The real work of life, lament as we will, complain as we may, must be done, not upon the mountain, but in the valleys.

Morality and goodness that lie no deeper than "behaviour" are like the veneering they put on cheap tables—very tawdry and soon peels off.

Insane Man Found.

FREDERICTON, July 31.—Roderick Price, of Stanley, who escaped from the Provincial Lunatic Asylum last week, walked in from Tracey Station to Fredericton yesterday, and a little later reported at Tomilson Hotel, at St. Marys. He was not long there before his strange actions became the subject of comment, and it was concluded the man's mind was disordered. The city police were communicated with late in the evening, and City Marshall Roberts went over shortly before midnight and took Price in charge. He had when Roberts arrived gone to bed, and when the officer entered the room he jumped out of bed naked and crawled under the bed stea. It was gathered from conversations with Price that he had walked to St. George from Fairville, and thence directed his course towards Fredericton.

Dreyfus Foes Give Up.

July 25.—This Dreyfus affair is entering upon a new phase. The ultra partisans of his guilt have been given up the fight and interest in the case now centres in the man himself, the brilliant lawyers who are to defend him, his faithful wife and the extent of his triumph, and above all what will follow after his acquittal.

When Capt. Dreyfus shall have wholly disappeared from the scene will the guilty officers be punished? If so, how many, and how severely? On what lines will the anti-Semites and the Republicans continue their fight? Will Major. Marchand's boom, now a dark spot on the political horizon, be developed? Will the Republicans see their danger and stand together against their common enemies? How and when will the present cabinet, formed simply to liquidate the Dreyfus affair, fall, and who will succeed M. Waldeck-Rousseau? There are enough questions to continue to give French home politics the deepest interest for many months to come, even when poor Dreyfus shall have been restored to the bosom of his family, as will be the case before the close of the coming month.
