Consumption

is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home.

is, we are informed, about to open up a general store in the village. It is presumed that he will take the stand recently occupied by his brother; although there are some rumors to the effect that he may build a large brick block. Whichever he does he has the good wishes of the people of the village and plenty of money to back his undertaking.

Several prominent liberals went to Woodstock last week to assist at the convention and nomination of a candidate and also to hear Messrs Blair and Davis.

The greatest grief of a man's life is the discovery that his daughter has grown old enough to fear for his immortal soul and has commenced praying for him.

THE CHINESE TROUBLE.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The Austrian ambassador here, Count Von Szogyeny Marich, in an interview today with a representative of the Associated Press, said:

"There is an erroneous opinion in the press about Count Von Walderssee's mission. A number of important tasks await him. Above all he must force China to submit to the allied powers' peace conditions. Moral suasion is entirely wasted upon the Chinese government, which far from being humiliated hitherto, still indulges in the hope of cheating the allies out of the fruits of their victories, by effecting disharmony among them. Von Walderssee must arrange what military demonstrations are required, what harbors and inland town must be occupied, which points require expeditions and which troops may retire from Peking."

All the powers are bound to this programme by agreeing upon Von Walderssee as commander-in-chief. But each may reduce or increase its contingent at will.

The Lokal Anzeiger prints a special despatch from Shanghai saying Count Von Walderssee, after his arrival at Peking, will occupy the imperial palace, remove the dragon flag and hoist his own flag. "Thereby proving to the Chinese, who now regard the allied troops as merely tolerated, that the allied forces are really masters."

The acrid criticism of the Russian policy by the press is not the only sign of British awakening on China questions. The exchange of posts by the British Ministers in the Far East is not accepted in diplomatic circles as due entirely to Sir Claude Macdonald's impaired health. Sir Ernest Satow is described as a diplomat possessing great influence in Tokio, and who may have special reasons for promoting a good understanding between England and Japan, and who certainly will be a match for the wildest Russian in Peking. He has risen step by step from the lowest grade of the consular service to the front rank of the diplomatic service, and has spent the greater part of his life in the East. Inferences drawn from his transfer to Peking may be inaccurate, but there is a general impression among well-informed men here that Lord Salisbury, after remaining in the background, is now coming strongly to the front and that Russia and Germany will speedily be reminded that the British policy in China has been transformed by the close of hostilities in South Africa.

Close students of the China situation have been convinced for several weeks that the powers and the Imperial Government have not been earnest in their negotiations, but have been playing for a position in the great diplomatic game. Russia, in proposing evacuation, was attempting to ingratiate herself in China's favor in order to establish a semi-protectorate over Peking and obtain Manchuria in return for benefits conferred. Germany, in opposing that policy and making a counter proposal for the surrender and punishment of guilty Mandarins, was filing pauses and allowing Count Von Walderssee time for reaching China and assuming command of the international forces.

The Chinese negotiators have been working from the outset for the protection of the Empress, and striving to break up any concerted action of the powers. Whether they have claimed authority from the Emperor or have offered to produce the Empress under adequate guarantees of safety or have reported that she was out of reach in Shanghai they have been seeking to make peace on the basis of her retention in power. The same motive is disclosed in the explanation offered by the Chinese Minister here that the viceroys and governors are empowered by an Imperial edict to exterminate the Boxers, but to open the way for peace with the powers.

After all these moves for position the real game is now opening in earnest. Russian troop will remain in Peking, Walderssee is close at hand, and the chief question to be settled is whether the Empress shall be allowed to return to the forbidden city and resume her despotic sway, after being more responsible than any of her Mandarins for the reign of terror and bloodshed.

Just as the tiny shells make up the chalk hills, and the chalk hills together make up the range, so the trifling actions make up the whole account, and each of these must be pulled asunder separately. You had an hour to spare the other day—what did you do? You had a voice—how did you use it? You had a pen—you could use that—how did you employ it? Each particular shall be brought out, and there shall be demanded an account for each one.—Spurgeon.
