THE LONELIEST MEN IN ENGLAND.

Winter Hardships Which Lighthouse Keepers Face.

(London 'Daily Mail.')

During the storms that rage intermittently around our coasts in winter, the landsman's mind turns in sympathy toward those who in ship or lifeboat are fighting the waves for dear life. But how often does he give one thought to the men who immure themselves in the lighthouses that stud our coast line?

'I would rather spend my life in a penal settlement than be a lighthouse keeper,' declared a gentleman to the writer, after a visit to the Bishop Lighthouse, off the Cornish coast. 'A convict does see a little of the world he lives in, but a lighthouse-keeper sees Lothing but a dreary expanse of water. I am not surprised that many of them should lose their mental balance.'

The visitor to the Bishop Lighthouse did not over-color the picture. It was only the other day that one read of the Lougships Lighthouse, also off the coast of Cornwall, having been completely isolated for many weeks in consequence of fearful storms. The keepers had been reduced to smoking coffee, hops, and tea-leaves, though fortunately, they had not wanted for food.

The keepers of the famous Eddystone Lighthouse not infrequently find themselves in a similar predicament. In a gale the wonderful monument to the engineering skill of the country are of such stupendous magnitude that they rise to a height of 200 feet, and sweep right over the lantern. To those cooped up inside, the sound of these waves that buffet themselves against this waves is like that of a battery of guns at close quarters. 'At such times the house shakes like a tree with a man on the top of it,' was the graphic description of one who had spent many years of his life there. The new Eddystone is the roomiest and most comfortable of all our rock lighthouses. The sectional view shows the various compartments, commencing at the bottom with the water tank, then the entrance, the two oil receptacles, the store room, the crane, the living apartment, the low light, the bedroom, and the service room in the order named. Formerly only two keepers were employed in the lighthouse, but a grim incident resulted in their number being increased. One of the two men died. So fierce ran the seas that the remaining keeper could not get the body of his late comrade to the shore. For a month the tempestuous weather continued, and for a month the surviving keeper lived along in that solitary place with the body as his only companion! He was afraid to cast it into the waves, for dred and sixty feet in height, each resting on he might be accused of murder. Keepers in rock lighthouses do not last long. The incessant pounding of the waves against the building, the loneliness, the want of fresh air and exercise reduce the men to a state of nervousness that is pitiful to behold. They require a fortnight's leave every six weeks, but this liberal allowance does little to improve their physical state. A medical man whose duty it is to pay periodical visits to one of our lighthouses confesses that there is no remedy for the ills peculiar to the keepers except retirement. The utter isolation of the silent sentinels of our coast is well illustrated by the case of the Bishop Lighthouse aforementioned, which stands right out in the Atlantic. Not once in a year is it calm enough for the superintendent to land his stores at the lighthouse steps. They have to be hauled up by means of a wind-lass from above. A visitor bold enough to visit the place is 'admitted' in a similar way. He places one foot in a noose at the end of a rope, which is thrown down to the boat, and, gripping the rope firmly above his head, he is drawn up the 'set off,' as the plinth round the lighthouse is called. Thence he climbs up a perpendicular ladder to the door of the house. Superstition adds a terror to the life of the men in this lighthouse, for the first structure was washed away bodily, and the keepers believe that the rock is haunted. A fear of a different kind keeps the men of Muckle Flugga Lighthouse-the most northern point of Scotland-on the tenterhooks of a terrible suspense. On three occasions the huge black rock on which the lighthouse stands has been shaken by an earthquake!

There is something comical, though characteristic of the stiff necked Scot, in a story which came from a neighboring lighthouse, which is in charge of two different families. They live on a desert island. From year end to year-end they never see a visitor, except the man that bring their stores. Eighteen months ago the heads of the two families quarrelled, and ever since they have ceased to speak!

At the shore lighthouse of Ushinish the keeper's family have to travel forty miles to kirk.' It is no reflection on their piety to add that they are not regular attenders.

A lighthouse keeper receives a maximum wage of £75 a year, out of which he has to supply his own rations. These consist of such unappetizing edibles as tinned beef and hard biscuit, usually washed down with tea and condensed milk. No intoxicating liquors are allowed.

Stinging Chilblains.

As distressing and annoying as are chilblains they can be immediately relieved by the applica-tion of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Try it when you have retired with itching, stinging feet, and ex-pect to spend a sleepless night in suffering. Such a trial will convince you that as a cure for chil-blains Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard of ex-cellence. It is the world's greatest cure for all itching of the skin.

What I Saw Across the Sea.

BY S. M. BOYER. NO. 9.

In my last letter a partial account was given of the old gun, Mons Meg. This was one of the most ancient guns in Europe and was employed at the siege of Dumbarton in 1489, and again in 1497 when James IV. in. nine feet wide or from the tesselated pavevaded England. In rear of the King's Bastion is the grave yard where the officers bury their dogs. Edinburgh's earliest history circles around her castle but the records of its foundation are lost amid the mist of the centuries prior to the era when it was most probably a stronghold of the ancient Picts who inhabited the land. Doubtless these rude warriors saw the Roman legions swarm around its base when they invaded the coun-

The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sirs,-I wish to let you know of the benefit I have derived by using your Pills.

I am a widow with a family to support, and have to work hard, which is very trying on my nerves.

At night I was unable to sleep for hours after going to bed, and it seemed as if every nerve in my body was on the go.

I had a smothering, choking sensation, and had to spring out of bed to catch my breath.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done me so much good that I can recommend them highly to any person afflicted with heart and nerve troubles like I was.

luxury and grandeur that marked the zenith of the Roman empire. This part of England is very thickly populated. There are within ten miles of the city nearly one hundred villages. The railway station here is one of the finest I have ever seen, said to be the handsomest in England. It covers with appurtenances, depots and sidings, one hundred to the York cathedral or minster as it is called. Here as elsewhere you can see nothing without paying for it. One shilling is asked to inspect this old chapel. As we enter we are struck with amazement at the enormous size of the building. When you first gain a view of this mountain of architecture or at entering cast your eye through a vista of five hundred and nineteen feet which is the length of the church and two hundred and fortyment gaze through column and arch up to the ribbed dome ninety-nine feet above you, you are lost in wonder and astonishment. History records the fact that it was two hundred and fifty years in building, being commenced in the 13th century. One thing that attracted my attention was a large window called the five sisters. Tradition say that five nuns presented the window to the church.

burgh. A monument to his memory has been erected on Princess street two hundred and eighty feet high with a statue of Scott in marble in the centre with his dog at his feet. The monument was erected at a cost of £16,000, a spiral stairway leads to the top and visitors are admitted at a charge of two pence.

The city has a fine library costing fifty thousand dollars the gift of Andrew Carnegie. The city has many fine public buildings among others the University, begun in 1789. Students from all parts of the world come here chiefly to study medicine. I might here give my readers a short sketch of the Forth bridge eight miles from Edinburgh. Carriages drive out every day in the summer and carry passengers to visit the bridge. This bridge without doubt is one of the greatest engineering feats of the day. This estuary of the Forth had been ferryed across for centuries and several attempts had been made to bridge it. A conference of engineers was held on the subject and it was resolved that a steel cantilever bridge with central connecting girders was the best solution of the problem.

Four railway companies amalgamated to carry the project into effect and in 1882 the chief engineers were ordered to proceed with the plans. The steel towers are three hunsolid masonry seventy feet in diameter. From the base to the top it is four hundred and fifty feet. Seen from a distance it looks like great mountain. It took three years to lay the foundation, and from three to four thousand men worked on it seven years. It is one mile and a half in length. Each of its spans are two hundred and fifty feet in length. The cost of this structure was four million pounds sterling. We now take our last view of the Scottish metropoles and purchase tickets for the ancient city of York a distance of one hundred and sixty miles. We have the choice of three different lines to travel from here to London. The country through the northern part of England is most beautiful. The land is level and the farms are separated by hedges and shade trees and apparently every foot of land is brought into use. The farmers are busy with their harvest and most of the work was done by hand. The reapers in use were mostly for one horse. I saw several small steam threshers at work. All the grain is drawn to stacks. Villages and towns line the way. Reaching York we take a cab and drive to the city hotel. This old city of York is one of the most ancient if not the oldest city in Britain, and according to historians was a flourishing place two thousand years ago. It stands in the centre of a rich agricultural district. The river Quee flows through the middle of the city and winds its way toward the Humber. York is rich in historical associations from the Roman period to the present day. Here was established the head quarters of the sixth legion and it became the fixed residence of a wealthy colony of Roman citizens who lived in all the
