pink or Light Blue and fitted for evening wear. This making of new dresses out of soiled, faded and cast-off garments means a great saving in dollars to thousands of families in Canada.

The Toad.

The toad lives ten to forty years, does not begin to produce young until the fourth year, but then lays over 1000 eggs a year. It has lived two years without food, but cannot live long under water. It never takes lead or motionless food. It takes its food by means of its tongue alone, and it operates this so rapidly that the eye cannot follow its motions. It captures and devours bees, wasps, yellow jackets, ants, beetles, worms, spiders, snails, bugs, grasshoppers, crickets, weevils, caterpillars, moths, etc. The stomach that doesn't flinch at yellow jackets, wasps, blister beetles and click beetles, or pinch bugs, would seem to be prepared for anything in the insect line, and it doubtless is. In twenty-four hours the toad consumes enough food to fill its stomach four times. A single toad will in three months devour over 10,000 insects. If every ten of these would have done one cent damage the toad has saved $10. Evidently the toad is a valuable friend to the farmer, gardener and fruit grower, and can be made especially useful in the greenhouse, garden and berry patch.

AWAY DOWN EAST.

From east to west people have heart trouble. This causes violent headaches, neuralgia, nerve trouble and prostrations. Says Mrs. Somers, of Moncton, N. B.: "I tried many remedies but never found anything to give me such prompt relief as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done. I suffered from the above symptoms, but now gladly testify to the cure these wonderful pills have made in my case, and I hope all sufferers will try them."

The imagination is a divine gift. It should not deal in facts, nor be employed to establish facts. Its proper province is art, and there its influence should operate like sweet music, which awakens our emotions and makes us forget the cause by which these emotions are awakened.

PROVIDENCE THANKED.

It is with pleasure that I recommend B. B. B. for the cure of indigestion and impure blood. I had tried many medicines but receive no benefit until I thank Providence. I was advised B. B. B. and it was with perfect success.
