

TOBACCO HEART.

Have you been smoking a good deal lately and feel an occasional twinge of pain round your heart. Are you short of breath, nerves unninged, sensation of pins and needles going through your arms and fingers? Better take a box or two of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and get cured before things become too serious. Here's what Mr. John James, of Caledonia, Ont., has to say about them: "I have had serious heart trouble for four years, caused by excessive use of tobacco. At times my heart would beat very rapidly and then seemed to stop beating only to commence again with unmeasured rapidity. This unhealthy action of my heart caused shortness of breath, weakness and debility. I tried many medicines and spent a great deal of money but could not get any help. Last November, however, I read of a man, afflicted like myself, being cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I went to Roper's drug store and bought a box. When I had finished taking it I was so much better I bought another box and this completed the cure. My heart has not bothered me since, and I strongly recommend all sufferers from heart and nerve trouble, caused by excessive use of tobacco, to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a fair and faithful trial."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25, at all druggists. T. Milburn & Co., Toronto.

HISTORIC BOSTON. Observations by a Visitor from This County.

The city of Boston contains many priceless relics of revolutionary days, and any one with an historical turn of mind will find much to interest him in the various museums. A great many people from Carleton County have seen the old South Church, the old State House, Faneuil Hall, and old North Church but comparatively few have invaded their gloomy recesses to examine the old treasures so dear to American hearts. The old State House surrounded as it is by lofty buildings of later years, looks quite insignificant in comparison, but was considered no doubt a fine building nearly 150 years ago. The bricks of this old building are black and weather beaten, and the lion and the unicorn occupy still, a conspicuous place on the top of the building. This building contains many old paintings and war relics such as muskets, powder horns, uniforms, dishes, bullet moulds, etc., used by prominent patriots and loaned by their descendants to this museum. Among other things one can see an old punch bowl used by the famous Paul Revere also some tea which was thrown overboard from a British ship before the Revolution broke out. It was taken from the ports of one of the "tea party" who were disguised as Indians.

The old South Church now closed to the public while undergoing repairs, is much weather eaten, and covered with ivy which partly conceals a tablet telling how the church was "desecrated" by British troops in 1775. It seems that the main body of the church was used as a sleeping place for the soldiers, and one night during a terrific storm the troopers led their horses into the basement thus desecrating it. An English cannon ball is said to be embedded into its side. The old shingles were torn off this summer and replaced by new ones and it is said that the relic hunters carried away nearly all the nails and debris as souvenirs of this old and historic building. It also contains much of historic interest.

On Salem St. stands old North Church very famous in Revolutionary days. It resembles the old South very much, and it was from its tower that the lantern was displayed warning Paul Revere to start on his midnight ride to warn the people of Lexington and Concord that the British troops were coming on the morrow.

A visit to the Charlestown Navy yard will surely prove interesting to the visitor. This yard is one of a number, where the United States government keep a large number of marines in Barracks and where the ships of the navy are overhauled and refitted for the sea. Its area is about 100 acres and it is covered with immense works. After passing the sentry at one of the different gates the first thing to arrest attention is the great number of immense smooth bore guns, now condemned, lying in rows at one end of the yard. Great pyramids of shot and shell are handy by. The marines occupy a large roomy four storied Barracks built of granite. Admiral Sampson of Spanish war fame is at present the commandant. Shortly after the writer's entrance a bugle sounded the "fall in" and then he had the pleasure of seeing about 400 marines undergo inspection and then perform drill for a couple of hours. Their drill is quite similar to that of the British army in many movements. The men were mostly young and well set up. A good sprinkling of Canadians are to be found in the ranks. Among the ships now at the yard undergoing repairs is the now famous "Olympia" the Machias, Vesurius, Chesapeake, Bancroft and others.

It was the writer's good fortune to get aboard the Olympia, by representing himself as a militia officer and by tipping a marine, while visitors by the score were being turned back by the guard on the wharf. A few dents on her sides barely show that she was ever under fire. The crew of the Olympia were on board the old receiving ship "Wabash" and are certainly a fine looking body of Jack Tars. The old Wabash was for many years the flag ship of the American squadron in Europe, and she also took a prominent part in the civil war, notably in the reduction of forts Clark, Hatteras, Port Royal and Pulaski, being the flag ship of Admiral Dupont. She also took a prominent part in the blockade of Charleston S. C. Her spars, guns and engines have been removed, and she is now roofed in a large floating barracks. Everything is neat as wax about this ship. Another famous old ship to be seen in this Navy yard is the "Constitution." This ship was launched in Boston Oct. 21st 1797 having cost $302,917. She was 175 feet long and 43 feet wide. Her complement consisted of 450 officers and men, and carried 44 guns. In 1803 in the war with Tripoli she recaptured the frigate "Philadelphia" from the enemy and the peace negotiations were held in her cabin. In the war of 1812 while under the command of Capt. Isaac Hull she was chased by the English ships "Guerriere" "Belvedere" "Aeolus" "Shannon" and Africa for three days and nights, but she succeeded in making her escape. In this war she captured the "Guerriere" of 38 guns commanded by Capt. Dacres, also the "Java" of 38 guns. In 1815 while cruising off Maderia she captured the Cyran and Levant the latter of 34 guns and the former of 21. Many English merchantmen fell a prey to this ship. She is also roofed in and is kept merely as a relic like our old "Victory" in Portsmouth, England. The "Pedro" which was about the first prize in the Spanish war is also moored to the wharf here. The museum in connection with this yard contains many things to interest a visitor. Here is to be seen a ship of war made entirely of beef bones, complete in every detail, by an American sailor held as a prisoner of war in Dartmoor, England Stone cannon balls from the Dardanelles, Chinese breech loading guns of 1370, war clubs from the Pacific Islands, etc., go towards making a very interesting museum.

Cambridge has many historical relics, one of which is the old elm tree under which Gen. Washington took over the command of the American army, also some old brass guns used by the Americans in the siege of Boston. A monument marks the place where a portion of the American army was reviewed before marching to participate in the battle of Bunker Hill. It was in this city that Gen.

Burgoyne's officers were quartered after their capture on the 17th Oct. 1777. There is an old land mark in West Somerville known as the old powder house. It is built on a rocky eminence but granite steps and gravelled walks now make it easy to access. It seems that old tower was built by John Mallet on a site purchased in 1703 and was deeded in 1747 to the province of Massachusetts Bay in New England: It was used for many years as a public powder house. On Sept. 1st. 1774 Gen. Gage seized 250 half barrels of gun powder stored within it and thereby provoked the great assembly on the following day in Cambridge common to protest against the action of the British government. In the year 1775 this old tower became the magazine of Washington's army besieging Boston. The old tower is in an excellent state of preservation, is conical in shape and probably 50 feet high. There is an old well in West Somerville where the English and American armies often stopped to quench their thirst. Many sharp fights took place here and monuments now mark the spots. The bodies of some poor British soldiers are right under the sidewalk and thousands pass over them daily. A granite slab on the edge of the sidewalk bears the following inscription.

"On April 19th, 1775 a sharp fight between the Patriots and British took place here. This marks British soldiers' graves." Another slab states that at this place four citizens were killed by British soldiers retreating from Lexington.

The town of Lexington, about 18 miles from Boston is still as it was then a rather unpretentious place on the road from that city to Concord. The writer started one fine morning from the city of Waltham and wheeled over the historic road still lined with the stone fences behind which the Americans concealed themselves and poured a destructive fire into the retreating British on the memorable morning of April 19th, 1775. A large monument in the public square commemorates the battle fought here and the names of the Americans killed are inscribed on its sides. Another granite boulder marks the alignment occupied by the American forces. An old house occupied by the pastor of the village at that time once an ardent evolutionist, is still carefully preserved and used as a museum where many interesting relics are to be found. It was in this house that Sam Adams and John Hancock, two patriot leaders were peacefully slumbering on the night of the 18th of April when they were rather rudely disturbed by Paul Revere who only had to say "The regulars are coming." The bed they occupied is still there. Muskets and powder horns used in the battle, a gold watch taken from the body of a British soldier, a facsimile of the parvee signed by Gen. Burgoyne and his officers, the boots of Governor J. Dudley who was governor from 1702 to 1704, the saddle bags of Serg. Joseph Fisk who was present at the capture of Louisburg and Ticonderago and hundreds of other relics are to be seen here.

After dispersing the Americans Col. Smith continued his march to Concord, destroyed some stores and then commenced his retreat. He was reinforced at Lexington by 900 men under the command of Lord Percy, but in getting back to Boston they lost 300 men. We trust, Mr. Editor that these rambling and very much abridged accounts will prove of some little interest to those who have not visited those interesting places.

J. J. B. BEYOND COMPARISON There is Nothing in the World to Compare in Curative Value with Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets for Dyspepsia.

Vegetable pepsin is the most valuable constituent in the pineapple. Barring the digestive juices of the human system, no other article or product has the power to digest all kinds of food, except vegetable pepsin. One's general health would be amazingly improved if he could eat a pineapple a day, but hardly one person in a thousand could do so because of the trouble and expense of getting them when out of season. Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets have all the virtues of the ripe fruit—they are largely made up of the precious pineapple acid. They cure dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Box of 60 Tablets, 35 cents. For sale by Garden Bros.
