When Editors Fall Out.
In a certain town in Southern Kansas, says The Emporia Gazette, there are two editors that hate each other. When one editor advocates anything the other sees a deep laid plot in it to throttle the town; and when the second editor favors a scheme the first editor can see as plain as the nose on his face that the whole business is a big steal. Now, it happens that these editors are particularly decent, honest, fair-minded men about everything except each other's affairs; but this flaw in their character keeps the town by the ears, keeps the lid of hell raised all the time so that meanness, and villification and trickery, and jealousy, and envy, spill all over that town and stunt it like "pizen". The town has lost a railroad or two by reason of the editorial quarrel. The taxpayers of the town might well afford to vote bonds to keep one of these editors at the best hotel in New York City to get peace in the town, for the row is more expensive than the prodigal son.

And what's the use? Why do towns tolerate these rows? If a quarrelsome editor comes to town, who is inclined to bicker, and jaw, and scold, and make green eyes at his contemporary he should be given "hours" to leave town. An editor can do more harm to a town in a year than the best citizens can repair in ten years. Yet the freedom of the press and the cowardice of advertisers makes it possible at any minute for the best town in the world to be visited by a newspaper viper who will sting the community to death.

Editors all over the world are discredited by the wranglers. There are hundreds of editors who are particularly careful not to quarrel, but they are classed as quarrelsome by the people to whom all editors look alike. Editors should resent this by making it unprofessional to quarrel. It certainly does not pay.

Dressing Well at Small Cost Is Easily Accomplished.

Diamond Dyes enable thousands of women to dress well at small cost. One or two packages of some fashionable color of the Diamond Dyes will give new life and beauty to any old and cast off skirt or dress. Your faded cape or jacket of last year can be colored a rich black, navy, seal brown or dark bottle green, and made to look as if it came new from the store. Your husband's suit and the children's clothes may, with a little care, be made as good as new. Now is the time to dye your rags for the making of pretty mats and rugs. If you desire a novel and stylish pattern, buy one of the Diamond Dye Mat and Rug Patterns now sold by the majority of dry goods merchants everywhere. These beautiful patterns are colored on the best Scotch Hessian and ready for working. If your dry goods dealer does not keep them, send to the Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, Montreal, for design sheets. Mailed free to any address.

In A Garden.
A "Punch" parodist feels that garden literature is overdone, and declares that it is so delightfully easy, compared to novel writing, that he tries his hand to this effect: "Close by the greenhouse, four feet from the gooseberries, and two feet-six from the second-best honeysuckle, I have dotted in a clump of dandelions. Such brave flowers, so sturdy and self-reliant! Oddly enough, they have all turned out yellow with me. Why are none of them purple? Perhaps it is the soil. "It is nearly twelve o'clock 'noon in the quaint old Anglo Saxon phrase. A sparrow has just hopped across the lettuce—a sweet little bird, with two eyes, two feet and one beak. But the early worm has left some hours ago on pressing business. Ah! dearest reader, the saddest words in the language. Too late! Too late! Too late! Oh, the bitterness of it all. "But I must be brave. I must water the geraniums. (Plant out early in May, in a south aspect, and mulch freely.) Yes, I must water the geraniums. So do the perry, insistent duties of life break in upon our most spiritual moods!

"STIFFLED" HEART
Ever feel that every breath would be your last—that the thumping, stifling sensations about your Heart were crushing your life out?

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is the only absolutely unfailing remedy known and prescribed by eminent physicians. Its claims of potency are not heresy or false hope to the sufferer. It is not a spirit lifter to gather you up to the high pinnacle of expectancy only to drop you into a deeper mire of disease. It gives relief in thirty minutes. A few bottles cure the worst forms of heart malady. Sold by Garden Bros.

The Great Unwashed.
This story is told by the president of a New Bedford bank. Not long ago he and other officers and directors engaged in a business meeting, held in the directors' room of the bank, and were surprised to see a poor little waif enter the room, something which a man of business affairs would not dare to do under such conditions. The little girl, shabbily clothed and pinched looking, had all unconsciously entered on forbidden ground, but this she did not realize, and at once went to the men seated about the big table, offering them small cakes of soap for sale. The very first director whom she approached shook his head, impatient at the interruption of business, and said sharply, "I never use it." The tiny pedler, unabashed, went from man to man, all the others, out of pity for her wan little figure, buying of her. As she started to leave the room, after thanking each purchaser, the girl hesitated a moment in front of the director who never used soap, according to his own declaration, and looking him over from head to foot, said, disdainfully, "Well, yer look it!" and then she swept out like a dutchess.—Boston Herald.

Sixty cents a box, all dealers, or postpaid from Edmansons, Bates & Company, Toronto.

Sardou's Romantic Marriage.
From The London Star.

Mlle. Sardou, daughter of the dramatist and Academician, was married yesterday at St. Augustin, Paris, to Comte Robert de Flers, a member of an old French family and a dramatist and critic. The President sent his son, M. Paul Loubet, to express his good wishes.

M. Victorien Sardou was himself married under the most romantic circumstances. As a young man he worked and starved in a garret, and disappointment preyed upon his nerves till he fell ill. A young actress, Mlle. de Brecourt, took compassion upon him, nursed him back to health, and introduced his work to the famous actress Dejazet, through whom he was first acted.

Sardou fell in love with and married his benefactress, whose death ten years later was the one great sorrow of his life. Sardou has made more money than any other dramatist, and he is probably the only man who ever gave Sarah Bernhardt a shaking.

The incident occurred at a rehearsal—and at a period when the divine Sarah was less eminent than she is now. They differed as to the way in which a passage should be declaimed, and Sardou, losing his temper, seized the actress by the shoulder and gave her a shaking. She retorted by slapping his face, and afterward challenged him to a duel!

Proving His Case.

"Are you aware, sir, what you are doing?" The stout, florid-faced man in the restaurant, who was about to help himself to a generous portion of mince pie, looked up in astonishment at the nervous, thin, little individual opposite.

"What do you mean?" he asked. "I have been watching you," said the nervous man, "eating your dinner, and, impelled as I am by a love of humanity, I cannot see you leave this table without a protest at the diet which you are killing yourself with. First, you had fish chowder. No protein but slight hydrocarbonates. Then you had corned beef and cabbage, containing fully eighty per cent. of deleterious matter. Then you had pie, with a mountain of sugar. Are you aware, sir, that this can only be digested by the duodenum? Think of it! You'll be a wreck in a few years." The stout man he addressed gazed at him compassionately for a moment.

"You don't look as if your diet was doing you much good," he said, quietly.

"That, sir," replied the thin man, "is no argument at all. You were healthy to start with, and I wasn't. You'll go to pieces in a short time, and I'll live to be an old man, because I know the percentage of fruit salts the human system can stand."

"You'll live for years beyond your allotted time, will you?" said the stout man. "Yes, sir, I will." "Then," said the stout man as he rose and paid his check, "that only bears me out. It only shows what harm can be done to humanity by a fool diet."—"Life."

Fowl Play.

Many amusing stories are told of our colored fellow-citizens of the South by the raconteurs of that section.

A venerable "darker" was haled before a justice of the peace and charged with gratifying his appetite for feathered denizens of the barn-yard in which he had no ownership. There were no witnesses to the act, but the birds were missing and feathers had been found around Uncle George's cabin. He was sharply interrogated by the magistrate, in the hope that he would get entangled in the questioning and the truth come out. Finally he was asked,—

"So you say, Uncle George, that you have not stolen any chickens?" "Yes, sah. I done stole no chickens." "Have you stolen any geese?" "No, sah!" "No turkeys?" "No, sah!"

After a brief pause the suspected culprit was discharged with a sharp admonition. As he passed out he stopped before the justice, hat in hand, his ivories disclosed by a broad grin, and said,— "Fo' de Lawd, Squire, if you said 'ducks,' you'd 'a' had me!"—September "New" Lippincott.

Square Men.

In the mountains of Berks County, Pennsylvania, where Dutch shrewdness matches Dutch thrift, the proprietor of a hotel was bargaining for a supply of chickens.

"Now, look here, Fred," said the hotel man familiarly to the farmer, "don't you feed them chickens before you bring 'em here, and don't you let 'em get wet."

All right, Charlie," said the farmer, "but I don't want to see 'em go hungry."

"That's all right, Fred, but I ain't a payin' twelve cents a pound for corn, and I ain't a buyin' water at the same rate."

"All right, Charlie, and I'll bring my scales along."

"No need of that, Fred; I've got good scales here."

"They parted, and I asked the hotel man just what he meant."

"Oh, Fred's all right," he said. "He's one of the squarest men alive; but all the same I ain't a paying live weight for chickens stuffed full of wet corn and with wet feathers. But don't misunderstand me. Fred's a square man."

I walked down to Fred's farm. He was jolly and smiling. "Charlie's a fine fellow," he said, "one of the squarest men in the county—but I'm going to take them scales, all the same."
