AN EXTRA CLEVER FELONY.

The Story Told by an Ex Chief Inspector of Scotland Yard.

For pearly half a century the Americans have been our masters as experts in all the shady byways of crime.

We seldom hear of the cleverest rogues belonging to this country "bringing off" anything on a large scale in America, or indeed in any other country but their own; unless it be on the turf or in connection with it: whereas the American forger, robber, swindler or sharper seems to have us at his mercy at almost any time, and in "his own smart way."

It is in connection with their exceeding cleverness I am about to relate one of the most audacious ventures.

In the year of the First Exhibition (1851), London was flooded with these gentry, bank ers, brokers, merchants and others were being "had" by the dozen; and to make matters worse few captures were effected.

Our police had only been in existence some twenty years, and was chiefly recruited from country towns and villages; consequently the "force," with few-very few-exceptions, was composed of men totally unable to cope with the smartness of the Yank.

True the city possessed Mike Hayden, and Great Scotland Yard Charley Field (Dickens Inspector Bucket) and a few others; but they were simply good at very ordinary cases. They had their business to learn, and the Americans taught it them with a vengenance: but not until the clever rascals had successfully taken their departure from our shores. Then, and not till then, the detectives knew "how it was done."

By a singular—some might feel inclined to call it a plural-coincidence, two of the wealthiest jewelers in London-one in the city, the other in the West End-had the upper parts of their premises "To Let." By another singular or plural coincidence application was made on the same day, and at the same hour, to the occupiers of the premises for the first floor; and in each case by Americans. The references proving highly satisfactory, possession was taken in each case. As the proceedings adopted by both parties were exactly similar, it will be sufficient if I confine my remarks to the West End establish-

The firm of Reuben & Co., was consider- The Great Medicine Is Tri ed the principal of its kind, and was patron ized by the leading families of aristocracy. Its stock of precious stones was estimated in value at many thousands of pounds. In addition to the gorgeous display in the windows, the effect was heightened by the display of the Royal Arms over the door, with the motto, "Honi Soit qui Mal y Pense," thereon. This motto evidently was accepted and believed in by the great jewelers; for, upon Rixon & Co., the great American bankers' agents, taking possession, they were immediately wai ed upon by the principal, who tried his best to bring about a good stroke of business. He was, however, only partially successful, as Rixon & Co., only indulged to the extent of a twenty pound diamond ring. They were good enough, how ever, to inform him that before they left London they would get him to supply one of the largest orders on record. Mr Reuben was delighted, and informed them that anything that lay in his power was at their entire service.

So matters went on-mutual friendships sprang up, Rixon & Co., were invited to inspect the stock of Reuben & Co., and in return Reuben & Co., were invited to inspect the books of Rixon & Co., the eminent American bankers' agents.

Reuben & Co. were astonished at the "big" business done by their tenants, and congratulated themselves upon having on their premises such men of mark.

The business transacted by the tradesmen during the exhibition was something extra ordinary, and taxed their time and energies to the utmost. This was probably the cause of Reuben & Co. taking little notice of the few callers to Rixon & Co. These simply numbered two; but as they paid several visits daily, and much fuss was made when they took their departure, it seemed as if important transactions were being carried on. And so there were; but not in the way anticipated by the eminent jewelers.

Messrs. Rixon & Co. had now been in possession of the first floor nearly three months. Quarter day was approaching, and of course it would be necessary to hand over the rent to the jewelers. As they were not quite in a position to do this they decided upon action of a different kind.

morning. No one belonging to the firm slept | ed on him with approval. Naturally kindon the premises, so that the Americans had hearted himself, it pleased him to see this the house to themselves. For some time trait in others. But his honest eyes were past massive trunks and strong handbags had misty as he thought of his own noisy crowd been delivered to the occupiers of the first of youngsters at home, and contrasted them floor, which to the eyes of Reuben & Co. seemed as if business was steadily on the in- and gesticulated, but made no sound.

crease up above. One Monday morning, on the manager jaunt, for they all had satchels. and wore a ceiling sufficiently large to admit of the passage of a man's body. He saw everything at a glance.

The first floorers-Rixon & Co.-were expert American thieves.

It was impossible for them to gain access to the shop in any other way, as the walls and flooring were composed of plates of steel. The only weak point was the ceiling, and this the clever rogues easily found out. Not a vestige of the property the place contained on the Saturday night was visible on the Monday morning-the clearance was perfect.

The police were communicated with, with the result that information reached them of a similar robbery having taken place in the city; and in a precisely ingenious kind of way; and what was more extraordinary still-exactly at the same time. There was no getting away from the solid fact. The four men were accomplished American robbers, working in concert.

The next step taken was to call upon the references. These gentlemen, who were Americans also, had not opened their offices on the Monday morning; so that a liberty was taken by breaking open their door. On one of the desks was a slip of paper containing the following:

"Being suddenly called away, we will feel obliged to any one taking the slightest interest in our affairs if they will kindly call upon Rixon & Co., care of Reuben & Co., the celebrated West End jewelers, who will afford them every information.

"FREUHLER & CO., "Bankers, London and U. S." Needless to say all got clear away with their booty.

some asylum, and were going with their teacher for a vacation trip. He couldn't help watching them, and nodding to them as he passed through the car; they returned his greeting in kind, being cheerful little souls, and he began to look forward with regret to the time of parting.

At length, at one of the rural stations, the gentleman kissed the young ones hurriedly all round, and got off the train. They leaned out of the windows and waved enthusiastic farewells as the car moved on, then the biggest "little girl" took a brown paper bag from her satchel, and distributed crackers in even shares. The conductor, in passing, smiled and nodded as usual, as the little girl held out the paper bag to him.

"Do have some," she said.

He started back in sheer amazement. "What!" he exclaimed; "you can talk, then all of you?'

"Of course!" they cried in chorus.

The conducter sank into the seat across the aisle. "I thought you were deaf and dumb?"

"Oh, how funny!" cried one the rosycheeked boys. "Why, that was Uncle Jack, poor fellow. He was borne that way. We wouldn't talk while he was with us; it might hurt his feelings, you know. Hello! here's our station. Come on, girls!' and the five trooped noisily out, and waved their handkerchiefs from the platform as the train moved on .- Belle Moses in January St.

Knoxville Tribune: The largest farm in the United States, and probably in the world is situated in the south-western part of Louisiana. It extends 100 miles east and west. It was purchased in 1883 by a syndicate of Northern capitalists, by whom it is still operated. At the time of its purchase its 1,500,000 acres was a vast pasture for cattle belonging to a few dealers in that country. Now it is divided into pasture or ranches, existing every six miles. The fencing is said to have cost $50,000. The land is best adapted for rice, sugar, corn and cotton. A tract, say half a mile wide is taken and an engine is placed on each side. The engines are portable, and operate a cable attached to four plows. By this arrangement 30 acres are gone over in a day with the labor of ouly three men. There is not a single draught horse on the entire place, if we exempt those used by the herders of cattle, of which there are 16,000 head on the place. The Southern Pacific Railway runs for 36 miles through the farm. The company has three steamboats operating on the waters of the estate, of which 300 house, bank, shipyard and rice mills, miles are navi-
