COOK'S ANODYNE LINIMENT.

SENT UP FOR TRIAL.

Sequel to the Housebreaking and Larceny on Sunday.

Perhaps the moral is "Don't go to church on Sunday mornings." At any rate if Jack Dibblee had been piously inclined last Sunday morning his grandfather, Mr. Wm. F. Dibblee would have been out $71.00 besides sundry articles of value.

Mr. and Mrs. Dibblee had gone to church. About half past eleven, Jack Dibblee, who lives with his father near by, stepped over to his grandfather's house, with a view of getting some papers to read. The house was locked but Jack had a means of private entry, known only to the family. When he got in the house, he found that someone else was there before him. Someone was moving up stairs, and when this someone appeared, Jack pounced on him. He was a boy of about sixteen years of age. Jack got him down and then outside, and the youth began to disgorge. Jas. McCanna happened along, but as the youth seemed to have given up all he had, he was let go.

When Mr. Dibblee got home it was found that seventy-one dollars was missing from a pocket book in a drawer in his bedroom. The police were at once notified, and a description of the youth telephoned over the country. Well on in the afternoon two parties were arrested a little way above Hartland on the railway track. One was the youth who had figured in the morning, and on his person was found the missing money. Jos. L. Thornton of Hartland made the arrest and notified Deputy Sheriff Foster, who came on the scene. The little chap said he was John Dalton of Houlton. The other party gave his name as John Elliott of St. John. He had been trying to sell a watch to Wm. Glidden, and the watch was supposed to be one stolen from Frank Foster's house on Friday morning. Another theft was a watch taken on Wednesday afternoon from the house of Chas. Comben, barrister. Both Mr. Comben and Mr. Foster also missed small sums of money.

John Dalton and John Elliott were charged with the offence before the magistrate.

The examination was before the Police Magistrate yesterday morning.

Wm. F. Dibblee narrated the circumstances leading up to the robbery. The money in his pocket book up stairs consisted of $70 or $75, he could not say positively. There was one $20 bill, one $10, and balance in fives. After coming home I found a robber had been in the house, I went up stairs and found the money missing from my pocket book.

Jack Dibblee stated that he recognized the prisoner Dalton. He found him in his grandfather's house at half past eleven. Had gone there to get a paper. The door from the shed, and of the outside and inside kitchen were open. I asked him what he was doing, he said nothing, I grappled with him and took him outside. Jim McCanna came across. We asked him what he had. He handed out two razors, a ring, and one dollar and five cents, besides fifty cents which he said was his own. He gave this and a jack knife, which he said was his own. He held his hands up and I felt about his pockets, gave him back his knife and fifty cents and after consulting with McCanna let him go.

Deputy Sheriff Foster recognized prisoner Dalton. He learned by telephone of a robbery in town. Telephoned to Alfred Thornton, Hartland, to be on the lookout for any suspicious persons. In about half an hour a message came that they had just gone by Hartland, and had been held up. Found the prisoners at Thornton's hotel. Searched them both. Dalton gave me the money, $71.52—one $20 bill, one $10, eight $5 bills, $1, two 25 cent pieces and two cents in change. The sheriff produced the money in court. Prisoner said he got the money in a house, that he went in through a back window, that some money had been taken away from him in the morning. He said he met this other man, Elliott, about three miles below Hartland, sitting on the track, whittling. Found on Elliott two cents, a jack knife, and a key, and a picture of four men. Asked Elliott about the watches, which I had heard had been stolen. He said he had no watch, and had not had any.

Elliott stated that he did not tell the sheriff he never had a watch, what he said was he never had one that day. He had a watch but had lost it.

Jas. McCanna corroborated what had been said by Jack Dibblee as to his connection with the matter when Dalton was discovered.

T. E. Milmore was examined as to the charges against the two prisoners and Wm. Nason and Chas. Merritt. He recognized Dalton and Elliott and saw the latter in the house owned by the late D. F. Merritt. Nason and Merritt were there during the morning. Dalton went out and came back again. He asked me where the boys were and I said they were out. He handed me a $5 bill, and said "Take this and have the drink on me." He said he had met a cop up town and was told to get out and he was going right away. He went away. Merritt Dalton and I stayed in the house Saturday night. I did not know robbery had been committed till Sunday afternoon when Mr. Dibblee and Mr. Gibson came to the house and drove us out.

T. E. Milmore then gave evidence regarding the breaking into Scovill's meat shop and the stealing of a leg of lamb. With regard to the $5 that Dalton gave me, I gave it to Merritt and Nason and they went out and got something to eat and some whiskey. They brought in some mutton. A piece was displayed in court and witness said that was like that which they brought in. They brought in Bologna sausage, some biscuit, some bread and tea. I understood them to say they got it at Lounsbury & Porter's restaurant. They brought in some more whiskey after a while. This was after ten o'clock in the morning. Henry W. Scovill, butcher said that on Monday he missed some meat from his shop, a fore quarter of lamb and some bologna sausage. His shop had been broken into. Here witness identified the leg of lamb and piece of sausage, as like what he had left in the shop Saturday night.

The shop had been entered through a window in the back.

The magistrate then committed Dalton for trial at the next circuit court on the 17th inst.

The other three and T. E. Milmore were remanded until Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

Camp Sussex.

General Hutton asked a subaltern in Camp Sussex how his men were enjoying the camp and the sub. answered that the men were satisfied with nothing but the weather. This statement was hardly correct. The weather had been perfect and though the work had been harder than at any camp for years, the men did not grumble much at that. But they did object to the bread that was issued. It was probably the worst bread that any man in camp had ever been asked to eat for ten days at a time. Flour had evidently been scarce so the ingenious baker had used Portland cement or plaster of Paris.

The camp was composed of the 5th Artillery Brigade consisting of the 10th Field Battery of Woodstock under the command of Major W. C. Good with Captain Carvell and Lieutenants Fields and Gray, and Surgeon Major Hand; and the 12th Field Battery of Newcastle under command of Major Maltby. The Brighton Engineers commanded by Col. Vince with Captain Tompkins and Lieut. Appleby. The 12th Infantry Brigade commanded by Colonel Buckin, which consisted of the 67th Carleton Light Infantry, the 71st York Infantry, the 73rd Northumberland Infantry and the 74th Infantry. The Carleton Light Infantry was under the command of Colonel Boyer, with Colonel Hartley, Captain Raymond, Adjutant, Surgeon Major Curtis, and Capt. Harry Carvell, quartermaster. No. 1 Company, Woodstock was commanded by Captain Bull, with Lieutenant Bedell. No. 2 Co. Centreville, was commanded by Capt. Kennedy, with Lieut. Adams. No. 3 Debec, Capt. Kirkpatrick and Lieuts. Kirkpatrick and Johnston. No. 4 Hartland, Capt. Ross, Lieut. Ross. No. 5 Woodstock, Capt. Sutton, Lieut. Jones. No. 6 Andover, Capt. Kupkey, Lieut. Stephenson. No. 7 Baker Brook, Capt. Baker. No. 8 Centreville, Capt. Perkins, Lieuts. Bell and Taylor. No. 9 Long Settlement, Capt. Williams, Lieuts. Margison and McClary.

General Hutton G. O. C. was in command of the entire camp; Col. Vidal, Chief Staff Officer, Lieut. Col. Skinner D. A. A. G. (a), Major Dennison D. A. A. G. (b), Lieut. Col. McLearn M. D., P. M. O., Capt. Bell of the Scots Guards A. D. C., and Major Armstrong, Camp Paymaster.

On Sunday morning all the Roman Catholics of the camp marched to service at their own church in Sussex under the command of Capt. Baker, a gentleman who has the greatest respect and esteem of all who know him. Later on Sunday morning the Artillery Brigade, the Engineers and the Infantry Brigade paraded for religious services. Rev. Scovill Neales conducted the service. His imposing appearance, his good voice and his excellent sermon, made the service very impressive.

Carleton County had every reason to be proud of the contingent it sent to camp.

In the sham fight the two field batteries shelled a redoubt of the enemy with live shell. The Woodstock Battery made 28 direct hits to the Newcastle Battery's 10 hits. In the driving competition the Woodstock Battery captured the General's prize. The best driving was done by No. 1 gun, Sergeant Harry Dysart, Drivers Walter Knox and Corey Dickinson. General Hutton said that the Woodstock Battery was the best horsed Battery in the Dominion of Canada.

The Engineers built a trestle bridge over Salmon River on the day of the sham fight. The river was 50 feet wide at the point bridged. The approaches and roads were made to the bridge and the Infantry Brigade with their mounted officers crossed it. The time allotted for the work by the English Royal Engineers was 4 hours and the Brighton Engineers did it in an hour and a half. The corps received the very highest praise for the work. In the review on Friday morning Col Vidal who was then in command, drew up in front of the engineers and said, "Colonel Vince, I have to thank you very heartily for the excellent work done by you and your command yesterday and I shall do all in my power to see that your valuable services are not lost to this country." Col. Vince has retired from command of the Engineers and Major J. R. Tompkins is now in command. Sgt. Mitchell of the Scots Guards was attached to the Engineers as infantry instructor during the camp.

On the last day in camp Captain Kirkpatrick's company, quite on the quiet and contrary to regulation, made him a valuable present accompanied by an address in which they expressed their appreciation of him as an officer. Though it was a bad time of year to recruit a battalion in Carleton County, the 67th did themselves credit in every way. The camp ground was an ideal place and the town of Sussex was a good place to be next to. It is a Scott Act town and of course no liquor could be had there but notwithstanding that fact some of the boys became "jocund with the fruitful grape" on occasions. Where they got the liquor was always a matter for wonder, but get it they did.
