UNION CORNER.

The funeral of Bro. Burnham Carpenter took place Sunday, Nov. 24th, at 11 o'clock. A large number of the brethren of Court Fidelis No. 897 I. O. F. were present also a number from Court Defiance, of Houlton, who were formed in this and another school of the house to the church where an appropriate sermon was preached by Rev. A. H. Hayward, after which all marched to the grave in the same order. The funeral was very largely attended the church being filled beyond its seating capacity.

Mrs. Susan Crane was buried the same day at two o'clock. Services conducted by Rev. Mr. Melvern, F. C. B., of Houlton, assisted by Bro. Hayward. She was buried in White Settlement burying ground.

James McAtee died on Friday, Nov. 28th, aged 15 years. He leaves a father, mother, brother and three sisters to mourn. He was buried on Sunday afternoon in the R. C. burying ground at Debee.

Irene Kirkpatrick daughter of James and Ada Kirkpatrick has been very ill with pneumonia but is now recovering.

George McNerlin who had a light run of typhoid fever after getting better and able to work took cold and had an attack of pneumonia and pleurisy. He is getting better now.

HOME AND CHILD

Does your horse "feel his oats"? What a difference between the grain-fed and the grass-fed horse! The first strong and full of ginger, the second flabby, weak and tired out before he begins. The feeding makes the difference.

Children are not alike either. One is rosy, bright-eyed, full of life and laughter, another is pale, weak and dull. The feeding again is responsible.

Sickly children need special feeding. They don't "feel their oats". Scott's Emulsion adds just the right richness to their diet. It is like grain to the horse. The child gets new appetite and strong digestion.

Scott's Emulsion is more than food. It is a strong medicine. It rouses up dull children, puts new flesh on thin ones and red blood into pale ones. It makes children grow. Scott's Emulsion makes ordinary food do its duty.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

On the departure of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Blackie for their new home in Upper Brighton, where they have bought the Chase farm, the following address was presented to them and Mr. Blackie was presented with a handsome arm chair and Mrs. Blackie with a comfortable rocking chair.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackie and Family.—

It is with deep regret that we have learned of your decision to leave us, and we meet tonight to bid you farewell and Godspeed.

During the five years which you have spent in our midst, we have found you to be kind neighbors, and faithful friends, and not only in this respect will you be missed but in the Sabbath school where you, Mr. Blackie have labored so faithfully as a teacher, and have done all in your power to make the school a success. The younger members of your family, too have always been ready and willing to help on in every good work, and we feel that you are leaving a vacancy which cannot soon be filled.

Although sad at the thought of parting with friends who have so endeared themselves to the hearts of the whole community, we have this cheering thought that you will not be so far away but that we may often see or hear from you.

And now, in appreciation of your faithful service amongst us, I beg you in behalf of the Sabbath school and other friends to accept these small tokens of our esteem and regard. As you leave us to go to your new home, our best wishes for future health and prosperity go with you.

Two Enterprising Doctors.

Since Drs. Brown and Ross have amalgamated their telephone systems they have begun to extend their service to every part of the county. Dr. Brown's original line had its central office at Centreville and ran from Florenceville to Robinson's Mills, to Knoxford and River de Chute. Dr. Ross' central office was at Florenceville and the line extended to Hartland and intermediate points, to Charleston, Greenfield, Bristol and Clearview. Since the amalgamation the enterprising medicos have called their system the Union Telephone Line, and are extending their operations very largely. There are main lines from River de Chute to Meductic with offices at points not farther apart than two or three miles, and from Knowlesville to Bloomfield with offices scattered thickly along. These two lines cross each other at Hartland. From Florenceville connection is arranged with both the old systems and the line is extended to Bath.

At Hartland about 20 instruments are taken by the business men.

This almost house to house system of telephone is a commendable bit of enterprise, and will certainly prove a great convenience to the public in general. The managers say there is little doubt but that good dividends will be forthcoming, although a lot of capital is required to establish the line.

Part of the system is still in course of construction but the work is being pushed forward as fast as the weather will permit, and it is hoped the whole line will be completed by January.—Hartland Advertiser.

Flying Over Tariff Walls.

The airship of M. Santos-Dumont falls far short of the mighty machines imagined by Jules Verne and other romancers. Its modest ten or fifteen miles an hour on a calm day and its helplessness in anything like a wind are very different from the resistless energy with which the airships of fiction cleave the fiercest hurricanes at twice the speed of an express train. Nevertheless, M. Santos-Dumont's invention may have very important practical results, and that at an early day. It is commonly said that such a machine as his is only a scientific toy, and that, even if passengers should patronize it for the pleasure of the voyage, it never could be used for carrying freight. But it is precisely in freight carrying of a certain kind that the device may first be put to practical use and made to pay large dividends.

Henry George said many years ago that when aerial navigation should be perfected custom-houses would disappear, because the only way to maintain a tariff around the country would be to roof the country in. That is undeniably true of the perfected flying machine of romance, and it may turn out to be true to a very considerable extent even in such feeble steps in the direction of the navigation of the air as have been taken at Paris.

The airship in its present state cannot be used for carrying heavy goods to any great distance, but it can carry light things of considerable value—silks, laces, jewels, opium, cigars, paintings and the like—a hundred miles or so in good weather without trouble. Let us imagine a free trade emporium established in Canada twenty or thirty miles from the frontier, stocked with goods of these kinds and provided with a fleet of Santos-Dumont's airships. What would hinder aeronauts from taking out their cargoes on any dark, still night and landing them fifty miles on our side of the line? Any force of customs inspectors that we could employ would be worthless against such an invasion. The whole United States Army could not stop it. We should simply have to abandon the attempt to collect duties on things that could be carried by the aerial route, unless, Mr. George remarked, we were prepared to roof the country in.

Probably M. Santos-Dumont did not have any such possibilities in mind when he was perfecting his invention. But the most important effects of a scientific idea are often those that have been least expected. It would be interesting, but not surprising, if the smugglers should be the first to turn the navigation of the air to practical account.—Saturday Evening Post.
