THE IMP.

In our younger days we all learned to fear wild animals. The wolf was my pet aversion. I never saw one, but ever since I heard my mother read "Red Riding Hood" to my little sister, I thought your wolf would not be a pleasant person to meet. Mr. Weller had his own ideas as to the most dangerous creatures that roam the earth and over his cups one evening he warned his festive son, Sam, to beware of widows. Macbeth, again, had no manner of use for ghosts. When the uncanny form of a chap he had taken the precaution to murder some weeks before approached him, Macbeth said he could do business with "the rugged Russian bear, the armed rhinoceros or the Hyrcan tiger," but ghosts were not in his class and he besought the chap to fly the coop. As for me, I have outgrown my fear of wolves, I always had a refined weakness for widows, and if ghosts are any relation to Spirits, in the words of my friend the German poet, "sent them forinst me." But I, even I, am not without the sense of fear. There is one human person before whom my dauntless spirit droops. He is, the man whose wife is away from home. I have met the man, I know him, he is dangerous. When his wife is home he goes to the synagogue with her on Sunday, he dutifully accompanies her to the card parties and other torturous demonstrations, and if he is a polite man, she does not know that he has his own opinion of all these things. But, let me say to the unsophisticated youth, this man, when his wife is away from home, is a demon to avoid.

He suggests a smoking party, and as a matter of habit he says "Of course, we break up at twelve." Well, young man, if he breaks up before breakfast he breaks his record. He may suggest a poker party and that means playing until noon the next day. His parties are all "stag" parties. No doubt the last amalgamation he attended was a whist party and his wife was with him, and, being of a philosophic turn of mind, he "reached a hand through time and grasped the far off interest of tears." Well, young man, if you play poker with him, you pay the interest. The married man who has a wife away from home has a streak of luck that the chaste bachelor wots not of. He can stand on the lawn and catch Windsor Castle. This man has no more moral instinct than a cedar fence in Canada. When his wife is at the seaside he at once seems to join the class of "the lame, the halt and the blind of the world of consciousness."

When your best friend's wife goes away from home, go down to the train to see her off; then walk from the station with the grass widower, and, if you value your soul's salvation, pick a quarrel with him that afternoon that will last until she returns. If you don't do this you will spend sporting nights and heavy eyed days and before your luck changes the wife come back.

I learn that in the last week in October, Mr. Hall Caine, the well known fictionist, was elected to the lower region of the parliament of the Isle of Man. Any one who has read Mr. Caine's novels must know that he has a startling imagination, that he weaves things out of his own inwards, that he puts down stuff in his novels that no reasonable man could believe. Mr. Hall Caine has a great reputation as a novelist but the free and independent electors of the "British Possessions Beyond The Seas" desire the people on the Isle of Man to understand that they are not the only people who, at times, elect their greatest liars to their legislative bodies. The people of Canada have a way of doing that sort of thing at times, themselves. I mention no names, I make no reference to any particular legislative body, either the town council, the county council, the local legislature or the house of commons. I say it merely is self defence, so that the people in the old country will not think that we are behind the times.

Van Wart-True.

The home of Mr. G. E. True was the scene of a very pretty wedding Thursday evening, the 14th inst., when his second daughter, Miss Ada Mae, was united in marriage to Mr. James Judson Van Wart, of Woodstock, by the Rev. M. L. Gregg. The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents, which testify to the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Among them was a beautiful parlor chair from the Free Baptist congregation and a handsome silver butter dish from the men with whom Mr. Van Wart worked. Mr. and Mrs. Van Wart left on Monday morning for Houlton where they will reside, followed by the hearty congratulations and best wishes of their many friends.

James W. Dalling vs. Robert White and Caroline A. White. Plaintiff withdraws record.

Miss Mary Winslow.

Miss Mary Winslow, eldest daughter of the late Sheriff Winslow, died at the old homestead Upper Woodstock on Saturday afternoon at 12.15 in her 72nd year. Miss Winslow had been in poor health for some months suffering from nervous disease which developed into paralysis. In early life Miss Winslow taught a private school in the old Mechanics Institute when the late James McCoy taught the Grammar school.

Miss Winslow leaves four brothers, Francis E. Winslow formerly Manager of the Bank of Montreal at Chatham, Wentworth Winslow who lives on the homestead at Upper Woodstock, T. Bradshaw Winslow of the Board of Works Department, Fredericton, and E. Byron Winslow, Barrister, Fredericton. The late John C. Winslow, for years postmaster of Woodstock, was another brother.

The funeral took place on Monday afternoon from her late residence at 2.30 o'clock. A service was held in St. Luke's church, Woodstock, at 3 o'clock, after which the remains were interred at the Parish church.

Teachers for South Africa.

The Fredericton Gleaner says:—Principal Mullin of the Normal school has received a cablegram from the British government, through Governor General Minto, offering him the position of Principal of the Normal School at Pretoria, South Africa. Positions as teachers in the same institution are also offered to two lady teachers of Fredericton. It is understood that the salary attached to the principalship is about $4,000, and of the other teachers about three times what they are paid here.

The matter has been talked of for some time, and is the result of a visit to Canada, and to New Brunswick, several months ago of a representative of the Colonial office upon a tour of inspection of the different school systems of the colonies.

Although Mr. Mullin and the other teachers have not yet decided to accept the offer it would not be at all surprising if they should do so. The South Africa school authorities desire an answer at as early a date as possible.

Good Reading for Everybody.

In addition to its special articles by famous men and women and its stories by the most popular living writers of fiction THE YOUTH'S COMPANION presents from week to week many regular features of great value.

The editorial page discusses the public questions of the day in a spirit of impartiality, the aim being to give the reader the material for forming his own opinions.

The article on the care of the health which has been published every week for many years is of the greatest value.

The department of Current Events and Nature and Science give the important news of the world in condensed form.

The children's page provides diversion for the little ones, and the anecdotes and miscellany have their share in making the paper a complete treasury of good reading.

An illustrated prospectus of the new volume for 1902 will be sent to any address free. Every new subscriber who sends $1.75 for the 1902 volume now will receive free all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1901 and THE COMPANION Calendar for 1902, lithographed in twelve colors and gold.

Mine Owners Want Peace.

LONDON, Nov. 18, 1 a. m.—There are increasing signs that heavy pressure is being brought to bear on the government by a powerful section of those interested in South African finance to come to a settlement with the Boers. Mr. J. B. Robinson, the well-known gold magnate, is taking a leading part in this movement, the primary object of which is to protect the vested interests of Rand capitalists. The Chancellor of the Exchequer has promised that the Rand shall be made to contribute a share of the war expenses, and it is evident that the longer the war lasts the heavier will be the call on those who have most at stake in South African gold mines. No decision has been arrived at as to the exact proportion of the cost of the war which the Rand will have to discharge, but it is stated by a newspaper which is understood to be the mouthpiece of Mr. Chamberlain that the matter has more than once been under the serious consideration of the cabinet. This very doubt on the point is being used as a lever by Mr. Robinson and other Rand millionaires to bring about pacification in the Boer territories at well nigh any cost.

Jackets and Skirts for Winter.

There is no unalterable law as to the length of jackets. The short Eton has a new lease of life, the three-quarter coat is in favor, while nothing smarter or more absolutely regal than the long coats has ever been seen, says Harper's Bazar. The skirts of walking gowns are made with shorter, though not short enough to clear the ground, unless intended solely to be worn in bad weather, but for the house long trains are insisted upon.

For young girls the frocks for dancing are most cleverly constructed, for while the skirts appear to be long, they are cut so that they just escape the floor, their width around the foot making them stand out in a clever way that gives the appearance of length.

All skirts are made extremely close fitting around the hips. There are box plaits, plain and inverted and narrow side plaits, but all so arranged as to be perfectly flat. Plain gored and circular skirts are trimmed with braiding, flat braid, bias folds, and cut work. The flounce skirt is the smartest model. This fashion is carried out in one deep circular flounce, in two or three scant flounces or in two or three deep flounces.

The New Treaty.

The new Hay-Pauncefote treaty concerning the Isthmian Canal was signed on Monday by Secretary Hay for the United States and Lord Pauncefote for Great Britain.

The principal point of difference between the new and the first treaty is the withdrawal of Great Britain from the joint guarantee of the neutrality of the canal, thus leaving the United States the sole guarantor. If the treaty should be ratified the state department will proceed immediately to negotiate the treaties with Costa Rica and Nicaragua which will permit the canal to be constructed and prescribe the terms upon which the consent of Nicaragua and Costa Rica is given.

Except as affording a chance for the opposing journals to attack the government and the foreign secretary, Lord Lansdown, the signing of the new isthmus canal convention does not excite strong interest in Great Britain. It is generally admitted that the British have nothing to gain by a retention of the old treaty, while they have much to gain by the construction of the canal.

Like a New Engine.

Engine No. 508 brought in the American express at noon yesterday over the line of the C. P. R. This is the engine which went through the bridge at Grand Falls nearly two years ago, falling into the bed of the river and lying there through at least one winter season. During the past summer, with the assistance of Diver Lahey, a chain was fastened around the engine, which was in turn fastened to a powerful crane and hoisted to the track. Then it was taken to the C. P. R. works at McAdam and so thoroughly overhauled that it has the appearance of a new engine.—St. John Sun.

Wan Wart-Stairs.

At the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Harry Estabrooks, on Tuesday of last week, Miss Hattie Stairs was united in marriage to Alexander Van Wart. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph Noble. The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents.

Lord Rosebery possesses the costliest collection of snuffboxes in the world. Many of them are of solid gold and some are set with brilliants. Although the collection only comprises 22 boxes altogether its estimated value is $175,000.
