Khalifa's Last Stand.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The actual beginning of the final advance upon Khartoum and the Khalifa is near at hand, says a London correspondent. The additional contingents of British troops that Sir Herbert Kitchener has asked for are leaving England and the stations in the Mediterranean, and by the last of the present month they will be at Cairo on their way to the front. In the campaign that ended with the victory at the Atbara one British brigade marched and fought side by side with the Egyptian troops. For the more difficult capture of the Khalifa's capital another is to strengthen the Sirdar's army, and as soon as the officers and men composing it are a little acclimated the advance southward from the camps near Berber will begin. Reports agree that Omdurman and the neighbouring camp of the Dervishes are strongly fortified, and for use against them, the expedition is carrying artillery for the first time into the Soudan. The advance, therefore, with all the aid that a railway and a full Nile may give, will be slow—and the slower, probably, for the caution and the sedulous preparation of every detail that characterize Sir Herbert Kitchener's operations. For a time English opinion was impatient over what it called his delays, but since it has seen the machinelike precision and effectiveness of his movements at the Atbara confidence has replaced complaint, and he will never have an exceptionally free hand in his advance upon Omdurman. That the Dervishes will fight somewhere is taken for granted. The rumors that drift to Cairo from the desert of the flight of the Khalifa into the equatorial provinces find little credence, and there is every expectation of stout resistance at the gates of the Dervish capital, under the eye of their prophet-chief. In the service clubs there are bets already that the Anglo-Egyptian army will occupy Omdurman and the ruins of Khartoum by the end of October. A month or two later is, perhaps, a likelier time.

Kidney-Bladder Trouble.

There is no more serious menace to good health in the present age than Kidney disorders, and it's an appalling fact, but a true one, that four-fifths of the country's people have the taint of this insidious disease with them. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure all Kidney disease.

Russia and the English-Speaking World.

A very able ambassador has come to the United States from Russia. Count Cassini knows his business exceedingly well. He cannot see the reason why Uncle Sam should not be on more cordial terms with John Bull than he was in days gone by, without a sacrifice of the old traditions of friendliness between Russia and the United States. The policy of Lord Salisbury's cabinet, inspired largely by Mr. Chamberlain, has been a mistaken and a dangerous one in its hysterical antagonism to Russia's natural and reasonable desire to obtain an ice-free port for her trans-Siberian railroad system. Russia is doing a great piece of work for the world in opening up Northern Asia, and the English have taken the wrong tone in their hostility to the presence of the Russian bear at Port Arthur. Mr. Chamberlain will not succeed in drawing the United States into an alliance for the purpose of thwarting Russia's policy on the northern frontiers of China. Our inflexible will, doubtless, be added to that of England in the expression of the reasonable view that the Chinese ports should not be appropriated by Russia, Germany, or any other power, for the sake of shutting out the commerce of the world. But Russia has not yet taken any final position on that question which could justify the alarm and dismay that have been so commonly expressed in England. In fact, M. DeWitte, the great finance minister of Russia, has of late made several tariff concessions to British trade which point in quite the opposite direction.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for August.

Not Proven.

A patient in an insane asylum imagined himself dead. Nothing could drive this delusion out of the man's brain. One day the physician had a happy thought and said to him:

"Did you ever see a dead man bleed?"

"No," he replied.

"Did you ever hear of a dead man bleeding?"

"No."

"Well, if you will permit me, I will try an experiment with you, and see if you bleed or not."

The patient gave his consent, the doctor whipped out his scalpel and drew a little blood.

"There," said he, "you see that you bleed; that proves that you are not dead."

"Not at all," the patient instantly replied, "that only proves that dead men can bleed."

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION

Recommends Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment.

Dr. C. M. Harlan, writing in the American Journal of Health, of February 19, says:—

"Among the proprietary medicines deserving recognition is 'Dr. Chase's Ointment,' compounded by THE DR. A. W. CHASE MEDICINE CO., Buffalo, N. Y., and Edmanson, Ball Co., Toronto, Ont., as a remedy for sores, eruptions, and skin diseases of all kinds, for which it has been used with marked success, and has effected remarkable cures in many obstinate cases which seemed to baffle the skilful medical attendant. The results were most favourable, proving the value of 'Dr. Chase's Ointment' as a curative agent in the diseases named. The manufacturers of the remedy are well-known as experienced pharmacists, careful and reliable, in addition to which we have made full examination, and find the article to be all that is claimed for it. It is not the practice of the medical profession to indorse indiscriminately the use of proprietary medicines, but while we condemn the bad and worthless, we are still more ready to indorse and recommend the remedy deserving the recognition. Neither the physician nor the responsible Journal of Health now refuses to acknowledge the claims of such proprietary remedies as 'Dr. Chase's Ointment,' which prove their virtues by curing where other agencies have failed. We know that 'Dr. Chase's Ointment' meets all requisitions of the highest standard of worth, that it will be held in high esteem wherever it is used, and consequently we indorse it to every reader."

Good Lemonade.

Good lemonade, says an experienced writer is one of the most perfect drinks ever derived. I can hardly understand why it is not in daily use instead of tea or coffee, and why it does not drive out every kind of alcoholic drink. Perfect lemonade is made as follows: For a quart take the juice of three lemons, using the rind of one of them. Carefully peel the rind very thin, getting just the yellow outside; cut this into two pieces and put with the juice and powdered sugar, of which use two ounces to the quart, in a jug or jar with a cover. When the water is just at a boiling point, pour it over the lemon and sugar, cover at once, and let it get cold. Try this way once and see if it is not delicious.

"It's the devil for any one to tell me a secret, for it is sure to come out in print."—HAZLITT.

Death from starvation in big cities may quite frequently occur, but we seldom hear of it. An instance of this kind is given us in the Boston Herald. And to make the affair all the worse, the sufferers are women. They were aged 42 and 70, the former's husband had been the bread-winner, but, like many bread-winners, had proved false to his trust, and had fled to parts unknown—perhaps to the war.—"The wife and mother-in-law were left penniless and were compelled to sell household effects to secure food during the first week of the husband's absence. During the last two weeks they have practically been without any food. Being too proud to beg, they preferred to suffer the pangs of hunger. The officers found the women lying in bed in a semi-conscious condition. Medicine and nourishment were at once procured, but both women were so weak that it was with difficulty that the nourishment was administered. Their condition was so critical that the physician did not think it safe to order their removal to the hospital." Starving Cubans and starving Bostonians! *

The debate in the County Council on the gaol question did credit to the gentlemen who compose that body. Between what was said at the June session and the special session, just over, the question was thoroughly ventilated, and very little was left to be added on either side. Weak points made by an opponent were quickly got on to, and sharply answered. Most of the speeches were free from unnecessary padding. Special mention is due to a speech by Coun. Shaw of Wakefield, probably the youngest member of the board. He spoke in opposition to the new gaol, and even those who were against his view of the question, admit that he made a capital speech. Altogether the debate was of a high order. *

Good novels are always in demand. One of the best that I have read for some time is "The Standard Bearer," by Crockett, and which is to be found at the book store. It is of the old covenanting days, in Scotland, and should be of particular interest to the Scotch and their descendants. For the benefit of the Scotch I must say that the price of the book is fairly high, but it is well worth it, and a Scotchman does not mind paying for a good thing. "The Standard Bearer" is away ahead of the ordinary novel.

No Scots in Heaven.

According to an old legend the kingdom of heaven is not inhabited by any native of Scotland, and the reason given is this:

Long years ago, in the times so remote that history does not fix the epoch, a dreadful war waged by the King of Scotland. Scottish valor prevailed, and the King, elevated by his success, sent for his minister, Lord Alexander.

"Well, Sandy," said he, "is there ne'er a king we canna conquer noo?"

"An' it please your majesty, I ken o' a king that your majesty canna vanquish."

"An' who is he, Sandy?"

Lord Alexander reverently looking up, said: "The King o' heaven."

"The king o' whaur, Sandy?"

"The King o' heaven."

The Scottish King did not understand, but was willing to exhibit his ignorance. "Just gang your ways, Sandy, and tell the King o' heaven to gie up his dominions or I'll come myself and ding him out o' them; an' mind, Sandy, ye dinna come back to us until ye hae done oor bidden." Lord Alexander retired, much perplexed, but met a priest, and, reassured, returned and presented himself.

"Well, Sandy," said the King, "hae ye seen the King o' heaven, and what says He to oor bidden?" said the King.

"An' it pleases your majesty, I hae seen ane o' His accredited ministers."

"Weel, and what says he?" "He says your majesty may een hae his kingdom for the askin' o' it."

"Was he sae civil?" said the King, warning to magnanimity. "Just gang your ways back, Sandy, and tell the King o' heaven that for His civility the deil a Scotchman shall set his foot in his kingdom."

Worthy of Sir Boyle Roche.

Money is very welcome in these days. A man who had to leave his office, and was expecting a caller to pay him some money, left this notice on the door: "I have gone out for half an hour. Will be back soon. Have been gone twenty minutes already."

SCROFULA.

"My little boy, aged 7 years and 15 months, was a victim of Scrofula on the face, which all the doctors said was incurable. To tell the truth he was so bad that I could not bear to look at him. At last I tried a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and before it was half used he was gaining, and by the time he had three bottles used he was completely cured. I cannot say too much in recommendation of B.B.B. to all who suffer as he did." JOSEPH P. LABELLE, Mani-wake P.O., Que.

There can be no question about it. Burdock Blood Bitters has no equal for the cure of Sores and Ulcers of the most chronic and malignant nature. Through its powerful blood purifying properties, it gets at the source of disease and completely eradicates it from the system.
