A MONTH has passed since Bjorkman, the Swede, committed the foul crime of killing his associate, Gustaf Johnstun, at Westmanland plantation and no trace has ever been found of the murderer, who sought refuge in the dense wilderness on the west as soon as his deed was accomplished. No reward for this apprehension has ever been offered and he will probably escape the justice he so richly merits.—Aroostook Republic.

HOULTON LIBRARY. There is no doubt about a Free Public Library for Houlton. It is an assured fact that this greatly needed requisite for the advancing of our educational interests will soon be in running order and opened to the public. Already a large sum of money has been pledged for this purpose and more has been promised. The Trustees are getting together a large number of books which, with those of the former collection, will make an excellent collection for a starter.—Times.

THE MARITIME PURE FOOD Co. are keeping up their reputation for a good article. About all the goods now on hand are sold. They have secured a Mr. Ling from Ontario who will manage the making of fancy pickles, a business into which the company are entering. Just now the hands are busy shipping goods. The establishment is well worth visiting to note their handsome display of hams, etc. The first floor on the Carleton street building is now thoroughly completed. At the north end are the sample room and offices of the manager and book-keeper. The desk in the book-keepers office is a slightly and useful affair, and is of pine finished in native wood put together by the Woodstock Woodworking Co. The manager's office is situated in the corner and from a bow window one can get a beautiful view of the river up and down. It is as nice an office as anyone could wish. The improvements generally speak of the progress of this admirable institution.

REV. JAMES MOOERS, of Ashland, is authority for the following story which seems almost incredible on first hearing it. One day recently Mr. Mooers went to Masardis on a short visiting trip and at about dusk he went out in the field for a short walk. He saw something ahead of him and with the live instinct of the sportsman brought his rifle to his shoulder. He hesitated, for on getting a closer view of the object the outline of a very diminutive deer was clearly described. As Mr. Mooers has already had good success this fall he did not care to kill a deer unless it were a good one, so he lowered his rifle and walked cautiously toward the animal. Much to his surprise not only one deer but two came up to him and made all expressions of joy at seeing him that they could—lapping his face and running around him, brushing against him, etc. Mr. Mooers was annoyed for a time and began to believe that he possessed unusual powers for taming animals, but on returning to the house of his friend he was informed that the deer were tamed through the summer by some children who had made pets of them.—Star Herald.
