WHEN THE FARM BOY GROWS OT BE A MAN.

What Sometimes Happen then.

The Sun has heard from Tommy Hope again. Tommy is now worrying himself over what is going to happen when he grows to be a man and wants to get married. He says:

What takes away my breath the quickest is when I think of the time when I'll want to get married. There'll be a commotion in our house then. Everything is real quiet now, but when that time comes, then Liz will show up her spiteful nature, ma will bring into action her faultfindingness, Dicky will assume the position of first vice president, and pa will be influenced by the whole caboodle of them. Won't there be a time. I'm glad'll be there. I know just how it will be by the other families around here. I'm looknig forward to the time. We are like a nest of birds now, but when I get married it will be like a bumble bee coming into the nest. There'll be some loud fluttering, and pecking. You see, pa and me are working awful hard trying to pay the mortgage off of our place, and I guess in about 4 or 5 more years we'll do it. Now, it's like this: If I ask pa to pay me for working for him same as he would a hired boy, he'll say he can't aff. d it. Then if I ask him to let me go and work for our neighbor, he says he can't spare me. Of course I'm getting older every day, and I could earn more and more as the years go by. But if I stay at home and work and give pa the benefit of my work, he'll put it on that mortgage, and the whole thing will be his, and if I should tell him he ought to "poney up" for my work and not pocket the whole thing himself, he'll say:

"Tommy, Tommy, it will all be yours when I'm through with it."

But, say, I'm prouder today of my bootjack and umbrella-because they are minethan I am of pa's whole farm. But of course he'll tell it will all be mine. I'll be pacified, and everything will be all right-all right until I get married.

Just let me picture that beautiful scene. I'll go up into heaven and get an angel for my wife, and I'll bring her down here. Of course it will take my folks by surprise. But now, if I only knew enough to take my wife, that I had brought down from heaven, and move seventeen hundred miles away (not quite so far might do), all would be well. We could then visit each other, the fatted calves would be killed, and they'd all think what a nice wife Tommy had, while my wife would congratulate herself on marrying a man with such a nice family behind him, and everything would be lovely-if we didn't stay too long at each others places when we went on visits. But I'll ne er know enough to go seventeen hundred miles away. No, I'll take my wife right straight to my old home-nest, and we'll ask pa for his blessing. Pa won't be used to giving blessings, and he is very honest, so he'll just lay his wrinkled old hand (it will be wrinkled and a little trembly then,) on our heads and he'll say, "May the Lord have mercy on your souls," and we'll hope the Lord will be merciful, and maybe for one very little instant we'll be sorry we went so far as to get married. But human nature is very strong in young married folks and we'll soon get over thinking

Then straightway forthwith ma and L'z and Dicky and pa begin to fault my angel wife. Yes, they'll fault her; they'll peck her all to pieces. Oh, my angel wife; how foolish of you to go in that same nest with your husband's people. I fear, my girl, you'll stay just long enough to learn to hate instead of instead of love, and for all the rest of your they all get to hate each other thoroughly, why then that beautiful scene is at an end, the honeymoon ceases, and the novelty of being married suddenly becomes a thing of the past. With the average farm boy and girl around here it takes about two weeks. but if the girl isn't very talky, it lasts longer, and if she is, about three days ends the whole thing, beautiful scene, honeymoon, novelty and all to a sudden and everlasting

Of course, I'll speak to pa about my prospects, and he'll look about him. I cannot say whether he will build me a little house alongside thy barn or give me two or three rooms in my old home or take himself and the remainder of his family to town. These methods have all been indulged in, and have nearly all ended alike.

"A very small cottage one family will do; But I never saw a house that was large enough for two."

I think that "house" means farm, too. When pa sees I'm not satisfied, he'll keep sayin' to me all the time:

"It will all be yours, Tommy, when I am

Would it not be better for my father to give me out and out what I want to build my home, that which I have truly earned? Would at Charnisay's refusal to respect the terms it not be better than saying, "It will all be yours when I'm through with it?" Yes, Tommy "all yours." But there'll be so many things that I'll want. Maybe it will Good Friday, two days before the surrender, be a new house or a new barn, or maybe further on in life, when one of my boys will into the woman's heart and it illustrates as want an education; then, oh, will the time ever come when I'll wish my dear old father dead? No, no; a thousand times no. But then, only yesterday did I hear Ralph Smith say "he believed the Lord had forgotten his father." Ralph is counted a good boy, and his father a good man. But no; the time will never come to me. Pa will still keep telling me that I shall have what I have earned, and the farm besides (for he has his life insured for Dicky and Liz.) Yes, it will all be mine, but can I believe him? Can I trust him? Will he stand firm and true to what he says? When his business is all straightened up will there be no bitter disappointment? Will the time ever come when I'll have to leave my old home? There are four forsaken homesteads right around my home, and they are all the birthplaces of farmer boys. Oh, how disappointed were those boys when lawyers stepped in and finished up the business, and The gladness that we know when April comes the homes, too. And when I will see his old Into the solitude of this our north, eyesight failing, and his once strong arm grow weak with age, his tottering knees swaying, his old body bent, when I see all this, can I think that his mind, once so strong and clear, is going to stay "steady up" through it all? And because he has not paid me what he owes, when he is laid to rest out there in our family plot, all alone in that lonesome place, will I ever, oh, will I ever, bid my children to never mention his dear old name? Heaven forbid .- Sun, Toronto.

"An Acadian Easter."

Any man who would undertake to write of the poets of Canada must give a good place to Mr. Francis Sherman. And it must be no mean pleasure to us in New Brunswick to remember that Mr. Sherman was born in Fredericton. The first pages of the atlantic Monthly for April are graced with a new poem from Mr. Sherman, called "An Acadian love, and they in return will learn to hate Easter." The poem tells the story of the blockade of Lady La Tour by Seigneur lives, how pleasant it will be. But that's d'Auluay Charnisay at the fort at the mouth the way that everybody else does, and we of the St. John River in 1645: the capitulamust do it too, of course. strengthen the kidneys and bladder, then all trouble is at an end.

Mrs. E. Kidner, a London, Ont., mother, living at 409 Grey St., says: "My little daughter, six years old, has had weak kidneys since birth. Last February I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Strong's drug store. Since taking them she has had no more kidney trouble of any kind. I gladiy make this statement because of the benefit my child has received from this medicine' of the truce. The story is told in alternate pieces of monologue and narrative. The half prayer half soliliquy of Lady La Tour on fairly illustrates Mr. Sherman's power to see well his power to make music;-

"Surely, O Christ, upon this day Thou wilt have pity, even on me! Hold thou the hands of Charnisay, Or bid them clasp, remembering thee.

"O Christ, thou knowest what it is To strive with mighty evil men; Lean down from thy high cross, and kiss My arms till they grow strong again.

"(As on that day I drove him back Into Port Royal with his dead! Our cannon made the snow drifts black, But there, I deem, the waves were red.)

"Yea, keep me, Christ, until La Tour (Oh, the old days in old Rochelle!) Cometh to end this coward's war And send his soul straightway to hell."

Through the poem there are references to nature that appeal strongly to one who has seen spring open in this northern region of

"O golden France, Long lost and nigh forgotten! do they know Who walk to-day between your palaces And the snows vanish as her flying feet Are heard upon the hill? There organs, now, Do they sound unto heaven a prouder strain Than these great pines? Hark how the wind booms through Their topmost branches, come from the deep sea: And how old Fundy sends its roaring tides High up against the rocks.

Mr. Sherman has never struck so good a vein as in "An Acadian Easter," and people who love poetry will look forward with pleasant anticipation to something else from him in the same vein.
