Children and Poisonous Flowers.
 Buttercups and daisies are generally associated in one's mind with Worth-ness, children and Arcadian simplicity. It is difficult to conceive of anything hurtful or dangerous in connection with the pretty little yellow flower, but unfortunately it is not always the most modest and retiring plants or flowers that are the least harmful; for example, the deadly nightshade (Atropa belladonna). Not that the buttercup can vie with the deadly nightshade in poisonous quantities, and still will cause death. A proof of this has lately been afforded in England in the case of a boy who after eating some buttercups died in a few hours with all the symptoms of irritant poisoning.

The buttercup belongs to the ranunculaceae and nearly all the members of this group possess poisonous qualities, chiefly of an irritant nature, as deadly nightshade, laburnum and yew. Fortunately, buttercups though nice to look at, do not as a rule tempt children to eat them wholesale, otherwise the mortality from this cause would be much greater than it is at present.

The Wheelman's Friend.

No bicyclist should be without a bottle of Haggard's Yellow Oil. It takes out all stiffness and soreness of the joints and muscles. Relieves pain and takes down swelling in an instant. 25c.

Paper as a Carpet.

The latest addition house furnishing is the paper carpet. Perhaps some of our readers would like to try it so we give complete directions from the best English authority in these matters.

The floor is carefully scrubbed and every hole and crack filled with paste produced by saturating printing paper with a past composed of 0.5 kilogrammes litres water and 20 grammes alum, the whole thoroughly mixed. The floor is afterwards coated with this paste and covered with a layer of manilla or other strong paper. If a durable effect is desired the layer of paper is then coated once more with the paste, another layer of paper placed over it, and the whole thoroughly dried. Then another coating of paste is applied, and over this a laying of wall paper of desired kind. In order to protect that paper against wear and tear, it is given one or more coatings of a solution of 250 grammes white size and 2 litres of not water, then allowed to dry, and the whole process finished with a coating of hot linseed oil varnish.

Pointers.

Never get discouraged young man, there's a compensation influence at work. The religion of the Mormons is singular, but their wives are plural.

Never engage in any enterprise without considering the end thereof. Man leads woman to the altar, but there his leadership ends.

Never indulge in loquacity. Empty drums sound the loudest and get beat every time. If you have nothing to say say it.

Never get the idea that you have started the machinery of life in motion, and can afford to let go. The world has enough cranks already wick squeak for the want of an honest (t)oil.

Never become a blowhorn. Brag is a good dog, but Holdfast is better. The chronic hmbast is the "ill wind that blows nobody any good."

Montague, of Dunnville, Cured of Ulcerated Itching Piles.

Mr. Robert Montague, of Dunnville, Ont., writes: "Was troubled with Itching Piles for five years and was so badly ulcerated, they were very painful, so much so, that I could not sleep. I tried almost every medicine known when I was recommended to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. I purchased a box and from the first application got relief. Have used two boxes and am now completely cured."

Carefully Selected.

One of the most remarkable features of life in New South Wales is the transformation of criminals into hard working citizens. Of the 30,000 settlers there in 1821, 20,000 were or had been convicts.

It is said that on board an American liner a boastful Australian asserted loudly and over and over again that "the men who settled Australia were a remarkably sensible lot."

"Yes," said an American quietly, "I have always understood that they were sent out by the very best judges."—Youth's Companion.

WILL I SUICIDE?

While There's Life and Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure There's Hope.

I had suffered so many years from catarrh that I don't know that I will ever get it out of my remembrance. One day, when I took one of the endless prescriptions given me by the medical man to a druggist, I asked him bluntly, "Will this cure me, or will it not? Or will it be like the rest?" I was nearly desperate, I can tell you. The druggist said:—"No, nothing can cure catarrh. I have it myself until I often think of suicide. I take opium usually to sleep it off." I took the prescription away unfiled and went home, thinking of what the druggist had said about suicide, and I was utterly disheartened. I have that prescription yet. One day my deliverance came. A lady told me she had suffered just as I had, and was nearly insane, and that a remedy known as Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure had actually cured her. I had read a lot about Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, but I felt toward it as I did toward other medicines; had no faith. I tried it as a last resort. I used two boxes of Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, and found it a complete cure.

"It's the devil for any one to tell me a secret, for it is sure to come out in print."—HAZLITT.

We have been calling the Spaniards all manner of names because they did "nothing" in the war. Mr. John A. Ewan, a reliable correspondent for the Toronto Globe, is in Cuba and writes of the battle before Santiago as follows:—"It may go hard against American pride, but it is a fact nevertheless that the Spaniards could silence the American batteries whenever they chose to do so. The latter scarce dare open up to assist or protect their men before the Spanish gunners were rattling shrapnel among the men, making it impossible to keep up the contest. The artillery was in consequence wretchedly ineffective. Capron's battery kept up the bombardment of El Caney the most of the day because it was beyond the range of the Spanish gunners. Those who have been saying the Spaniards cannot fight should study the history of the taking of that outpost of Santiago. It was well supplied with rifle-pits, and had one strong stone blockhouse and several smaller wooden ones protected by earth. There were at no time more than 600 Spaniards in the place, and yet they withstood the assault of 4,000 American soldiers from 7 in the morning until nearly 4 in the afternoon. One of the officers who was made a prisoner said that the reason he stopped fighting was because he had no more ammunition. They had no artillery, but were themselves exposed the whole day to the fire of Capron's battery. It deserves to be handed down as a piece of determined and persistent heroism without many parallels."

Truly, it is well that we do not know what nasty things people are saying of us. In this, as in all things, Providence is good. Says a clever writer, "Thank Heaven that a little illusion is left to us to enable us to be useful and agreeable—that we don't know exactly what our friends think of us—that the world is not made of looking glasses to show us just the figure we are making and what is going on behind our backs! By the help of dear friendly illusions we are able to dream that we are charming—and our faces wear a becoming air of self-possession; we are able to dream that other men, admire our talents—and our benignity is undisturbed; we are able to dream that we are doing much good—we do little."

Much will yet be written about Gladstone, undoubtedly, the grand old man of the century. Even now contemporaries are recalling his wise sayings and counsel. A friend of the dead statesman writes, "I remember years ago, his (Gladstone) telling me that he thought little of men leaving benefactions for good purposes in their wills. What he wished to see was men calculating what their goods in this world were, settling what they intended to settle on their families, and then, devoting what remained over and above that to good purposes, while they lived." One would think that even human vanity would dictate such a course.

There are several ways of saying things, and a man's true meaning is not always to be judged by the words he uses in conveying that meaning. For instance, if the young man whom I am about to speak of, had answered his proposed employer's question in a different way, he might have been hired. Said the advertiser for a clerk, "Of course this is a post of some responsibility—and before engaging you, may I ask if you are a sober man?" To which the applicant replied "Oh, dear, yes sorr, often."

The appointment of the Earl of Minto as governor general of Canada, can scarcely be said to be consistent with the sacred principle "To the victors belong the spoils," for Minto is a liberal, and the premier of Great Britain is very much of a tory. What would the Moncton convention say to that? But then the Salisbury government is partly a coalition, considering the support it gets from the liberal-unionists.

Aluminum for Horseshoes.
 The Russian minister of war has ordered aluminum horseshoes for the cavalry. The first trial is now being made by the Finland dragoons, and the horses are shod as follows. A shoe of the new aluminum model is placed on one foot, the three remaining shoes being of the kind ordinarily in use. The trial, which has already lasted 12 weeks, seems to be satisfactory, as the aluminum is lighter, wears out less rapidly and is less affected by mud and moisture than the ordinary shoe.

Disordered Kidneys.

Perhaps they're the source of your ill health and you don't know it. Here's how you can tell:—
 If you have Back Ache or Lame Back.
