

THIN GIRLS GET PLUMP

while using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food.

There comes a critical time in the life of every woman when the bud of girlhood is unfolding into the full blown flower of womanhood. Mothers at this time should carefully guard their daughters' health, for this is a time when many a girl falls victim to insidious diseases which make life a misery.

Loss of flesh, headaches, pains in back and side, nervousness, irritability, dull eyes and a pale, sallow complexion, these are the symptoms that warn you to use Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food.

The blood is impoverished and the nerves require nutrition. Nature must have assistance and there is no better way to help nature than by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. It is a food for blood and nerves, and creates rich, red blood, solid flesh and new nerve tissue. The color will return to the cheek, the brightness to the eye, and increase in weight will tell of solid advance in health.

If you watch the proceedings in Parliament session by session you will notice that two or three members at least drop off between the beginning and the close. This year there has been a heavier mortality than usual. Among those who have crossed the bar are a minister of the crown, an ex-minister, and the speaker of the House. Sir James Edgar was a good type of the Canadian public man. He died full of honour and honours, if not of years, and one of the most uncompromising of the opposition papers says of him:—"As Speaker of the House, Sir James Edgar decided the points that came before him with judicial impartiality, giving equal justice to both parties. Although failing in health for a long time, he kept loyally at his post, and only gave up when he was physically impossible for him to attend to his duties any longer." His death brought forth eloquent remarks from two eloquent men. The Prime Minister said:—"It has been very often my duty during the present session to announce sad news to the House, and I feel most painfully the necessity under which I now am of again being placed in the position of performing this very sad duty. We have been really living in the shadow of death ever since this session was opened. Death has been unrelenting, and it has chosen its victims amongst the most useful and experienced members of this House. It is the consensus of opinion on both sides of this House that he discharged his duty with fairness, and with general acceptance." Mr. Foster had this to say:—"Death has come very suddenly. It has come to our side of the House as well. Colleagues on both sides have been stricken down very suddenly without a note of warning, and both sides have been afflicted. It only goes to show us that as my right hon. friend has said, we are all living in the shadow of death, and it is a salutary lesson to us that in all our little differences, which are only little differences, we are members of one common human family, bound over a very short road for a land unknown. I think it ought to temper, as I have no doubt it does temper, the heat of party strife, and the impetuosity of party debate. At these times we more than at any other time find that we are all men and brothers." Sentiments and the speeches which they call forth should teach all even in public positions to guard their words, to be scrupulously true to opponents, in this sphere, which we all hope is but the threshold of life.

While the common law may allow a man to chastise his wife, even more than moderately, and with a more effective weapon than his tongue, modern public opinion looks upon the wife and child beater as the worst kind of a coward and scoundrel. Out west the people have a way of punishing reprobrates without waiting for the slow process of the law, and they often seem to put it about right. A paper from Elkhorn, Man. says:—"For some little time past there has been a feeling existing against Mr. E. H. Hayward, who resides in town and works a farm a few miles out. Rumors were afloat that he had been most abusive towards his wife and family and a number of people had an opportunity of judging something of his temperament one day last week, when he roughly handled his son for not obeying some command. This was done publicly and aroused quite a feeling against Mr. Hayward. On Friday night a masked gang caught him in his back yard and took him down to the pump house, where a current of water was allowed to play over him for awhile. He was let up and went home swearing vengeance. On Monday Hayward went to Virden and laid a complaint against five citizens on a charge of assault and battery. On Tuesday he was arrested on a charge of threatening to shoot his wife. He was bound in $400 to keep the peace."

It is apt to depend much on a man's purse as to his views on labour and capital. Dr. Johnson said when he was a poor man he was a great arguer for poverty. If instead of being next door to the poor house, I was worth my tens of thousands, I suppose I could be great on vested rights. There are not many of us whose conduct would have differed from the rich young man in the Holy Writ, who when told to sell all that he had and give to the poor, "went away sorrowful for he had great possessions."

Silk-Producing Fish.

A Mediterranean shell-fish known as the pianna has the curious power of spinning a viscid silk, which is made in Italy into a regular fabric. This silk is spun by the shell-fish in the first place for the purpose of attaching itself to the rocks. It is able to guide the delicate filaments to the proper place, and then glue them fast, and if they are cut away it can reproduce them.

The material when gathered—which is done at low tide—is washed in soap and water, dried and straightened, one pound of the coars filament yielding three ounces of the fine thread, which, when spun, is of a lovely burnished golden-brown colour.

A lesson In Interest.

Too often is it the case that business men do not realize at the time how quickly the interest eats up principal. The following anecdote of Peter Cooper, the great philanthropist, very forcibly illustrated the point.

Once, while Peter Cooper was talking about a project with an acquaintance, the latter said he would have to borrow money for six months, paying interest at the rate of three per cent. a month.

"Why do you borrow for so short a time?" Mr. Cooper asked.

"Because the brokers will not negotiate bills for longer."

"Well, if you wish," said Mr. Cooper, I will discount your note at that rate for three years."

"Are you in earnest?" asked the would-be borrower.

"Certainly I am. I will discount your note for $10,000 for three years at that rate. Will you do it?"

"Of course I will," said the merchant.

"Very well," said Mr. Cooper. "Just sign this note for $10,000, payable in three years, and give me your check for $800, and the transaction will be complete."

"But where is the money for me?" asked the astonished merchant.

"You don't get any money," was the reply. "Your interest for thirty-six months at three per cent. a month amounts to 108 per cent., or $10,800. Therefore, your cheque for $800 just makes us even."

The force of this practical illustration of the folly of paying such an exorbitant price for the use of money was such that the merchant determined never to borrow at such ruinous rates, and he frequently used to say that nothing could have so fully convinced him as this rather humorous proposal of Mr. Cooper.—Business.

Rheumatism Can't Exist

Deliver us From our Friends.

A good many long standing ledger accounts may very often be attributed to the influence of social considerations, which, to the socially inclined nature, are about as difficult as anything I know to resist. The business man who thinks he can work the social element of the community in which he lives to his financial advantage, has got to have a level head to steer clear of the complications that arise from it. He will find himself in troubled waters, if he places any great reliance on the good fellows, whose acquaintance it is so easy to make and so hard to shake off when they have got their hook in his regard and their names on his ledger. The time is bound to come when he will say, "Deliver me from my friends."

It is not always the poor crops nor a financial panic that is the cause of the failure of so many business men; as very often the real cause for it lies deeper than these. Most any business man of long experience knows that his greatest difficulties have come to him by reason of the influence that his friends had over him. He had been led to do things many times that his own judgment condemned as being unsafe and to be avoided but the glamor of friendship and the sense of imagined social obligations proved to be the stronger, and disaster was the result, as will always be, when the true principles of business are ignored in favor of friendly considerations only. There are of course some instances where a man strong enough to act independently in both business and social matters. To make money in business and keep it are two qualifications that are not often found together in the make-up of the same individual. For as soon as it is made there are a hundred influences set to work to get it away from him. And in all these there is nothing so strong as the persuasiveness of social inducements.—Exchange.

"Two little boys of mine were troubled with worms. They would wake in the night and vomit and sometimes were quite feverish. I got a bottle of Dr. Low's Worm Syrup which gave them complete relief from their trouble." Mrs. Wm. Mercel, Teeterville, Ont.

Absentmindedness.

The things Hixon does during his frequent attacks of absentmindedness are of a character that gives his friends grave fears regarding his lunacy. The other day he came out of his house, walked to the edge of the pavement, threw his right leg into the air with a vaulting movement, and fell sprawling to the ground.

A friend who came along it time to witness this singular performance said to him: "What, Hixon, in time do you mean by such a performance?"

Hixon got up, brushing the dirt from his garments, and rubbing his bruises, while he said: "Well, I thought I was getting on my wheel, and hang it all, I forgot that I didn't have my wheel with me!"—Harper's Bazar.

SCALDED HER HAND.

Mrs. T. Wannamaker, Frankford, Ont., says: "I scalded my hand very badly and then took cold in it. It swelled and was very painful, but half a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil cured it completely."
