

Painters' Kidneys.

The worst thing a painter has to contend with is the turpentine.

The lead, of course, is bad too. But the turpentine cuts the kidneys, inflames and weakens them, makes the painter's life a dangerous and troublesome one. When a painter's back aches, it is time for him to begin treating the kidneys.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS will fix them up—take out the inflammation and congestion, give ease to the aching back.

J. J. Evanson, the well-known painter and decorator, 50 Oxford St., Toronto, Ont., said: "About eight weeks ago I was taken with an excruciating pain in my back over the kidneys. It was so bad that my wife had to apply hot cloths till the doctor came and gave me morphine."

He said the trouble was due to a stone passing from the kidney to the bladder.

My water was loaded with a brick dust deposit and scalded on passing.

While in this condition I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and started taking them.

It was not long before I got relief from pain and have been improving in health ever since. My urine is now clear and does not smart me, and I feel better than in years.

LEVO-LIVER PILLS.

These little black fellows act easily and naturally on the system, clearing away all bile and effete material. Constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, heartburn, waterbrash—all disappear when they are used. Price 25c.

When Lord William Won the Cross.

Archibald Forbes, who tells the incident in which Lord William Beresford won the Victoria Cross, says it was the bravest deed he ever saw. He says:—"Beresford was out on a scout, or rather an armed reconnaissance, to ascertain the strength of the Zulu forces. Buller directed him to be very wary or he would be ambuscaded. The advice was good, for suddenly from out a deep watercourse crossing the plain and from out the adjacent long grass sprang up a long line of several thousand armed Zulus. At Buller's loud command to fire a volley and then retire, Beresford and his scouts rode back towards the main body, followed by Zulu bullets. Two men were killed on the spot. A third man's horse slipped up, and his wounded rider came to the ground, his horse running away. Beresford, riding behind his retiring party, looked back and saw that the fallen man was trying to rise into a sitting position. The Zulus were perilously close to the poor fellow, but Beresford believed he saw a chance of anticipating them. Galloping back to the wounded man and dismounting, he confronted his adversaries with his revolver while urging the fallen soldier to get on his (Beresford's) horse. The wounded man bade Beresford remount and fly. 'Why,' said he, 'should two men die when death was inevitable but to one?' The quaint resourceful humor of his race did not fail Beresford in this crisis; he turned on the wounded man and swore with clenched fist that he would punch his head if he did not assist in the saving of his life. This argument prevailed. Still facing his foes with his revolver, Beresford partly lifted, partly hustled the man into the saddle, then scrambled up himself and set the chestnut agoing after the other horsemen. Another moment's delay and both must have been assailed. A comrade, the brave Sergeant O'Toole, fortunately came back, shot down Zulu after Zulu with cool courage, and then aided Beresford in keeping the wounded man in the saddle till the laager was reached, where no one could tell whether it was the rescued or the rescuer was the wounded man; so smeared was Beresford with borrowed blood. Lord William was commanded to Windsor to receive the reward 'for valor' from the hands of the sovereign. But something more must be told. Beresford plainly told her Majesty that he could not in honor receive recognition of the service it had been his good fortune to perform unless that recognition were shared in by Sergeant O'Toole, who, he persisted in maintaining, deserved infinitely greater credit than any which might attach to him. Not less than soldierly valor can Queen Victoria appreciate soldierly honesty, generosity and modesty; and so the next Gazette announced that the proudest reward a British soldier can aspire to had been conferred on Sergeant Edmund O'Toole of Baker's Horse."

Chronic Bronchitis

Rev. J. N. Van Natter, of Streator, Ill., writes:—"About one year ago I obtained from you six bottles of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. I gave away two and took the other four. I had been seriously afflicted with Chronic Bronchitis for ten years and could get no relief. A leading physician told me that it was only a question of time until it would wear me out, but thanks to this wonderful remedy of Dr. Chase I am now a strong man. 25 cents a bottle, all dealers."

More Encouragement for Bald Heads.

Gentlemen who are not endowed with any too much hair on the top of their heads were recently very much encouraged by a discovery of one of our modern scientists, that electric light would cause, in time, a luxuriant growth of hair. The effect of these encouraging words is still being felt, and now a Massachusetts wise man advances a theory which is even more encouraging. It is simply a patent arrangement worn inside the hat, which emits a vapor conducive to hair growing. The New York Tribune describes it thus:—"To all outward appearances the new patent hat differs not at all from the ordinary derby. Its secrets are concealed within the crown. There, fastened to the interior of the crown, and hereby raises an inch or more above the hair, is a small metal receptacle. Into this receptacle is locked a specially prepared pad, which is soaked before using with a secret combination of chemicals. When the hat is worn the heat of the head generates a chemical action which throws off from the pad a vapor acting on a perfect bald scalp, will produce a new crop of hair, or if the hair has begun to fall it will renew and strengthen the growth."

Women as Architects.

Mrs. Burton Harrison very truly says in her article on "Society Women in Business" that architecture offers a great field for them. The real problem of that profession man never has successfully solved. As it is not his business to keep a house in order, he cannot know how it should be arranged. With him closets are merely necessary evils, whereas a woman realizes that the closets should be outlined on the plans first, and the space that is left out up into the number of rooms desired. In truth, Mrs. Harrison's comment on the subject of closets leads to the supposition that she has heard of the Chicago women who insisted upon planning her own house. "That is a fine large dining room you have," said the architect who was engaged to attend to the details and superintend the construction.

"Dining-room!" exclaimed the woman scornfully. "It's mighty little you know about a model home. That's the china-closet." "Don't you think," suggested the architect, after he had recovered from the shock, "that it would be well to have an alcove in this big bedroom on the second floor?"

"That's the linen-closet," returned the woman.

"But there are two windows in it," protested the architect.

"It is of the utmost importance that a linen-closet should be well ventilated," asserted the woman.

The architect went over the plans carefully before making any further comment.

"Ah, now I understand," he said at last.

"Here is your room on the third floor."

"That's the store room," she answered. "I have only attended to the most important details on each floor. You can put the other rooms wherever they will fit in."—[Chicago Evening Post.

Now I Feel Real Well

Mr. W. H. La Blance, Bonfield, Ont., writes:—"I was once a sufferer from catarrh, and while using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure I was recommended to use also Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to build up the system. My nerves were exhausted and I was too weak to do a day's work when I began using it, and now am strong and healthy, and feel real well. I am perfectly sure that anyone who uses Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will be as I do, that it is the best strengthener and restorative obtainable."

Playwright vs. Burglar.

The great playwright awoke with a start. He was one of those great playwrights who make forty plays a year—comic operas, tragedies, comedies, romances, "adaptions," anything. Where they obtain the material—not pen, ink, and paper, but plots and the like—the admiring public wonders. But, then, the admiring public has no memory, and no library. Well, the great playwright awoke with a start. Something unusual, he knew intuitively, was about to happen. He heard a noise from down-stairs. Burglars! Creeping stealthily down the stairs, he discovered a masked robber at his jewel casket. "Ah!" cried the great playwright, "stealing!"

"No," replied the burglar, calmly, for he had recognized the great playwright, "I am merely 'adapting.'"

The great playwright hung his head and retreated, stung to the quick.—Tit Bits.

Jupiter Warmer Than the Earth.

The gigantic mass of Jupiter has a much larger warmth than that of the earth. It is the result of the molecular movement produced by the compression of the strata and must be greater the more powerful the masses, and hence the larger the pressure of the strata is. Jupiter surpasses the earth in point of mass 307 times, and for this reason the inner temperature or individual warmth of the planet is probably high enough to evaporate the water upon the surface quickly, so that water vapor forms the principal substance of the atmosphere of Jupiter. Water vapor is an excellent reflector and readily accounts for the bright radiation of light emitted by the planet.—Professor Hughes in Chicago Tribune.

Laconic and Informal.

Young Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's invitations to the ball she gave the other night in New York for her niece, Miss May Goelet, were delightfully original. On a plain visiting card she wrote: "Will you come and dance Wednesday evening, January 2, at Sherry's, at 10 30?" And one society wag returned his visiting card, on which was written: "Sure."
