Moorish Hospitality.

Among the Moors a guest is sacred. Once having eaten with a Moor, you may be sure that he will guard you with his life. There is a pretty story told which illustrates

A Spanish cavalier had a quarrel with a Moor and slew him. Then the Spaniard ran away as fast as he could, and, seeing a garden wall, jumped over it. His alarm was great when he found that its owner was a Moor. The fugitive fell upon his knees.

Save me, I implore you!" he cried. The Moor handed him half a peach and bade him eat it.

"Now you are safe," he said. "You are my guest. Nothing shall harm you."

He took the Spaniard to his house, locked him in, and assured him that he need not worry. Presently there was a loud knockng at the garden gate and a sound of lamentatious arose.

"Who is there?" asked the Moor, alarmed for the safety of his guest.

"We bring the body of your son," was the

The Moor opened the gate without delay, and instinctively knew the truth.

"Describe the murderer," he said; and as they obeyed, he knew that his son's slayer was his guest, But he keep the secret. When night came he sought the Spaniard.

"Man," he said, "he whom you killed was my only son. He was the apple of my eye, the joy of my heart. In losing him, I have lost all that makes life worth living. But you are my guest; you have eaten within my deserve to die, but your blood shall not be on my hands."

He then led the astonished Spaniard to his stable, mounted him on a fleet horse and bad him begone. The Moor had kept his faith .- Ave Maria.

Weather Proverbs

Here are some weather proverbs refer ring to song birds and storms: "When birds cease to sing rain and thunder will follow. If birds in general pick their feathers, wash themselves and fly to their nests, expect rain. Parrots and canaries dress their feathers and are wakeful the evening before a storm. If the peacock cries when he goes to roost, and, indeed, much at any time, it is a sign of rain. Long and loud singing of robins in the morning denotes rain. Robins will perch on the topmost branches of trees and whistle when a storm is coming on.'

IS A MOUSTACHE PROPERTY?

A Man Sues for Damages for the Loss o That Crinal Appendage.

[From the New Orleans Times-Democrat.] "Is a moustache property?" said a guest in the St. Charles lobby last evening. "If so, what is its value? These points will be raised in a very peculiar suit which is coming garden walls. I shall not give you up. You up at the next term of court in a town over in Georgia. I'd rather not mention any names, but I happened to be familiar with the facts, and they are briefly these.

> Almost a month ago a well known travel ling man was staying at the leading hotel of the place, and went to the cigar stand one day to get a light. They had a new fangled concern that spouted out a jet of flame when the lighter was lifted, but on this particular occasion it hung fire. The drummer was trying to make it work when all of a sudden it blazed out like a volcano and licked off his long, beautiful blond moustache. He was furious, of course, because the moustache had been his chief ornament and pride, but the affair might still have passed off without trouble if he hadn't been so unmercifully guyed. The upshot of this was that he demanded damages, the landlord laughed at him and he then instructed a lawyer to bring of court. I am told they make some interesting allegations. It will be claimed, for instance, that the moustache was of direct assistance to its owner in earning a livelihood, insomuch as it gave him a distinguished appearance, and thus facilitated his interviews with the trade. Its loss, he holds, was a disfigurement which has occasioned ridicule. falling off in prestige and consequent shrinkage in business. He will also allege that his altered appearance caused great mental anguish to himself and his wife, and that that in flattering Carleton Co. "The garden of species of suffering may be reduced, under the province," "The brightest sun in the the law, to dollars and cents. Incidentally empire's crown," "the greatest country in he will try to prove that the absence of a soft or calloused Lumps and Blemishes from moustache affected his eyesight. So, as you horses, Blood Spavin, Curbs, Splints, Ring may observe, a good many interesting and public speakers would not lay it on so thick may observe, a good many interesting and delicate questions will be raised, and I dare say the case will attract wide attention. I have the particulars I mention from the victim himself What sort of defence will be set up remains to be seen."

"It's the devil for any one to tell me a secret, for it is sure to come out inprint."—HAZLITT.

Col. Sam Hughes who volunteered to go to the Transvaal and fight, has been snubbed. Gen. Hutton told him that it was not his business to volunteer, and the gallant commander of the militia, also put a stop to the "Highlanders" of Toronto going to New York to join in the Dewey demonstration. The general means to be "boss," and he is dead right. Now, all this volunteering to go to the Transvaal is "tomming rot." Some years ago the 67th volunteered to go to India and fight, this was when Disraeli was stairing it. However, the 67th had a chance to fight later on, during the Northwest rebellion. It seems nonsense for peaceable living and loving Canadians to desire to shoot or be shot by Boers. When their services are required they will be asked for. These rushing, fire-eaters are a nuisance. It is time they were suppressed.

I did feel a bit ashamed that Woodstock has no band. There was something incoquious, as a Montreal gentleman remarked, in a foreign band playing British airs to our governor, while we are told so much of our loyalty in this principle town of a banner county, which cannot ever get a band together, Truly, Woodstock, in this is to be congratulated. Several hundreds of dollars were paid to outside bands. However, it was all there was left for the committee to do. Next year when we get still more loyal. we will not only have the Houlton band to play our national airs, but, let us do it up well, and engage a guard of honour from an American regiment. Thus will we prove ourselves worthy of the grand compliments levelled on us for out overflowing loyalty. Rats!!

Some people like crowds and some hate them, and prefer quietude. I think I am of the latter brood although I can stand a moderate crowd for a moderate length of "The papers will be filled in the next term | time. There were great crowds these exhibition days, and in a comparitively small place like Woodstock, you have all the benefit or distress of the big crowd of a big place. You can easily understand what it means to be crushed to death in a panic. I heard the orators at the opening. There was one good quality. The speeches were short. But, to be frank, there was nothing in them. The speakers were called upon to praise an exhibition they had not seen. They knew it was safe to flatter, so they piled on the agony the dominion," and so forth ad nauseam. public speakers would not lay it on so thick if they were not secure of their audience. The public is very vain, indeed. Then, there was a lot of "loyalty" all very good in its kind, but like the flattery, put on too thick. And, then, this sickening flattery of Carleton Co's women. Surely, the women might be left out of the fulsome nonsense. Which all goes to show that when a speaker has anything to say, he should and will be heard, but when there is really nothing to say, silence is a very good course to pursue. But a speech on a public occasion is something like a funeral sermon. It is looked for.

Dr. - had a valuable cow, which became sick and seemed likely to die. After inquiry of his servants he sent for Jemmy Lafferty, who, they said, "could cure any cow in the wurrold." The cow doctor accordingly came, drenched and physicked the which time he waited on the doctor and pronounced her cured. The doctor, greatly delighted, put his hand to his pocketbood "Well, Lafferty. what do I owe you?" "Owe me?" replied Jemmy, drawing himself up with great dignity, "sorra the penny! We doctors never take money from one another.'

"I notice," said the foreigner, "that you always nominate nice, quiet, clean gentlemen for your lieutenant governors."
"()h," replied the politician, "I dunno as its' correct to say we always do so. Sometimes the head of the ticket is decent and isn't nominated because he has money. In such cases we don't pay much attention to the lieutenant governor."—Chicago Times-
