Wives Should Keep Their Individuality.

The days are gone—if they ever existed—when love was "woman's whole existence," as Lord Byron put it. Even the most devoted wives can never have felt that in being the alter ego of a man, however noble and worthy, they have fulfilled their life part. We have our individual self, every one of us, before wifehood comes to make it complex. Afterward that individual self may fetch and carry all its days, and find a certain happiness in its subordination; but, unless the mated soul that it serves is an essentially high and worthy one, there is almost a degradation in the complete effacement of the individuality.

It is unnatural. Women was made to be a "helpmeet" to man, on the same level with him, not an inferior being, who is expected to suit herself to his requirements. Such an attitude on the part of the wife is far from salutary for the husband, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. It encourages egotism and self-importance. Nor does a man love so well the wife who makes herself a doormat for him. A certain great statesman, whose wife subordinated her whole existence to his, was anything but polite in his manner to her. Persons who saw them together noticed his petulant rudeness, in such vivid contrast with his agreeable, almost courtly, manner to other ladies of his acquaintance. It is regrettable that women, out of their very devotion and selflessness, should absolutely injure the man for whom they give up everything.

Photography With a Fly's Eye.

Particulars of an interesting experiment are given in the German periodical Mitter Erde. The eye of the fly is of a composite nature, and consists of some 8,000 lenses; but each of these only forms an image of a point perpendicular to the facet constituting the lens. The pictures upon the retina of a fly therefore resemble a mosaic. As the facets are in different planes, and are of various sizes and shapes, they do not all correspond in focus, and it is thus possible for the fly to see objects at various distances, although its visual organs have no power of accommodation. It is no easy task to mount a fly's eye suitably for photographic purposes upon a metal plate without injuring its form or structure; but, after many failures, satisfactory results were secured. It was found that 20 centimetres between object and lens gave the sharpest results, and that the definition was more or less impaired at other distances; but negatives of bright objects, such as street lamps, the brilliant reflections of water, etc., were obtained up to a distance of 8 metres. To obviate the difficulties presented by the short extension of an ordinary camera and dark slides, a tubular camera about 1 metre in length, was tried; but the intensity of the image was so much reduced that three hours' exposure was necessary to obtain a passable negative.

Too much Dignity, by half.

LONDON "South Africa" of July 21st says A second lieutenant recently graduated from Sandhurst, who has just joined his regiment in South Africa, was standing in the market place of a Transvaal town, when a grizzled and unshaven old soldier, wearing khaki breeches, a shirt and a campaign hat, stepped up and stood near him. The young soldier turned on him sharply: "Here you, man, did anyone ever teach you how to salute?" "Yes, sir," drawled the trooper, as he glanced at the youngster. "Well, knock your heels together," said the young officer, and the trooper came to attention with the precision of an old soldier. "Now salute," he said, and the trooper's gauntlet came to the rim of his hat and stayed there until the young lieutenant answered it, at the same time cautioning him not to let it happen again and demanding his name and regiment. Without relaxing his position from attention the old trooper again respectfully saluted, and remarked drily, "My name is —, and I'm brigadier general of the cavalry brigade."

Why He Ran.

Recorder—You were seen last night, about 12 o'clock, under suspicious circumstances, trying to enter the open door of De Smith's shop, on Galveston avenue.

Prisoner—I noticed in passing by that the door was open, and was closing it—that's all. "What did you run for as soon as you saw a policeman?"

"What did I run for when I saw the policeman? Well, that gets me. Why, I am a friend of De Smith, and as soon as I saw his shop door was open, and a suspicious looking policeman sneaking around, I ran as hard as I could to let De Smith know his shop was in danger of being robbed. What did I run for? Well, that gets me. What do you suppose I ran for?"

No Pay For Electioneering.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 5.—Can a man enter into a contract to do electioneering work on election day for a pecuniary consideration and legally recover from a responsible delinquent as in any ordinary commercial transaction? This is a question which may involve some points of law as well as morals. Justice Bateman says no.

The case of William Carr vs. Milk Blount involving the foregoing question, was tried before Justice Bateman. The testimony developed that the plaintiff had worked at the polls all day at the last Democratic primary election, under a contract made with the defendant, whereby the plaintiff was to receive $10 as compensation for his labor, which consisted in distributing circulars in behalf of the tickets in whose election the defendant was interested.

Blount was running for deputy on the Fox sheriffship ticket. He paid Carr $5 of the amount promised, saying he would pay the rest later. This he admitted when put on the witness stand. It was Carr's inability to collect the remaining $5 that caused him to have recourse to the law.

Justice Bateman held for the defendant, not because there was any doubt, he said, of the debt being due the plaintiff under the agreement, but because he believed its nature was such that it could not be recovered. In delivering his verdict, the justice dwelt upon the duty of every citizen to maintain the purity of the electoral franchise, and said: "Such a contract is contrary to public policy, illegal and void, and judgment is therefore rendered in favor of the defendant against the plaintiff, and for costs of suits."

A Mighty Wolf Hunter.

The champion wolf-catcher in the West is no doubt W. B. Ward, who came to this city this week with 332 pelts, 244 of the grey and 78 of the covotes. He got a bounty of $3 per head for the grey wolves and $1 each for the covotes. This made him $810, which is said to be the largest sum of wolf bounty ever paid to one man in the West. Ward uses traps entirely. He came to the Black Hills from the cattle ranges of Texas, where he is considered a wonder. He is said to have a secret preparation which he puts on his traps, which attracts them for miles. He employs several men to help him look after his traps. He has returned to the Cheyenne River, and he will be ready for another pull at the wolf bounty in a few weeks.—Rapid City (S. D.) Correspondence, Chicago 'Record.'

17 YEARS IN USE.

Mrs. Middleton Wray writes from Schomberg, Ont., as follows: "Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the best remedy I know of for Summer Complaint and Bowel Diseases of children. I have used it in our family for the past seventeen years and never had occasion to call in the doctor for these troubles, as the Fowler's Extract always worked like a charm."

Mr. John L. Carter, of Bridgetown, N.S., in the following letter, tells how it saved his life: "I had suffered with dysentery for four weeks and could get nothing to cure me. I then tried Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and I feel that it saved my life. It restored me to health when everything else failed. I consider it a wonderful remedy that should have a place in every home."
