JUST IN TIME.

Heart Disease had Him at Death's Door—Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Worked Almost a Miracle.

C. A. Campbell, Mountiron, Minn., writes: "I laid just at the point of death from most acute heart disease, and with hardly a hope that any remedy could reach my case I procured a bottle of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. I believe this great remedy got to me just in time. The first dose gave me great relief inside of thirty minutes, and before I had taken a bottle I was up from what I thought was my death bed. I was cured, and I consider my cure almost miraculous.—Sold by Garden Bros.

Color in Flags.

Through the policy of military authorities in using less glaring colors in uniforms has been very marked of late years, red remains the most popular color for national standards. Of twenty-five countries, nineteen have flags with red in them, the list including the United States, England, France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Spain, Denmark, Belgium, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Mexico, Chili, Portugal, Venezuela, and last, but not least, Cuba.

The countries which have blue as an element of their flags are the United States, Russia, France, England, Holland, Ecuador, Sweden, Chili, Venezuela, Portugal and Cuba. Three countries have black as one of the elements of their flags, Germany, Belgium and China, but Germany is the only one of the three which has black and white together. There are five countries (excluding from consideration Ireland, the familiar flag of which is not officially recognized among the national standards) which have green as a color; Brazil, the flag of which is green chiefly; Mexico, Italy, Egypt and Persia. There are nine countries in which the flag is partly of yellow. These countries are Austria, Spain, Belgium, Egypt, Sweden, China, Persia, Brazil and Venezuela. Countries with flags partly white are the United States, France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Italy, six of the seven chief powers. There is no white in the national standard of England, but the British naval flag has a white background. Other countries having white in their flags are Switzerland, Turkey, Persia, Japan, Mexico, Holland, Denmark, Portugal, Cuba, Chili and Ecuador, the flag of which is nearer white than any other country, being made up of two parallel white columns, between which is a column of blue upon which there are white stars.

A RELIABLE OFFER.

Honest Help Free To Men.

The Woodstock Dispatch is authorized to state by Mr. D. Graham, Box 133, Hagersville, Ont., that any man who is nervous and debilitated or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from overwork, excess or abuse, such as nervous debility, exhausted vitality, lost vigor, unnatural drains and losses, lack of development, etc., can write to him in strict confidence and receive FREE OF CHARGE full instructions how to be thoroughly cured.

Mr. Graham himself was for a long time a sufferer from above troubles and after trying in vain many advertised remedies, electric belts, etc., became almost entirely discouraged and hopeless. Finally he confided in an old Clergyman, whose kind and honest advice enabled him to speedily obtain perfect and permanent cure. Knowing to his own sorrow that so many poor sufferers are being imposed upon by unscrupulous quacks, Mr. Graham considers it his duty as an honest man and a firm believer in christian sympathy and kindness, to give his fellow men the benefit of his experience and assist them to a cure. Having nothing to sell, he asks for no money, the proud satisfaction of having done a great service to one in need, he rightly considers an ample reward for his trouble. If you write to Mr. Graham you can rely upon being cured and upon absolute secrecy as well.

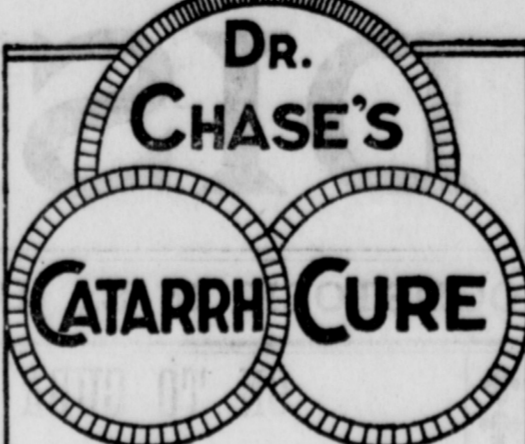

Address as above, enclosing a stamp and refer to the (Woodstock Dispatch.) No attention however will be given to those writing out of mere curiosity, therefore state that you really need a cure.

Spain's Former Power.

Macaulay drew this picture of the power of Spain 300 years ago, that it is interesting to recall at this juncture: The empire of Philip II was undoubtedly one of the most powerful and splendid that ever existed in the world. It is no exaggeration to say that during several years his power over Europe was greater than even that of Napoleon. In America his dominions extended on both sides of the equator into the temperate zone. There is reason to believe that his annual revenues amounted, in the season of his greatest power, to a sum ten times as large as that which England yielded to Elizabeth. He had a standing army of 50,000 troops, when England did not have a single battalion in constant pay. He held, what no other prince in modern times has held, the dominion both of the land and sea. During the greater part of his reign he was supreme on both elements. His soldiers marched up to the capital of France; his ships menaced the shores of England. Spain had what Napoleon desired in vain—ships, colonies and commerce. She long monopolized the trade of America and of the Indian ocean. All the gold of the West and all the spices of the East were received and distributed by her. Even after the defeat of the Armada, the English statesmen continued to look with great dread on the maritime power of Philip. Whoever wishes to be well acquainted with the morbid anatomy of governments, whoever wishes to know how great states may be made feeble and wretched, should study the history of Spain.

"It's the devil for any one to tell me a secret, for it is sure to come out in print."—HAZLITT.

Dr. Eliot, president of Harvard, gave an address recently to his students on the subject of enlistment. A good summary of his remarks is given in a recent issue of the Boston Herald. Dr. Eliot said:—"What are the effective motives for voluntary enlistment under a free government which has gone to war? Let us first eliminate some of the illegitimate motives. The love of adventure is one, and, in the immense majority of cases, the youth who enlists for that motive is profoundly disappointed. England, indeed, with its widely distributed colonies, offers to its soldiers and sailors some opportunity of seeing various lands and seas; but the sailor's view of the foreign world is generally obtained through a porthole, and the soldier's from the casemate of a fortress, the window of a barrack or along the barrel of his rifle. In actual fighting the modern soldier does not see his enemy at all, and the sailor, who has no marine glass, cannot tell whether his shot has hit the mark or not. Neither is the motive of the hunter a legitimate motive for enlistment. Again the motive comprehensively described as "martial glory" can have no force with a rational man who has any acquaintance with history. The common soldier and the ordinary line officer can get no glory out of war. The names of such men, when they fall, are tenderly remembered by their families and acquaintances, but in no wider circle. Already the services and exploits of individual soldiers and sailors in our civil war have faded from remembrance, and soon, with rarest exceptions, no living tongue will mention their deeds. No more legitimate is an object in enlistment which we who remember the civil war heard of at that time, and which is again mentioned to-day. I refer to the object of political preferment in the future. Some men said to themselves in 1861, "As I aspire to be a politician in latter life, I will join the army or navy now, because the reputation will be useful to me." Again, some young men, during periods of popular excitement, enlist from the fear of being thought to be afraid. This, again, is an unreasonable motive. However uncommon may be the solitary, 2-o'clock-in-the-morning courage, gregarious courage in disciplined bands, with file closers and officers standing behind the line of battle, is a very common human quality. Men who are afraid of being thought cowards are much more numerous than real cowards. Love of country is not strongest or most enduring in the people who talk most about it. The characteristic people of our northern states are generally silent about it, just as they are about their other deep and intimate affections; but it burns within them steadily and cannot be quenched. No young man is justified in enlisting whose family is, or probably may become, dependent on him for support, or of whom the family depends for the transmission of its name to another generation. The only son, and particularly the only son of a widow, has no right to enlist. Dr. Eliot said that part of the military strength of a country depended on its industrial resources, and that the peaceful continuation of one's ordinary pursuits might prove to be the best way of showing one's patriotism. If, on the other hand, it should prove likely that the country would need the support in arms of large numbers of its citizens, the proper course was for able-bodied, educated young men to prepare themselves for service."

Gladstone's funeral took place on Saturday. Seldom has any man had a more distinguished lot of pall bearers, though no single pall bearer was as distinguished as Gladstone himself. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York represented the throne, the Marquis of Salisbury, and Mr. Balfour, the government, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the church, while the Earl of Kimberley and Sir William Harcourt represented the party of which Mr. Gladstone was so long the chief. In connection with Gladstone's appearance after death, Sir William B. Richmond, Royal Academician, who was summoned to Hawarden to take drawings of the face for a picture, has written the following description of the appearance of the body:—"The great statesman, so splendid and yet so simple in his life, lies with no adornments about his noble head. Not even flowers are there. There is no trace of recent suffering. The expression as one watches the beautiful face seem almost to attain mobility, and at times one is reminded faintly of his brilliant smile in life, but chiefly it partakes of divine serenity. It bears no evidence that the spirit has departed. It appears rather to have found rest. I have never seen anything so grand or so touchingly beautiful as the dead face of the great champion of liberty."
