Men Who Have Refused Titles.

It is a well-known fact that whilst the majority of mankind seek titles with persistent industry, there are others who actually refuse to accept the same. The late Mr. Gladstone was a notable example of the latter order of humanity, for the peerage which time after time was held out to him was always rigidly rejected, and he died as he had lived, the plain W. E. G.

Mr. Swinburne, the famous poet, might have had a "Sir" before his name had he chosen to accept the baronetcy which was offered him some years ago, but with true democratic independence he refused to accept a title which after all could do little to enhance his fame.

Similarly, Mr. Watts, A. R., whose pictures are known the wide world over, could have ranked with Lord Leighton in the "Blue-book" had not he stoutly asserted his objection to titles and elected to remain as he was. Lord Tennyson when first approached on the question of accepting a peerage was strongly opposed to the idea, but eventually succumbed to the offer on the ground that his son would inherit the title, and that he was therefore justified in taking it.

It is rumoured that the late Professor Huxley was offered a knighthood by Mr. Gladstone—an offer which was politely but firmly declined. A similar honour was proposed to his distinguished contemporary, Professor Tyndal, and was also declined without hesitation.

It is an open secret that Charles Dickens might have added the word "Bart." To his illustrious name had he chosen to do so. But the immortal "Boz" was democratic to the core, and would not accept the offer.

A few years before the demise of Verdi, the illustrious composer, the late King Humbert sent for the maestro and offered him a dukedom in recognition of his services to music. Verdi refused the gracious offer with dignified courtesy, whereupon the King admitted that he was quite right; "for," said His Majesty, "all the titles in Italy could not make you greater than you are."

The Agony of Sleeplessness

Did you ever pass a single night in wakeful misery, tossing and rolling in bed, trying in vain to sleep and longing for morning to come? Can you imagine the torture of spending night after night in this way, each succeeding night growing worse and worse? This is the most dreadful symptom of Nervous Exhaustion and Debility. You can be gradually and thoroughly cured of Sleeplessness by the upbuilding influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It cures in nature's way, by creating new nerve cells and restoring lost vitality.

No Reason For His Conduct.

"What I'm looking for," said the old man as he got off the train, "is a lawyer who'll make a certain young man in my town come up to the chalk-line or go to gaol."

"What's a certain young man in your town been up to?" asked the special policeman who had been addressed.

"Courtin' my daughter."

"But that's no crime."

"Engaged to her for two years."

"That's perfectly legal."

"But the wedding day was fixed, and they should hev bin married last week," persisted the father.

"Oh, I see. Then he's gone back on the girl?"

"Gone dead back on her, sir, and it's a breach of promise case, if I know anything about the law."

"Unless he had good and sufficient reasons, you know."

"He couldn't hev had. Milly is one of the best girls in the world. No; she didn't give him no reason to flip-flop."

"And you didn't?"

"Not a reason, sir. On the day before they was to be married I sent for Sam, and asked him to lend me £100 and take my note for three years. He sort of choked up over it, and said he'd see about it, and that's the last anybody has seen of him. No, sir; I never gave him no reason for throwin' my gal over, and you bet he'll either come up to the scratch or he'll act as a warnin' to other fellers who don't know their own minds."

From a Man's Standpoint.

A wife rarely keeps a husband poor that would have been rich any other way. Women live for admiration, but men die without it.

When a woman's in love, she thinks there's no other man in the world; when a man's in love, he thinks the same thing.

The bachelor has one great advantage over a married man; he can still get married.

A woman may have less logic than a man, but what little she does have is generally more so.

Never trust a woman with a secret. The curiosity of her husband is sure to get it out of her.

Just when a man's surest that a woman never hits anything she aims at, along comes some blushing young thing and marries him!—Winnipeg "Town Topics."

Changed Her Mind.

Lady Visitor—Well, Maisie, I have come after that new baby; you know you told me last week that you didn't want it and that I could take it home.

Maisie—Well, you can't have it. I want it myself now, but I'll get you a piece of paper and you can cut out a pattern.—"Leslie's Weekly."

A West-Pointer Called Down.

J. F. J. Archibald, on Santiago's Surrender, in Leslie's Weekly:

A young second lieutenant, who had been graduated from the first class a couple of months before the regular graduation at West Point, had just joined his regiment and was walking down the street near the palace. He stopped on the corner, and as he did so an old grizzled soldier with a growth of beard on his face and with a cavalry sergeant's stripe on his breeches, a blue shirt and a campaign-hat, but with no other mark of rank about his uniform except his sergeant's stripe, walked slowly down and stopped in front of the lieutenant, looking around at the different buildings.

The young officer fidgeted a few moments under the manner in which the trooper ignored his proximity, and finally turned to him and said, sharply, "Here, you man, did anyone ever teach you how to salute?"

"Yes, sir," drawled the trooper, as he glanced at the youngster.

"Well, knock your heels together," said the young officer; and the trooper came to attention with the precision of an old soldier.

"Now salute!" he said; and the trooper's gauntlet came to the rim of his hat and stayed there until the young lieutenant answered it, at the same time demanding, "Now remember this, and don't let it happen again! What is your name, and what do you belong to?"

Without relaxing his position from attention the old trooper again respectfully saluted and remarked, dryly, "My name is Samuel Summer, and I'm brigadier-general of the cavalry brigade!" Whereupon the young lieutenant proceeded to copy as many colors of the rainbow with his face as possible, and slipped away as soon as he dared, forgetting even to apologize.

Mixed Morals.

THE TWO NEW HOUSES.

Once on a Time there were Two Men, each of whom decided to build for himself a Fine, New House.

One Man, being of an Arrogant and Conceited Nature, took counsel of Nobody, but declared that he would build his House to suit himself.

"For," said he, "since it is My House and I am to Live in It, why should I ask the Advice of my Neighbors as to its Construction?"

While the House was Building, the Neighbors came often and Looked at it, and went away, Whispering and Wagging their Heads in Derision.

But the Man paid no Heed, and continued to build his House as he would.

The Result was that, when completed, his House was lacking in Symmetry and Utility, and in a Hundred Ways it was Unsatisfactory, and for each Defect there was a Neighbor who said, "Had you asked Me, I would have Warned you against that Error."

The Other Man, who was of a Humble and Docile Mind, went to Each of his Neighbors in Turn, and asked Advice about the Building of his House.

His Friends willingly and at Great Length gave him the Benefit of their Experiences and Opinions, and the Grateful Man undertook to Follow Out all their Directions.

The Result was that his House, when finished, was a Hodge-Podge of Varying Styles and Contradictory Effects, and Exceedingly Uncomfortable and Inconvenient to Live in.

MORALS:

This Fable teaches that In a Multitude of Counsellors there is Safety, and that Too Many Cooks Spoil the Broth.

THE TWO SUITORS.

Once on a Time there was a Charming Young Maiden who had Two Suitors.

One of These, who was of a Persistent and Persevering Nature, managed to be Continually in the Young Lady's Company.

He would pay her a visit Visit in the Morning, Drop In to Tea in the Afternoon, and Call on her Again in the Evening.

He took her Driving, and he Escorted her to the Theater. He would take her to a Party, and then he would Dance; or Sit on the Stairs, or Flit into the Conservatory with her.

The Young Lady admired this man, but she Wearied of his never-ceasing Presence, and she Said to Herself, "If he were not all ways at my Elbow I should Better Appreciate his Good Qualities."

The other Suitor, who considered himself a Man of Deep and Penetrating Cleverness, said to himself, "I will Go Away for a Time, and then my Fair One will Realize my Worth and Call Me Back to Her."

With a sad Visage he made his Adieus, and he Exacted her Pledge to Write to him Occasionally. But after he had Gone she Forgot her Promise, and Soon she Forgot his Very Existence.

MORALS:

This Fable teaches that Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder, and that Out of Sight is Out of Mind.—Carolyn Wells in the "Century."
