The Woodstock Volunteers.

Lines written by Daisy Hughes, whose brother is one of the boys. The sun was slowly sinking on a dreary winter day, As the boys in blue with hearts as true started for the war away. There were loyal hearts in that little band that bade us all farewell, To go to fight for England's right in the land of the far Transvaal.

Oh! who can tell what their thoughts were then, as they bade us all good bye. Oh! when shall we see our friends again, come from each heart with a sigh. Our lives we are willing to sacrifice, we go without a fear. Ah! fear is far too weak a thing for a Woodstock volunteer.

There were many sad and sorrowful hearts in Woodstock here that night. To see our noble boys go forth to fight for England's right. But God and their country calls them, they go without a fear, Ah! fear is far too weak a thing for a Woodstock Volunteer.

So parents, sisters and sweethearts and all their friends so true, We will try to send them many a cheer across the ocean blue. We will try to bear their loss to us with courage brave and well, And pray they will all come back safe from the war in the far Transvaal.

Catarrh of the Stomach—

Could often be prevented had the patient with a stomach and digestive organs predisposed to weakness, been stimulated by some such pure, wholesome power as contained in the vegetable pepsin out of which Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets are prepared. But the world is finding it out—medical science is making rapid strides—and the sufferers are not having their pockets "bled" for a cure. 60 tablets 35 cents.

In Central America.

Five or six years ago (so the story goes) a consignment of goods got mixed up, and a druggist in one of the five republics received a key of liver-regulator and a crate of empty bottles for hair- tonic—the medicine and bottles are generally shipped separately to dodge a clause in the tariff schedule—and another druggist, miles away, got the other part of the order. Druggist No. 1 was in a quandary at first, but the labels were very pretty, so he finally filled the hair- tonic bottles with the liver-regulator, which soon had a great run; but the man was haunted with the idea that the other fellow had palmed off hair- tonic for liver-regulator and poisoned a whole district. The other man turned up one day and admitted he had put the hair- tonic in the liver-medicine bottles, and was more than satisfied with the result, as he had received a lot of testimonials certifying to remarkable cures.—American Druggist.

Newspaper Etiquette.

Parties wishing to enter the printing office at this season should be governed by the following rules: Advance to the inner door and give three distinct raps or kick the door down. The "devil" will attend to the alarm. You will give him your name, postoffice address and the number of years you are owing for the paper. He will admit you. You will advance to the very centre of the room and address the editor with following countersign: Extend the right hand about two feet from the body with the thumb and finger extended, the thumb and index finger clasping a $10 bill, which drops into the extended hand of the editor, at the same time saying: "Were you looking for me?" The editor will grasp your hand and the bill and pressing it will say: "You bet!" After giving him the news concerning your locality you will be permitted to retire with a receipt for an obligation properly discharged.—Marcus (Iowa) News

Main Street,

Woodstock.

WITHIN the year the beautiful love story of Mr. and Mrs. Browning has become public property and endeared these two poets to all who believe in the uplifting power of human affection. America, too, has had in the literary world a similarly beautiful story, of which but little is known and practically nothing has been published. The life of Nathaniel Hawthorne and his wife was most pure and devoted in all its relations. This hitherto unpublished romance is delicately treated in the February number of the Delineator, under the title "A Romancer's Love Story." It is illustrated with Mrs. Hawthorne's picture, reproduced by permission from a family portrait. The aspect of this delightful woman is almost unknown to American women. If we may judge by the frequent conversations on the subject among women, there is today a marked revival of interest in embroidery, both in colors and in white; always a fascinating and beautiful employment. In recognition of this development, the Delineator, now in its 55th volume, introduces in the February number some dainty specimens of colored embroideries in an artistic plate, supplemented by designs and working instructions for the details. Our lady readers will no doubt, hail with great pleasure this initial instalment of the new department, which would seem to cap the efforts of the publishers of the Delineator to make this charming magazine a delight to its patrons. It will be well worth the while of any woman educated in needlework, who may not be a subscriber to secure a copy of the February issue from the local agent for Butterick Patterns, any newsdealers, or The Delineator Publishing Co., of Toronto, Limited, 33 Richmond St. West, Toronto, Ont. Subscription price of The Delineator $1.00 a year, single copies 15 cents.

Boer women.

Once wedded the Boer woman accepts her fate with much of the stoicism characteristic of the Indian squaw. She cooks and sews, though she does not clean, for the Boers live and die in unmitigated dirt. Beyond her household duties she takes her share in tending the innumerable herds of cattle on the farm, and in reaping the crops. In war, too, she also bears her part. During the innumerable fights between the Boers and the natives the Boers women frequently stood behind the waggons supplying their husbands and sons with ammunition and provender, and during the present hostilities their presence has more than once been detected on or near the field of battle. In her life, culture and beauty have no place, nor would she know what to do with them if they ever were offered to her, for the wives of the small-educated official class receive little more consideration from their husbands than do those who are mated to the roughest peasants. Her place in the scheme of the universe is precisely what ours was when our ancestors were hunting in the primeval forests, attired in the skins of beasts.—London 'Mail.'
