

WEAK, NERVOUS WOMEN

Suffering from palpitation of the heart, dizzy or faint spells, watery blood, etc., can be readily cured.

A Manitoba Lady Tells About Her Case.

There is no need whatever for so many women to be the subject of faint spells, heart and nerve weakness, anaemia, or any of those health destroying ailments peculiar to her sex. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills regulate the heart beat and make it strong and full, tone the nerves, enrich the blood, and relieve the pain and weakness from which so many women suffer.

Mrs. Alexander Setter, of Pigeon Bluff, Man., writes an account of her case as follows: "I have great pleasure in giving my experience of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. For about ten years I was troubled with throbbing and fluttering of the heart. I tried five doctors and several remedies but none of them did me much good. Lately I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and bought two boxes. Before I started using them I could not do my house work and gave myself up to die, as I thought I would never be cured. Now I feel really splendid since taking the pills, do my work, enjoy my meals and feel as if there was something in life worth living for."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, sold by all druggists at 50c. a box or 3 boxes for $1.25. T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, Ont.

You'll Regret It

RAILROAD FARES IN AUSTRALIA.

Proposals for a Uniform Rate Regardless of Distance.

While the legislation of the Australian colonies is patterned upon English precedent it by no means slavishly follows. In fact it often leads it. A novel proposition in regard to transportation by rail that is being discussed and may before long enter into the sphere of practical politics in that of the colonies is calculated to give conservative hereditary legislators a severe shock. The proposition is that a uniform rate should be charged on railways for both freight and passengers irrespective of distance. The proposal looks at first a little startling but the more it is examined the more feasible it appears. Its advocates propose to carry a passenger one journey as far as he likes to go for one shilling (25 cents) and to haul freight from any point in the interior to the seaboard or vice versa for 5 shillings ($1.25) a ton. It must be remembered that the railways, as also the telegraphs are owned and operated by the Government. The lands also of the interior which are more valuable than those of the coast for wool growing are principally owned by the Government and let on lease to the sheep owners. The rental of these lands is small, owing to the long and expensive land carriage to the point of shipment for wool mutton and beef and the lessees would willingly pay largely enhanced rentals for the proposed reduction in freight. Estimates have been prepared from which the advocates of the new proposal claim that the enhanced revenue from the Government lands would more than compensate the deficiency in operating the Government railroads.

They claim too, that it would be the most effective way of settling the interior of the country in small holdings which has always been a difficulty, as the people congregate in the large cities in numbers altogether out of proportion to those who populate the back country. As regards passenger traffic it is claimed that as the railways are the property of the public a man who lives 500 miles from the seat of government the courts of justice and the markets should pay no more than the man who lives ten miles away for travelling to them by the railway in which as citizens they are equal shareholders. The existing railways have been built with money bestowed on the public security, and the advocate of this scheme of transportation at cheap uniform rates contend that if the enhanced rentals of the public land will pay interest on the public debt and also create a sinking fund that will in time wipe it out there can be no possible objection to the rather startling innovation they wish to introduce.

The proposition is not so Utopian as it at first appears, mainly owing to the fact that the railways already belong to the public, as also do the interior lands; and if it can be established beyond doubt that the enhanced returns from the latter will make up for the loss in operating the former the great majority of the population will undoubtedly be largely the gainers. The experiment if tried will be of interest, not only to Australians but to the world at large.—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Cleveland And The Social Line

Princeton society, like the society of all University towns, draws a sharp line between its collegiate population and what are called the "natives," or less learned or worthy set. Not long ago two children whose parents are not of the collegiate set, came over, by invitation, to play with Ruth and Mariou Cleveland. The play was reaching an exciting stage when the children of one of the college professors happened in, also to play with the little Cleveland girls. Little Ruth invited the newcomers to join in the play, whereat the elder child paused and said that her mother did not allow her to play with the children.

"Why not?" asked little Ruth.
"Because they do not belong to our kind of people," said the aristocratic young miss.
"Why," answered Ruth, "we have lots of fun—they come here and we go over to their house."

The play had received an awkward interruption and Mrs. Cleveland, noticing that it had flagged, inquired the reason. Ruth told her mother the objection of the newcomers.

Mrs. Cleveland approached the aristocratic children, and in her kindest and sweetest way said to them:

"You must not disobey your parents, my dears. But the children have come to spend the afternoon with Marion and Ruth," and bidding the little aristocrats good-by she invited them to "come again some other time." Then Mrs. Cleveland set about to heal the wounded feelings of her children's playmates, and certainly no woman ever succeeded better. As a result of tact the once objectionable children are received everywhere, thanks to the common-sense for which Mrs. Cleveland is noted.

French military authorities have a high opinion of M. Ader's flying machine, recently tried at the camp of Satry. The "Avion," as the machine is called, is said to be a true flying machine, with large wing like those of a bat, made of silk on bamboo frames. They are worked by a steam-condensing engine of great power for its weight and size. The weight of the motor is about 7 pounds per horse-power. The total weight of the "Avion" is about 1,100 pounds. The rest of the machinery is of hollow steel, rigid and light.

TO HONOUR THE DEAD.

Where The Best Monuments And Head Stones Are Found.

Men in all times have been moved by the laudable desire to perpetuate the memory of their ancestors and in our day every family whose record is honest and honourable, erects monuments at the graves of its founders.

The idea of cemetery adornment is growing rather than declining, and people are becoming critical as to the artistic designs of the monuments they erect. No one likes to leave, unmarked, the grave of a dear relative.

We have a first class establishment for supplying monuments and tomb stones, in Woodstock, in the firm of J. Gallagher & Son. For some sixteen years Mr. Gallagher has been doing business in Woodstock, and the number of monuments that he has put in place is large. He works principally in Italian and Vermont marble, importing from the quarries in the rough. Anyone visiting his shop today will notice two very handsome monuments in Italian marble, costing some $300. They are creditable bits of work to be put forth from a Woodstock shop. This firm has won a good name for their work. They supply the up river market as far as the head of the river, and their output goes to many other parts of the province. There are in stock now, a large variety of monuments and headstones. Some mountain dark stones are especially attractive. Mr. Gallagher will sell the best goods as cheaply as any other concern in the business. He has a large stock on hand, and now is the time for the purchaser to look for a bargain. He particularly invites inspection. He has as boss workman A. L. Tremlett, who learned his trade in Newfoundland in 1887, and has been working with Mr. Gallagher for the past four seasons. Any work ordered at Gallagher's establishment will be found to be well and thoroughly done, and the most reasonable prices are asked. More than this, any orders will be filled, most promptly. The shop is on the left side of the street just south of the Meduxnakik bridge.

Accepting Favors Gracefully.

There are a great many friendships ruined by the unwillingness on one side or the other to accept favors. Two schoolgirl friends united by many congenial ties are forced apart because the poorer one foolishly thinks that she should make some return for the pretty gifts, the party invitations, the tickets to concerts or matinees which her friend loves to remember her with. She knows that she is unable to make any return, so refuses the good times, and by doing so not only deprives her friend of the keenest delight, but herself of many opportunities for pleasure, and the family circle at home of the recital of the fresh and novel experience which contact with the world outside of her home would surely bring her.

Favors are of many sorts. It sometimes happens that a wealthy woman may wish to send a girl to college, to help her in her music, to encourage her in her desire for an art education, she may give her books, take her out with her and give her opportunities for hearing great artists. When a girl has such favors offered her she should accept them gracefully, and with a clear conscience. The favors are not all on one side, her bright face and enthusiastic appreciation mean much to the woman who is fortunate enough to be able to dispense favors.

Do not, then, let any of us be afraid to accept favors, and do not let the offer of them spoil our friendship with the would-be givers. Rather let us pass them along; if flowers are sent us let us share them with others; if books are given us let us send any duplicates we may have to others less fortunate. We cannot all afford to give lavishly, but we can all afford to be thoughtfully generous.

An American has been granted a patent for an electrical apparatus for the protection of safes. This is on the alarm plan, and comprises a safe provided with contact points, an electric conductor, magnet armature, switches battery and alarm box, a bell, and suitable wire connections for transmitting the alarm when the safe door is opened by the unwelcome prowler. The burglar opens the safe door, and thereby calls the watchman to arrest him.

A useful invention is the electric linen-maker. The linen is moistened with water or salt water, and a silver stamp is pressed upon it. A current of electricity is sent from the silver stamp through the linen, and prints it with a salt of silver. The current is then reversed, and the silver is reduced from the salt, thus forming permanent characters in the cloth.

The other night, while it was pitch dark, a ship called the Ino entered the Tyne from Hamburg, and, as usual, the Custom-house launch ran alongside. "Hoy," shouted the officer, "what ship is that?" "Ino," came the reply. "I know jolly well you know," retorted the officer, "out I want to know."
