

WEAK, FAINT FEELINGS.

Serious Conditions that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can Readily Cure.

One of the indications of serious heart trouble is the sensation of weakness or faintness that comes on at times.

Sometimes it is simply a dizzy feeling that passes off, or it may be a state of unconsciousness with hands and feet cold and countenance ghastly pale.

These symptoms indicate a weakened heart. They are unmistakable evidences of the engine of life breaking down.

Now there's only one reliable remedy for restoring strength and vitality to weakened hearts and relieving all the distressing symptoms. It is Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

The case of Mrs. A. Stratton, Fredericton, N.B., amply proves this. Here is her statement:

"I suffered very much from an impoverished condition of the blood, coupled with extreme nervousness. A dizzy sensation arising quickly or coming down stairs, often troubled me, and my breath was so short that I could not walk up stairs. The least exertion caused my heart to flutter and palpitate violently, and I sometimes felt a smothering sensation on going to sleep.

I doctored back and forth for my weakness, but I got no relief from any medicine until I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can say that they helped me wonderfully. Sometimes my face and arms would swell and puff, but all these troubles speedily yielded to the restoring influences of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am now strong and well. I did not use them long until I regained the blessing of healthful, refreshing sleep and it will always be a pleasure to me to recommend them to others."

RECRUITING FOR THE BRITISH ARMY.

How the Queen's Shilling is Circulated.

The British recruiting sergeant, the man who gives the shilling, is a splendid creature. He is tall, erect, broad of shoulders, deep of chest, supple of limb, with the bearing of a conqueror, tempered by melting geniality, and with an ideally persuasive tongue. Always in uniform and white gloves, with little cap-a-tilt on his head, with baton twirling airily in his hand, and continually in evidence he plays a most important part in the army system of his country. He generally hunts in couples, and his chosen walks are either in the vicinity of some great barracks or in the poorer quarters of the town where he is located. Naturally, more men are recruited in London than anywhere else. The favourite stamping grounds of the London recruiting sergeants are in the neighbourhood of the Horse Guards in the Trafalgar square, on the side fronted by the National Gallery and St. Martin's church.

No one who has been much in London need be told why the recruiting sergeants patrol in the vicinity of the House Guards, since there, day after day, a miniature military parade—the regular ceremony of guard mount—is held. The detachment of the Household Cavalry that goes through this evolution is made up unquestionably of the very flower of the British army. The men are stalwart and dashing, with movements which show perfect training; their uniforms are fairly dazzling in their spick and span splendour, and there is always an admiring crowd in the courtyard to view the inspiring spectacle. Judged from it, life in the army is mainly pictorial, and it is an unusual day in times of no special excitement, even, in which from twenty to forty young men are not tempted by the guard mount show to take "the Queen's shilling" from one of the trim sergeants.

Those who take the shilling in the neighbourhood mentioned are initiated into the service of her Majesty at the recruiting depot of St. George's barracks, just back of the National Gallery. It is the largest in Great Britain, and probably one-quarter of all the British recruits are there enrolled. Other large depots are located at Woolwich, Hounslow, and elsewhere. In fact, there is a recruiting depot in every sizable town in all Great Britain.

The recruiting sergeants who work in the square and near the Horse Guards have a far easier task to perform, generally, than those who do duty elsewhere. Under the splendid stimulus furnished by the crack cavalry's appearance the recruits rarely have to be subjected to much persuasion and often offer themselves unsolicited. Recruits are easily obtained, also, in many places on occasions of great parades. But in ordinary circumstances, in most localities, securing recruits for her Majesty's service is not a task to be lightly undertaken.

It is to the credit of the English that crimping and the press gang are no longer necessary in order to keep the army ranks fairly well filled. But it is true that the recruiting sergeants for the militia and the ordinary food regiments are sometimes obliged to resort to rather devious expedients. It is also true that a very large percentage of the recruits are picked up in city slums, where a glass or two of ale and a good jollying from a splendid fellow like a recruiting sergeant are far more likely than anything else to produce the desired results. Recruits obtained in slum neighbourhoods are youngsters out of work in the main, often without family ties and sometimes quite willing, if well persuaded, to get away from their current surroundings, even if the prospects be fairly favourable for service against half-savage native rebels in India, the still more dangerous, because of their superior marksmanship, than either Hindoos or blacks. A guarantee of the recruit's good moral character is required ostensibly, but the regulations upon this point are not administered with great rigidity in many instances, and the contingency of rejection upon the moral record of the recruit is remote indeed.

Very many of the men recruited in the more crowded sections of the cities go into the militia, whose members are regarded with less favour by the middle class population of Great Britain than those of any other branch of the service. It has been commonly supposed, both in and out of England, that the militia could not be ordered to do foreign service, but this is an error. The militia may be sent out of the country if occasion arise, and, furthermore, if its ranks be not filled by "volunteer enlistment," limited conscription may be enforced to that end.

In the regular foot regiments recruits from the English peasant class, or rather, as someone has said "peasants deteriorated," by two generations of life as mill operatives," are much in evidence. The recruit of this class in general is somewhat of an undersized, narrow-chested, flaxen-haired lad, with abnormal appetite so far as ale and tobacco are concerned.

There has been much criticism by the English themselves of the low physical standard of the army recruits, and more than one British authority has referred to them as a lot of "half-grown boys." A British officer of high standing, who admits that many immature youngsters find their way into the ranks, says this is a good thing on the whole. His theory is that the recruit who begins his service before attaining full growth will soon "fill out," thus acquiring the proper size and weight. Meanwhile he will receive his training as a soldier at just the time it is most likely to produce a lasting impression upon him in every way. In fact, he continues, many commanding officers have reported that young recruits often develop into more satisfactory soldiers than older men, because they received their military training during and not after the formative period of their lives.

It should be understood that not all British recruits are of inferior physical types. Men from every walk in life enlist in her Majesty's service, and many of them are splendid chaps bodily. They enter the crack regiments, of course. It is not expected that any of the raw recruits will be sent out at this time. The British aim is always to have the fighting done by seasoned soldiers, and should it continue in any instance till they are exhausted, the new soldiers will have been pretty well trained meanwhile.

Recruiting sergeants are paid 60 cents for every ordinary recruit: for a recruit suitable to enter the Scots Guards, the cavalry, the engineers, or the artillery, whose qualifications must be of a higher order than those of a recruit for most regiments of foot soldiers, the pay is $1.25. Much more is often allowed for a man fit to be a Life Guardsman; the equivalent of $15 is not unprecedented, and there are some other regiments recruits for which bring fancy pay to the sergeant securing them.

Take No False Step.
Life and Health Are At Stake.

YOUR CASE CALLS FOR THE USE OF Paine's Celery Compound
Physicians and Druggists Recommend It.

One false step taken at this time when you are weak, nervous, sleepless, despondent, or suffering from the agonies of rheumatism and neuralgia may prove fatal.

Thousands are now hovering near the grave who can be brought back to their former health and strength if Paine's Celery Compound be faithfully used for a time. This wonderful medical discovery is acknowledged by physicians to be the greatest boon ever placed before suffering and half-dead men and women.

Paine's Celery Compound is at the present time doing a marvellous work all over this Canadian Dominion. The sick are throwing aside medicines and remedies used for weeks and months without good results, and now have their confidence firmly established in Paine's Celery Compound, the medicine that truly bestows new life.

This statement is made on the strength of letters received from the sick and suffering and their friends. Cures are effected for thousands whose lives had been despaired of cases that baffled the skill of able physicians.

If your life is made miserable by nervousness, sleeplessness, heart trouble, stomach derangements, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuralgia, liver or kidney troubles, try the magical effects of one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and you will joyfully go on until you stand on the solid rock of health.

Pigg, Hogg and Bacon Meet.

To the casual observer yesterday the register of the Savoy Hotel looked more like an inventory book of a packing house than a hotel register. Early yesterday morning a stranger entered the hotel and signed: "J. R. Pigg, Windsor, Mo."

A few minutes later two men stepped up to the desk and signed just below Mr. Pigg's signature: "C. B. Hogg, Canton, Ohio," and "Brown and Bacon, Chicago."

The three gentlemen who attached such strange names in juxtaposition were not acquainted with each other, but when the hotel clerk saw the strange signatures, the three gentlemen whose names attracted so much attention were eagerly sought by the curious, and it was but a short time before Messrs. Pigg, Hogg and Bacon were good friends.

Mr. Pigg said that he had nothing to do with any packing house, as he was a government mail contractor of Windsor, Mo. Mr. Hogg said that he and Mr. Bacon were travelling men.—Kansas City Journal.

Fighting the Fires.

Hard life the plucky firemen lead; out in all sorts of weather, —losing sleep, catching cold and straining their backs.

Hard to have strong, well kidneys under such conditions. That's why firemen, policemen and others, who are exposed to the weather, are so often troubled with Weak, Lame Backs and with Urinary Troubles.

DOAN'S Kidney Pills are helping hundreds of such to health. Mr. John Robinson, chief of the fire department, Dresden, Ont., says: "Prior to taking these pills I had kidney trouble which caused severe pain in the small of my back and in both sides. I had a tired feeling and never seemed to be able to get rested. However, I commenced the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, and after taking three boxes am completely cured. I have now no backache or urinary trouble, and the tired feeling is completely gone. In fact, I am well and strong."

Wasted Forethought.
Pat Maloney was nailing a box containing articles which he intended to send by rail. From the nature of the contents a friend knew it was essential that the box should not be inverted during the passage. He ventured to suggest to Pat to write, conspicuously on the case: "This side up with care." A few days afterwards, seeing Pat again, he asked: "Heard any more about your goods? Did they get there safely?" "Every one of them broke," said Pat. "The whole lot? Did you label it. 'This side up,' as I told you?" "Yes I did. And for fear they shouldn't see it on the cover, I put it on the bottom too."—London Answer.

A CARD.
We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a twenty-five cent bottle of Dr. Will's English Pills, if, after using three-fourths of contents of bottle, they do not relieve Constipation and Headache. We also warrant that four bottles will permanently cure the most obstinate case of Constipation. Satisfaction or no pay when Will's English Pills are used.
