

It Hurt To Eat.

The pain, nausea and distress that Dyspeptics suffer after every meal can all be permanently removed by Burdock Blood Bitters.

It tones up and restores the stomach to normal condition so that it digests food without causing discomfort.

Here's proof positive:

Miss Maggie Splude, Dalhousie, N.B., wrote the following: "I have been a sufferer from Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for the past two years and felt very miserable. I could not take much food as it hurt me to eat. My friends said, 'Why don't you try B.B.B.' I did so, using two bottles, which made such a complete cure that I can now eat anything I like without it causing me discomfort."

The Best Books for Children.

The New York Outlook publishes a series of brief articles which were written in response to a request of the editors for lists of ten of the books best suited for reading by children from six to twelve years of age. The authors of these articles were selected because of their recognized reputation as writers of children's books or as interested in the subject of children's reading. Mary Mapes Dodge, Editor of St. Nicholas, writes as follows:—

You have asked for a list of eight or ten books furnishing the best reading for children between six and twelve years of age—and I, alas! feel that, rightly speaking, no such list can be made. In truth, each child, during that early formation period, virtually represents six individual children, so great is the change effected by each passing year. Children outgrow pleasures and needs as they do their garments, and the fondled picture-story-book of one season is cast aside for stronger and more stimulating attractions the next. And so individuality is developed by sure stages, year by year, until the "big boy" of twelve looks back with surprise at the books that used to interest him when he was "only a little chap."

With this in view, we tread warily the attractive ways, and with a conscientious deference to many considerations.

The ten books furnishing the best reading, therefore, would better be called the ten kinds of books which would best fit and promote from year to year the young reader's natural and healthy development. The child's best culture demands a familiarity with some of the good old books that have grown mellow with time and the love of generations; but no less important are many recent works for young folk by the best authors of today. And there are so many such books, both old and new, that from them many good lists of ten could be compiled.

Here is one, for instance: 1. "Alice in Wonderland." 2. Hans Andersen's Fairy Tales. 3. Hawthorne's "Wonder Book" (or the "Tanglewood Tales"). 4. "Gulliver's Travels." 5. Kipling's "Jungle Books" (or Seton-Thompson's "Wild Animals I Have Known," or Harris's "Uncle Remus"). 6. Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast" (or Nansen's "Farthest North," or Kennan's "Tent Life in Siberia"). 7. Scott's "Ivanhoe" (or Howard Pyle's "Robin Hood," or Lanier's "The Boy's King Arthur"). 8. Gibson's "Eye-Spy," or some other good nature-book. 9. Cooper's "Leather-Stocking Tales" (or Stevenson's "Kidnapped"). 10. Scudder's "Children's Book" (or Miss Repplier's "Book of Famous Verse").

Edward Everett Hale writes:—"At the bottom I always wish that children might be brought up as I was, and as my children were, in a house which contained a few thousand of the best books in the world, with quite general freedom to browse at their pleasure—of course with the eye of a watchful mother over them. I am quite clear that the books which are written for children are, with a few great exceptions, no good. . . . Avoid mere sentiment, particularly the sentiment of grown up people. Do not have books about dead children and flowers, nor in general any sort of rot. . . . For my self I like good narrative, but I get very little of it outside the Bible, Robinson Crusoe and the Arabian Nights. . . . I should like to introduce children to books of travel, only so few people write them even decently."

. . . . In an interesting digression Mr. Hale says: "I am sorry to say that the modern fad is that children should not learn to read in early years. For myself, I could read as well when I was two years old as I can now; and I owe much happiness in the years between 1824 and 1830 to this. My grandchildren are not going to have a similar recollection and I am sorry for them."

In the course of his article Thomas Wentworth Higginson touches this question and says: "Formerly children learned to read much earlier than at present—too early in my judgment—and my mother wrote of me in her diary on my fourth birthday, 'He has already read many books.'"

Kate Douglas Wiggin admits that books are not the only means of grace. "I have seen children as well as grown people who seemed to absorb and distill a wisdom from the world of nature—the mysteries of earth, air, sky and sea—from sympathetic contact with human fellow creatures and from some hidden source of power within their own souls, that put the wisdom of the books to shame. It is not prudent, however, to conclude that our particular child is a being of that rarified sort simply because he declines to read."

Horace E. Scudder says: "The fables which have clustered around the name of Aesop should be a boy's first real book. These stories are short, they go straight to the point, they are about his natural playmates, and they answer to his own dramatic imagination."

To Have Beautiful Skin

Every one who would have a clear, soft, velvety skin free from pimples, blackheads, redness and disfiguring eruptions must use Dr. Chase's Ointment. It is a true food for the skin, does not clog the pores as do powders, and insures permanent benefit. There is not a single itching, burning skin disease of men, women and children that Dr. Chase's Ointment will not cure. Mothers find it invaluable for Baby Eczema, scald head and chafing on the little ones.

Don't Wake the Baby.

Did you know you could give medicine to your children while they were soundly sleeping? You certainly can. It is called Vapo-Cresolene. You put some Cresolene in the vaporizer, light the lamp, and place near the bed. The children quietly breathe-in the vapor. There is nothing equal to it for whooping cough, croup, colds, cough, sore throat, and all other troubles of the throat and chest. It is economical, pleasant, safe.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. A Vapo-Cresolene outfit, including the Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a life-time, and a bottle of Cresolene, complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. Illustrated booklet containing physicians' testimonials free upon request. Vapo-Cresolene Co., 180 Fulton St., New York, U.S.A.

Too Much War.

Frederic Harrison's essay on the Nineteenth Century is included in a volume of essays recently published. Mr. Harrison says in that essay that in the last thirty years of the century society did not make the advance which the middle of the century promised. Instead it went steadily backward, the world over, beginning with the apotheosis of Bismark in 1871.

Since then, he says, we have had imitation Bismarks, wars of conquest and aggression, the policy of "blood and iron," inflation of trade and of territory "paying" wars, the enthronement of imperialism. There have been wars in Europe, in Africa, in America, and even in the Pacific; wars in the Balkan, in Asia Minor, in Crete, in Greece, in Armenia, in Egypt, in the Sudan, in Abyssinia, in Tunis, in West Africa, and in East Africa, in Central Africa and South Africa, in Madagascar, in Tonquin, in Siam, in Burmah, in Northern India, in China, in Corea, in Cuba, in the Philippines.

All of these have been begun, or continued or ended in dominion, in a scramble for territory, ascendancy, or "loot." All have been needless, unjust, ultimately ruinous to the defeated and the victors alike.

"The people have caught the infection from their rulers, and are as thoroughly drunk with the lust of dominion as kings and ministers. Democracy has been discovered to be a more facile instrument of the 'pirate boss' than aristocracy or monarchy itself. 'Imperium et libertas' was the serio-comic motto of cynical jingoism. It has proved to be only one of the catchwords of the fraud. The real motto of this policy of expansion is 'Imperium et servitudo.' Empire spells slavery: moral, spiritual, economic, political subservience. The connection of dominion with servitude is as obvious as it is inevitable. To extend the rule of a nation over another race, be it barbarous or civilized, necessarily involves war; and if it be with an uncivilized people or a loosely organized people, it involves war usually in its most brutal form. A war of domination is a school of tyranny, injustice, and selfishness."

Valuable Advice to Rheumatics

Eat meat sparingly, and take very little sugar. Avoid damp feet, drink water abundantly, and always rely on Polson's Nerviline as an absolute reliever of rheumatic pains. Being five times stronger than other remedies, its power over pain is simply beyond belief. Buy a large 25 cent bottle today, test it, and see if this is not so. Polson's Nerviline always cures rheumatism. Sold by Garden Bros.

Valuable Society Report.

(New York Press.)

Earl Russell, whose right to land upon these shores has been called in question, ought to take off his hat every time he sees a society reporter, for the foundation of the fortunes of his house were laid by what was probably the most lucrative and successful piece of society reporting ever done.

A Russell, who was hanging about the court of Henry VIII, seeking what fortune might throw in his way, saw his opportunity when Henry married Anne Boleyn. He wrote a most glittering account of the royal wedding, which was circulated far and wide, and immensely pleased the King and his bride. As a token of his appreciation Henry went out and robbed a few churches and monasteries and bestowed their lands upon the society reporter, thus founding the dual house of Bedford, of which Lord Russell is a scion.

It is safe to say that no piece of society reporting before or since has had such gratifying results for the reporter and his descendants as the work of the first Russell when he described the wedding of Henry VIII.

A Complimentary Ticket.

Farmer Hayrake—"So ole Si Jenkins's son is a-runnin' fer congress out west? On what ticket?"

Farmer Snakeroot—"I didn't hear. But he was seck a 'dead-head' around here I reckon he must be runnin' on a 'complimentary'."

She Meant It.

A suburban family who employs an old-time servant as a cook recently had a gas range fixed in the kitchen. When the range was in its place the workman who put it there lighted the jets inside the oven and then closed the door. He opened it again, turned off the gas, and then, relighting the jets, explained to the old servant how the range was used.

The jets cannot be seen when the door of the oven is shut, and in the excitement of the explanation the workman closed them and forgot the lighted jets. The old woman, after hearing all he had to say, shook her head and said:—

"Tisn't no use to tell me about it. I'm goin' to use this old fire stove I've cooked on so long."

The workman laughed and went away, not thinking that the cook meant what she said. She did mean it, though, and continued to use the stove to cook with.

When the head of the family that employs her received his gas bill some little time after the bill showed that he owed the gas company £4. Investigation proved that the jets in the oven had been burning from the time the workman left. The old cook had never opened the oven door.

"BLOTCHY" FACES

How many have to say "My pimply face is the bane of my life"—How few would have it to say if they gave Dr. Agnew's Ointment the testing that Mr. Lilly did.

"I have found Dr. Agnew's Ointment the best remedy for pimples and sore faces that I have ever used. I had three trying cases under my care and have cured them with this greatest of skin remedies. All traces of the sores in each case have been cleared off and the skin left as soft as a baby's. I recommend it everywhere."—Chas. H. Lilly, West Pittston. Price 35cts. 87

The Evolution in Literature.

Jones—"A few years ago boys read Indian stories, got false ideas of life, and then ran away from home to fight redskins. This is all changed now."

Smith—"Yes; now they read monthly magazines, and when they run away from home they go to the city to marry the girl in the corset advertisement."

Too Great a Risk

It is dangerous to neglect a simple case of itching piles as the trouble is likely to become chronic and develop into fatal incurable fistula or cancer of the rectum. A single application of Dr. Chase's Ointment will quickly relieve the itching and burning sensation, and a few boxes will cure any case of piles. This standard ointment has probably relieved more suffering than any preparation you can mention.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

After being in business at Bristol for five years, I have decided that it will be better for my customers and better for me to sell goods only on the Cash System.

By adopting the new plan I will be able to buy for spot cash and thus secure large cash discounts, the benefit of which my customers will receive in lower prices.

In discussing this business change with merchants who have tried both systems, they inform me that under the new system they are able to sell goods remarkably cheaper than under the old.

I therefore desire to announce that commencing with January 1st, 1902, I will sell goods for pay down only.

Farm Produce will be taken in exchange for goods. Yours truly,

FRED. A. PHILLIPS,

In the Clutch Of Consumption.

Don't neglect that persistent hacking cough till you find yourself in the clutch of Consumption. It's an easy matter to stop it now by taking

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

This pleasant remedy heals and soothes the lungs and bronchial tubes, and cures lingering and chronic coughs when other remedies fail.

Mr. W. P. Cann, writing from Morpeth, Ont., says: "I honestly believe I would have died of consumption only for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I have used it for years and consider it has no equal for severe colds and throat troubles."
