Burglars Will Operate.

If there were no watch force on constant guard at the Treasury Department, however, burglars could do about as they chose with the safes in the Treasury building. The safes are as good as any made, but even manufacturers of safes admit that the safe has not yet been devised that the modern cracksmen cannot get into. The best that modern builders of safes can do is to build them in such fashion as to involve the greatest possible consumption of time on the part of the cracksmen who attempt to get into them, thus rendering their detection during the progress of their work more likely.

An expert manipulator of safe combinations was summoned to the Treasury from New York not long ago to open a safe that declined to respond to its figures. The expert opened the safe in half a minute. Then he made a tour of the building, and opened every one of the safes except those fitted with time locks. There was not one of them that he didn't get into within fourteen minutes after making the first turn of the combination handles. He modestly stated to the officials accompanying him that he didn't amount to much as a safe-opener, and that there were any number of cracksmen at large who could do anything he did in one-half to time.

The Treasury watch force is divided into three reliefs, like an army guard, only the Treasury watchman is on post longer than the soldier. His hour of duty lasts eight hours. The first watch of the day goes on at 8 o'clock in the morning. It is relieved at 4 o'clock in the afternoon by the watch which remains on duty until midnight. The midnight watch, which is regarded as the most important of the three, completes the triple-linked guard chain, and goes off and 8 in the morning. Although, as stated, the midnight watch, so called, is considered to carry the greatest weight of responsibility of the three, on account of the well-known nocturnal preferences of burglars. Capt. Coughlin, the head of the watch force, is of the opinion that the day guard needs to be more on the alert for surprises than either night shift.

"Each of the night watches," said he the other day, "is made up of twice the number of men comprising the day watch, in spite of the fact that should an attempt ever be made to loot the Treasury the job would unquestionably be attempted in the daytime. At night it would be impossible for an organized band of robbers to gain access to the building, for all the entrances are securely locked and guarded after four o'clock in the afternoon. A gang of robbers after nightfall would have to employ dynamite and battering rams, and by the time they had made a thoroughfare they would be flanked by the entire police force of the district, the soldiers from Fort Myer and Washington barracks, and the Marine barracks, with all of which forces we have direct alarm communication. Such an assault is about as probable as another sacking of Washington by the British.

"We should have much more difficulty in repelling a day invasion. A large number of robbers, for instance, might walk into the building in broad daylight, when the department is open to visitors, entering at the many different doors, so as not to attract attention. At a given signal, all of them having assembled at a convenient spot, they might make an onslaught upon the cash-room, where in the neighborhood of $600,000,000 in currency is kept, and holds up the clerk and other employees in the room at once.

"An attack of this sort would give the men of the day watch a heap of thinking to do within a short space of time. Of course, even if a band of daylight robbers successfully accomplished this trick, they could not get away with their booty, even if they had race horses waiting for them outside the building. They would be swooped down upon by uniformed men in such numbers that with them it would be a case of hands up before they had reached the exits. Notwithstanding all this, a daylight robbery of the Treasury is much more practicable than a night robbery, although I should not particularly care to be a ringleader of such foolhardy robbers, either at high noon or midnight. There would be some tall old shooting in this building on such an occasion."

The watchmen distributed through the Treasury at night, are each required to ring up the main entrance by touching a button every five minutes during their tour of duty. In case they do not register it is taken for granted that there is something wrong, and a patrol is sent to investigate. A few years ago the man who was locked in the cash-room for his eight-hour tour, beginning at midnight, overlooked the registering end of his job after the first half hour, and the patrol approached that part of the building with the light footfalls of Italian opera conspirators, each mae with a Winchester and a pair of 48's. The watchman was found stretched out on the floor—not dead, but deliriously happy. There was a nearly empty quart flask beside him. He lost his job, of course. These are the sort of scares that are occasionally thrown into the watch force, but the men who guard the building are always waiting, nevertheless, for the actual appearance of the men with the masks and the jimmies.

QUILTS STUFFED WITH SILK.

Attempt of a Chicago Man to Smuggle Goods From Sarnia.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 12.—Ex-Alderman John Ritter, of Chicago, was arrested on a Grand Trunk train between Port Huron and Detroit by United States Customs officials today charged with smuggling a large quantity of valuable silks into the United States from Canada. Ritter, who conducts a large clothing and furnishings house in Chicago, arrived in Sarnia last Thursday night with a large consignment of goods for Chicago. All the cloths and bolts of dress goods and fine silk tapestries were duly entered at Port Huron Customs-house, and the ex-alderman was almost past detection when there was a delay of trains, and an unexpected transfer of baggage on the Michigan side of the river. A porter picked up a bundle of silk quilts which Ritter had entered as "personal belongings," and astonished at their weight, remarked aloud that "These are kinder heavy for silk bedding." Special Officer Buzell heard the remark, and seeing a clue to a possible smuggler, jumped on the train as it was pulling out. Once started the officer entered the baggage car and searched the "heavy" quilts. They were genuine bedding, but instead of being stuffed with cotton, were found to be filled with high-priced silk vestings.

Ritter, on arrival in Detroit, was placed under arrest on a charge of smuggling. He was released on $2,000 bond to appear before the grand jury when wanted.

All on Account of the Baby.

A woman accomplished a daring feat on the railroad platform at Evanston, Ill., the other day. She and her husband had been telegraphed to take the first train for Kenosha, Wis., where a child of theirs was ill and could not recover. The fast mail train, which never stops at Evanston, was the first one going West after they received the message. Telegrams were submitted to the railway people, and they were tearfully begged to stop the train. A telegram was sent to the superintendent in Chicago. He replied that he could not stop the train, though he would like to do it. Suddenly when the fast mail came into sight at Evanston, running at the rate of fifty miles an hour, the young woman pulled a crimson lined cape from her shoulders, leaped on the track and waved the garment frantically. The engineer shut off steam and the big train came to a halt. The trainmen jumped off and demanded to know the trouble. "My baby is dying. That is the trouble. You must take me to Kenosha." "We'll do it," was the answer, and husband and wife stepped aboard.

The Credit Man's Costly Error.

Sometimes a caedit man goes all wrong—but not often. A country merchant came up from Indiana with a written list of things he wanted. He said he was new to the business, but he meant to have a partner who was wise. After he had picked out goods amounting to $8000 he was introduced to the credit man, and he looked so much uncouth and efficient that the credit man wondered how good clerks had been wasting their time on him.

"What terms do you want Mr.—?" He stopped and the visitor supplied the name.

"Well down in our country we always pay after harvest."

But harvest is past. You don't mean next harvest—in 1900—do you?"

"Well that's when my people will pay me."

"Oh, we couldn't do that. Ninety days is the very best I can give you." And even at that he wanted to know a great many things about his visitors prospects.

"How much if I pay all in sixty days?"

The credit man quoted the terms.

"How much in thirty?"

A discount was mentioned.

"How much for cash?"

"Spot cash? Money down?"

"Yes—currency."

It was a wild question. The credit man

A TERRIBLE TIME!

A Port Hope Lady Undergoes a trying experience, from which she is at last freed by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mr. F. J. ARMSTRONG, one of Port Hope's best known citizens, speaks as follows:—

"My wife has had a terrible time with her heart for the last fifteen months. The pains were intense, and she had a smothering feeling together with shortness of breath, weakness and general debility. Medicine seemed to do her no good, and we had about given up trying when she started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They have toned her up wonderfully.

"She is stronger to-day than she has been for months, thanks to Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I am sure there can be no better remedy from their remarkable effects in Mrs. Armstrong's case."

man knew he had no chance to get $8000 out of that man, and he quoted a beautiful discount.

"Well receipt the bill," was the countryman's rejoinder. And out of the fold of a $3 suit of clothes he dragged money enough to buy a yacht and run it all summer.

He didn't put on much stile, but he "figures" he saved the expense of his Chicago trip.—Chicago Post.
