STOCKERS FOR THE WEST.

Superintendent Osborne has a Conference With the Members of the Government.

The members of the provincial government and Superintendent Osborne, of the C. P. R., had a conference Saturday in reference to the possibility of developing a trade in young cattle between New Brunswick and the Northwest. Mr. Osborne told the government there was a good and growing opportunity in the west for cattle from one to two years old as stockers. He added that the C. P. R. Company would give favorable rates from points in this province to such places as Medicine Hat, Maple Creek and Calgary which he thought would enable cattle to be placed there at a good profit to New Brunswick farmers. In order to make the business a success he pointed out that it would be necessary that more attention should be paid to the raising of Herefords, short horns and other good beef producers, a class needed in the west rather than milk producers.

Other questions such as finding better markets for potatoes, establishment of starch factories and the export of hay were also talked over.

The premier thanked Mr. Osborne for his attendance, stating that the matters brought before the government would be carefully considered and that the C. P. R. might rely upon the active co operation of the government in developing the agricultural interests and as a natural sequence the general trade of the province.—Telegraph.
