Death of Mrs. Hallett.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hallett, the mother of Ephraim, Thomas and Moses Hallett and Mrs. Alexander Rideout, all of Upper Brighton, and Charles Hallett of the far west, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Alexander Rideout, on the 2nd inst, aged 83 years, 11 months, 30 days, and some hours. She was the mother of 8 children, 49 grand children, and 25 great grandchildren!

One daughter, Mrs. Rideout, remained to her to perform the duties of nursing and the care required during the many months in which she suffered the acute agonies of a virulent cancer of the face.

Mr. Rideout kindly provided a home with its conveniences and gave much attention to afford her what comfort she could obtain from the irritating nature of her affliction. Her three resident sons afforded all the assistance in their power to soothe and allay her pains; but upon the daughter devolved the arduous task of tedious watchings and all but constant applications so much needed under her distressing circumstances.

The last stages of her sickness were very severe and as quite a portion of the cheek was destroyed, administering sustenance was very difficult.

The writer saw her a month or so previous to her disease and, notwithstanding her inability to rest, she appeared to be composed and patient, enduring her sufferings without complaint, wishing only for release from the dissolving tenement.

Her hope of future rest and blessedness was firm and quite undisturbed by doubts or the terrors of mortality. Mrs. Hallett had been well known in the community as a good neighbor, and quite an extensive and desirable nurse, and a professed Christian. She was of the former Free Christian Baptist order.

A noticeable feature of the congregation was the men and women of years, and prominent men from business circles, showing that she was not unknown to them nor without respect from them.

Though death is always saddening, yet many hearts were gladdened that the sufferer was delivered from the strife of disease and had entered into rest.

The address from the pulpit, on the occasion was from the words, "No man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself" whether we live therefore or die we are the Lord's." Ministers present, Rev. C. H. Orser, M. P. Orser and your correspondent.

When the children grind their teeth, have a ravenous appetite, yet don't seem to thrive, give them Dr. Low's Worm Syrup. It will clear out every worm without harming the child. Price 25c.

TWO-WELL KNOWN CITIZENS

Pass Away Since the Last Issue of This Paper.

Since the last issue of THE DISPATCH two of Woodstock's best known citizens have gone hence. Mr. George Connell after an illness of some weeks passed away at his residence on Connell street the night of the 8th, aged 81. Deceased was born in Northampton, a son of the late Charles Connell, and brother of the late Hon. Charles Connell. He was one of the oldest barristers of the province. Admitted attorney in 1840, the same year that Mr. L. P. Fisher began his active law career, Mr. Connell survived all of his class but two or three. He practised law for some years, but later on went into the steamboat business. He built the following boats, the Carleton, the John Warren and the Ben Beveridge. For some years past, Mr. Connell retired from active business. His wife a Miss Fisher before her marriage, pre-deceased him. He leaves three children, Allison B. Connell, Q. C., of Woodstock, Max Connell, C. E., of Brazil, and Mrs. John Stewart. The funeral was largely attended, Rev. C. T. Phillips officiating.

On Thursday night Mr. Bartholomew Lynch died. He had been in failing health for many years, and several recent bereavements in his family hastened the end. Mr. Lynch was born in Andover, Victoria Co., in 1823. Later on he lived in Grand Falls, afterwards removing to Woodstock where he taught the Catholic school for a number of years. After retiring from this profession he took up general trading business, which he continued until a few years ago. Deceased was a member of the town council at one time and filled the position of chairman of the waterworks committee, when that system was under construction. His widow, whose maiden name was Miss Kearney survives, and two sons, Thomas of the Custom House, here, and George who lives in Boston. The funeral on Sunday from St. Gertrude's church was attended by a large number of citizens.

CHAPS AND CHILBLAINS

Come with the cold weather, but can readily be cured by the application of Hayward's Yellow Oil, the best remedy for external and internal use made.

How Rats Multiply.

In this city rats are found in considerable numbers, the brown rats predominating on the ships and wharfs, the black rats in the stores and warehouses, and the Alexandrian rats being limited to the holds of the ships that come from the southern ports. Weasels and ferrets are bred to keep down their numbers. The fecundity of the rats is so great that in a few years they would overwhelm a whole city if they were not kept down by artificial means. One pair will rear four or five families of 10 to 15 to each litter in one year, and in six months these young ones are ready to produce. Thus one couple in the course of three years could raise a population of several hundred thousand if not restrained by any destructive measures.—Ex.

ENGLAND'S POLICY.

She Cannot Disarm Just Now.

The inauguration dinner of the newly elected Lord Mayor of London is always the occasion for an important speech from the Prime Minister.

Lord Salisbury spoke as follows at the banquet last Wednesday evening.

Turning to the crisis with France, the premier remarked: "We have had quite recently to consider whether the question of a European war was not very near. But with great interest and consideration, the result has turned out, happily to the great judgment and common sense displayed by France under circumstances of unusual difficulty, which, I think, have relieved Europe of a very dangerous and threatening storm."

"While matters were in suspense, the government was necessarily forced to take precautions, that it should not be taken unawares. These precautions were most prompt and effective, but the immediate necessity for them has passed off."

"There has been some surprise on both sides of the channel at the fact that these preparations have not suddenly ceased, but it is impossible to stop at a moment's notice."

After referring to the various rumors of intended action arising out of these preparations including the seizure of Syria and Crete and the declaration of a protectorate over Egypt—the latter allusion being greeted with immense cheering—Lord Salisbury continued:

"I am sorry to say I cannot rise to the height of the aspirations indicated by the cheering of the audience. I do not venture to prophesy. If we are forced into a position we do not occupy we can't say what may occur, but we are well satisfied with the existing state of things, and we do not think any cause has arisen to necessitate effort on our part at present to modify it."

"The position causes occasional friction; but, taking the situation as a whole and considering the feeling of other people, as well as our own, we can reasonably rest for the present with the existing state of affairs."

"I must not be understood as meaning Great Britain's position in Egypt is the same now as it was before the fall of Omdurman; but we earnestly hope that circumstances will not make it necessary materially to modify that position, as we are convinced the world would not get on so peaceably as now."

Referring again to the war preparations and asking his hearers to look at the state of the world, Lord Salisbury observed:

"The Czar has invited a congress to provide for the disarmament of the world, but, while we offer our heartiest tribute to his motives and are willing to assist and sympathize in every way until the happy day when his aspirations are crowned with success, we must still provide precautions needful to counteract the dangers surrounding us. In some respects this era, this great epoch in the history of man, is marked by unhappy omens. It is the first year in which the mighty force of the American republic has been introduced among nations whose dominions are expanding and whose instruments, to a certain extent, are war."

"I am not implying the slightest blame. Far from it. I am not refusing sympathy to the American republic in the difficulties through which it has passed, but no one can deny that its appearance among factors Asiatic, at all events, and possibly in European diplomacy, is a grave and serious event, which may not conduce to the interests of peace, though, I think, in any event, it is likely to conduce to the interests of Great Britain. (Cheers)"

"But what has been impressed upon us is that the subject matter of the war is terribly prevalent on all sides. We see nations decaying whose government is so bad that it can neither maintain the power of self-defence nor retain the affection of its subjects; and when this occurs there are always neighbors impelled by some motive—it may be the highest philanthropy, or it may be the natural desire of empire—to contest as to who shall be heir to the falling nation; and that is the cause of war."

Lord Salisbury then alluded to the rapidity and unexpectedness with which wars break out, and said:

"If Great Britain should ever permit her sea defences to weaken, her whole empire would clatter to the ground. It is, therefore, impossible, in the present state and temper of the world, to intermit our naval and military precautions."

He concluded by repudiating "all suggested that our preparations mean that the country is animated by the lust of conquest or a love of war," declaring that Great Britain was only "resolved to maintain the empire Britons have received from their forefathers and to support the peace which is the glory and sustenance of our empire."

A great ovation from the entire assembly marked the conclusion of the premier's speech.

Miss Annie Gillespie, Orillia, Ont., writes: "I had a bad cold and severe cough for some time and could not get rid of it until I used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which quickly cured me." Price 25c.

"It's all up with us now," he remarked as he raised the umbrella.

"No," she replied, "you mean it is all over between us."

And if it was not laughter that shook the ribs of the umbrella it must have been the wind.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Heto (getting up)—Anyone down stairs, James?

Valet—Yes, sir. There's two reporters, sir: and a man and woman with a baby they have named after you, sir; and a young woman waiting to be kissed, sir.—Life

Old friend—Your plan is a most excellent one; but do you think your wife will agree to it?

Married man—Oh, yes! I'll tell her some one else suggested it, and I'll call it an idiotic idea.—New York Weekly.

HUGH HAY & SON.

OXFORD TRIPLE HEATER FOR WOOD.

This heater solves the problem—with a minimum of fuel it produces a maximum of heat. It uses no more fuel than a box stove, but it circulates the air of the whole house. Without the expense of the hot-air furnace, it provides conditions exactly similar. The air may be taken from out of doors and circulated through the tubular linings of the stove and thrown fresh into the house, or the air of the house itself may be circulated at the will of the operator.

The work done by this stove is incredible to any one who has not seen it operate. Will heat three times as much space as the ordinary stove, with less consumption of fuel than any stove in the market.

As to construction the heater is made to last. Although seemingly a modern sized stove, it weighs over 400 lbs. We have sold several of these stoves and they are giving perfect satisfaction. We are now heating our store with one of these stoves. Call and see it work.

We also have a full line of Cooks, Parlor Franklins. Our prices are as low as the lowest, and every stove we sell we guarantee. We would be pleased to have the public call and look our line over which we now have on exhibition, as we are sure we can please you in style, quality and price.
