MR. SMILY, who will be in the Opera house on Friday evening, entertained an audience here in July, 1895. THE DISPATCH has pleasure in quoting what it said about him at that time: "Mr. Smily may always be assured a generous welcome at the hands of Woodstock after the entertainment of last night. He is a wit and a humorist without the slightest touch of buffoonery. He held his audience in the hollow of his hand and shook them with laughter at his pleasure. This was certainly the very best entertainment of the kind that was ever placed within the reach of a Woodstock audience, and all who failed to get tickets have the sincere sympathy of THE DISPATCH critic."

ALLEGED financial transactions by B. B. Blizard, of this city, are receiving attention in the provincial papers. The Campbellton Telephone tells that a man in that city was induced to cash a draft on Messrs. J. & J. Taylor, Toronto, for $100, and that it was returned with the announcement that Blizard was not in the firm's employ. Report comes that W. D. Wilber, of Dorchester, and merchants in Morcton and other places also cashed drafts on the Messrs. Taylor that have been returned. Local friends of Blizard do not believe the stories about him. They say he has been in a very bad financial condition, that recently his salary was garnished and as a result he lost his position, but made a new arrangement with the Messrs. Taylor, and before he left St. John, a week or ten days ago, showed his new contract. He had planned a trip to the North Shore, then across to Fredericton, Woodstock, Presque Isle, etc. The Globe was unable to find out where Blizard is now believed to be, but friends think he is still in the province. Mr. J. King Kelley, solicitor for Messrs. J. & J. Taylor, told the Globe that while Blizard was not now in the firm's employ, he was selling on commission.—St. John Globe.

THE St. Paul Church Literary Society has secured the Rev. W. T. D. Moss, B. A., of St. Andrew's Kirk, Pictou to lecture on "Wordsworth" in the Opera House on Thursday evening, 20th inst., at 8 o'clock. Mr. Moss is recognized as one of our most critical students and appreciative interpreters of English poetry. And those who will hear him on Wordsworth's attitude to nature will enjoy a rare intellectual treat. A musical programme will be given in connection with the lecture.

A LARGE AUDIENCE greeted the Rev. Mr. Ireland, of Woodstock, Thursday night at the St. Stephen's Church Guild, where he delivered a lecture on The Ethical Teaching of the Idylls of the King. The lecturer traced first the Arthurian story from its earliest sources, referring briefly to the Celtic writers of the seventh and twelfth centuries. He found the source of Tennyson's cycle in Sir Thomas Malory's Morte d'Arthur and Lady Charlotte Guests' Mabinogion. In Caxton's preface there is the indication of a moral purpose in Malory's book Tennyson found in this preface the suggestion to embody his own religious feelings in an Arthurian story, and in Malory's book the material for the same. There seems to be a development in the mind of the poet of his work. First he regards it simply as a romance, then as an allegory, and finally as a parable through which runs allegory. The lecturer quoted from the recent memoirs of Tennyson by his son in confirmation of this view. The first four idylls were then separately dealt with, and their significance interpreted. He quoted freely from them to illustrate the ideas which he attributed to the poet; and he closed his address long before the audience would have wished. The Rev. Principal Macrae, in moving a vote of thanks, referred to the great pleasure with which he had listened to the able presentation of one of the greatest poems of one of the greatest poets of our century, and congratulated the guild on the admirable work it is evidently doing in bringing great themes weekly before its members. This was seconded by Rev. Mr. Rainnie in a brief, witty and appreciative speech, and was cordially tendered Mr. Ireland by the president.—St. John Telegraph.
