A LESSON IN CAUTION.

The New Store Detective and the Suspected Shoplifter.

"What in doubt let her alone" is our first and most important maxim in regard to shoplifters," said a New Orleans floorwalker of long experience. "It is better to let a thousand guilty people escape and carry off our property with them than to run the risk of making one mistake, and when you hear of a woman being actually taken into custody you may rest assured that she has been under surveillance for days and that the evidence against her is strong enough to convict a bishop. It doesn't do to jump at conclusions, even when they are 'caught in the act,' as the saying goes, and that reminds me of a little incident which taught me what was probably the most valuable lesson of my life.

"It happened soon after I went into the business," the floorwalker went on, "when I was holding down the job of a house detective in a department store almost as large as this. It was my first employment of the kind, and naturally I was anxious to show my efficiency; so I was a little disappointed when a month or more went by without giving me a chance to gather in a culprit. One day, when we had a big bargain sale in progress and the store was jammed with people from end to end, I had my attention attracted to a quietly dressed, middle aged woman who was wandering from department to department in a manner that struck me as suspicious. At last she stopped before a fancy goods counter, where a number of handsome silver cardcases were displayed, and a moment later I saw her pick up one of them and drop it into her pocket.

"She stepped at once into the crowd, and I rushed after her. I was a little distance away at the time, and the crush was so great I could not get to her immediately without exciting a panic. Just before I reached her side the young man who managed the fancy goods department squeezed in ahead of me and tapped her on the shoulder. 'Pardon me, madam' he said, 'but you left this on my counter,' and he handed her a cardcase, almost the facsimile of the one I saw her pick up. 'Why, that can't be mine,' she exclaimed, looking startled; 'I have mine in my pocket.' The department manager opened the case he had brought and disclosed a large roll of bills, a hundred dollar note on the outside. 'This may help you to identify it,' he said, smiling. 'By that time the lady had extracted the other. 'Yes that is mine,' she said when she saw the money. 'It was an absurd mistake, but you see they look very much alike on the outside.'

"During this brief colloquy my blood ran cold. Ten seconds more and I would have had the woman under arrest, probably involving the house in a great damage suit and certainly losing my job. As the department manager turned he saw me for the first time. 'Hello, Jim!' he said. 'I suppose you were intending to call her back too.' 'Yes,' I replied slowly, but I was mighty careful not to tell him how I was intending to do it."

Speechless and Paralyzed.—"I had valvular disease of the heart," writes Mrs. J. S. Goode, of Truro, N.S. "I suffered terribly and was often speechless and partially paralyzed. One dose of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart gave me relief, and before I finished one bottle I was able to go about. To-day I am a well woman."—43

EDWARD VII AND HARRIET LANE.

The Happiest Memory of His American Tour is that of His visit to the White House.

"During the Prince of Wales's stay in Washington (upon the occasion of his visit to America, in 1860,) he was President Buchanan's guest, and occupied apartments of the Executive Mansion looking over Lafayette Square," writes William Perrine, in the May Ladies' Home Journal. "One evening when an elaborate display of fireworks was given in his honor he stood on the balcony of the White House, together with Mr. Buchanan and Miss Lane, amidst great cheers. When dining with his hosts he would escort Miss Lane to the table, seating himself at her right. His manner was somewhat bashful, and most public ceremonies apparently bored him. But while he was with Miss Lane and the coterie of beautiful women of her set it was noted that for the first time since he had been in this country he seemed to show the manner of a gallant young gentleman desirous of pleasing. One of the merriest mornings she had with him was at a gymnasium in Washington attached to a female seminary. On the brass rings suspended from the ceiling he swung himself one by one across the room, and the whole party laughed heartily at his pranks on the rope ladder. Then he fell to playing tennis. Miss Lane and the Prince together succeeded in conquering Mrs. Thompson and the Duke of Newcastle; it was next the turn of the victors to play against each other, and Harriet, who was one of the most robust girls of the day, speedily outbowed the Prince and put his muscles to shame."

Books Boys Should Read.
Child life, like grown life, has its troubles and the refuge is in the imagination. Let the mind be exercised in the best books, and the escape will be into a holy land. The liking for works of the imagination should then be cultivated as a normal growth, not killed as a weed. Besides furnishing us resources for pleasure and an escape from care, the best works of the imagination are better than most, historical composition. They make other times living and real, and are as little likely to mislead us as history is.

Protruding, Itching Piles

Rev. S. A. Duprau, Methodist Minister, Consocon, Prince Edward County, Ont., states:—"I was troubled with itching and bleeding piles for years, and they ultimately attained to a very violent form. Large lumps or abscesses formed, so that it was with great difficulty and considerable pain that I was able to stool. At this severe crisis I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, but I had little or no faith in it, as I had tried various remedies before and to no purpose.

"Now, imagine how great and joyous was my surprise to find that just the one box cured me, so that the lumps disappeared, and also the external swelling. I feel like a different man to-day, and have not the least doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment saved me from a very dangerous and painful operation and many years of suffering. You are at perfect liberty to use this testimonial as you see fit for the benefit of others similarly afflicted."

which by its selections and evasions has as often been the handmaid of falsehood as of fact—history, which so loves the mountain peaks and so seldom touches the lowlands. In the great writers, always and everywhere, sin comes up for judgment before a jury of the peers of the realm, and righteousness finds in some way not always patent to us at first its reward. The writer holds the balance even. He has gone over the evidence for us, and his decision is as clear as is that of the chief justice. What do we care what the Macbeth of Scottish history was when Shakespeare has drawn the Macbeth of all the generations? The great writer is the student of emotions, passions, principles, of wars and constitutional amendments are only the dry recorded results.—Professor Morse in Harper's Bazar.

Success.
"Success" for May spreads a table loaded with good cheer. The solid dishes are furnished by such literary chefs as Henry Loomis Nelson, William Matthews, L. L. D., Hon. Bradford Rhodes, James Rea, Orison Sweet Marden, Professor E. W. Scripture, and Rev. Ferdinand Cowie Iglehart. The salads were prepared by Mrs. Burton Harrison, Mrs. Elizabeth Custer, Lillian M. Siegfried, and Mrs. Cornelia Cole Fairbanks among others. Mrs. Fairbanks, who was recently chosen president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, makes a graceful plea for the restoration of historic landmarks. Mrs. Custer gives her amusing experiences with a refractory kodak in the land of the Iliad. Mrs. Siegfried writes charmingly of the revival of lace making among women, and Mrs. Harrison contributes a delightful story of society.

The whole story of the Pan-American Exposition receives treatment,—its conception in the forests of Venezuela, when Simon Bolivar fought Spain, its advocacy by a long line of statesmen, and its culmination in 1901. The whole issue is beautifully illustrated.

The May "New" Lippincott.

Paul Laurence Dunbar's new novel, "The Sport of the Gods," is published entire in the May "New" Lippincott Magazine. This is by far the strongest and best fiction from a pen noted for its humor and pathos. As "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in its day held the reader captive, so does this novel of the new Negro, enfranchised but still a charge upon our consciences. Opening with a false arrest, trial,—so called,—and conviction in a Southern town, the tale shifts to New York. Here the writer speaks from the heart when he says of the Southern Negroes who come North seeking their fortunes: "It was better for them to sing to God across the Southern fields." In the cases of Joe Hamilton and his pretty sister Kitty this was undeniably the truth. Towards the end a "yellow" journal reporter discovers the secret of the early arrest. His acumen not only brings glory to his paper, but reunites those with whom the "gods" have been "sporting."

In addition to the complete novel there is plenty of good short fiction, varied in theme, in the May "New" Lippincott. A story of Mexico, by Edwin Knight Buttolph, called "The Slavery of Moises," gives a glowing instance of a man's sacrifice for one he loves. "The Supreme Court of Love," by Julia MacNair Wright, is an amusing prose farce in an apartment-house.

Who has been cured of backache and kidney trouble by the use of Dean's Pills has written as follows:

Mrs. Wm. Bishop, Palmyra, Ont., writes: "I have used Dean's Pills for lame back and know they are an excellent pill, as two boxes completely cured me."

Mrs. J. T. Dagonais, Montreal, Que., writes: "One year ago I suffered terribly with kidney trouble. I consulted several physicians and used their prescriptions without success. I saw Dean's Pills advertised, so purchased a box and they made a complete cure."

Mrs. J. J. O'Connell, Moncton, N. B., writes: "About six months ago I suffered terribly with weak and lame back. I took one box of Dean's Pills and on the third day they cured me and I have not had any more of my trouble since."

Plasmon, a New Dairy Product.

Many new industries have been developed in the British Isles at the close of the last century. One of the most novel had its birth in the vicinity of Buckingham—namely, that of the manufacture from the milk of creameries, after the butter has been extracted, of a substance known by the highly classical name of plasmon. This substance takes its name from the Greek, meaning "that which gives form."

The fresh milk as it comes from the cow is put into a separator, all the cream being removed by this method. The separated milk is afterwards treated so as to coagulate all the proteids of the milk; and this coagulated mass is then kneaded and dried at a temperature of 70 degrees centigrade under an atmosphere of carbonic acid gas. When perfectly free from moisture, the plasmon is ground into a granular powder which is completely soluble in hot water.

As to the economic value of plasmon there can be no doubt, when it is known that the German Government supply it in very large quantities to the army and navy. As a portable, concentrated nutrient, according to the German Government Department for the Investigation of Food-Substances for the Troops, it has been found that one ounce of this powder is equal in nourishing and sustaining properties to three and a quarter pounds of the finest beef-steak, or to about ten or twelve pints of milk.—[Chambers's Journal.

Knew All Their Tricks.
"Gentlemen," said Frederick the Great, "I am entirely dissatisfied with the cavalry. The regiments are completely out of hand; there is no accuracy, no order, the men ride like tailors. I beg that this may not occur again and that each of you will pay more attention to his duty, but I know how things go on. You think I am not up to your dodges, but I know them all and will recapitulate them.

"When the season for riding drill comes on, the captain sends for sergeant major and says: 'I have an appointment this morning at—'. Tell the first lieutenant to take the rides.' So the sergeant major goes to the senior subaltern and gives him the message, and the latter says: 'What! The captain will be away? Then I am off hunting. Tell the second lieutenant to take the men.' And the second lieutenant who is probably still in bed, says: 'what, both of them away? Then I will stay where I am. I was up this morning till 3 to a dance. Tell the cornet I am ill and he must take the rides.' Finally the cornet remarks: 'Look here, sergeant major what is the good of me standing out there in the cold? You know all about it much better than I do. You go and take them,' and so it goes, and what must be the end of it all? What can I hope to do with such cavalry before the enemy?"—History of Frederick the Great.

Gossiping Neighbors
People will talk, and when neighbors get together there is very likely to be something said about Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the surprising cures it is effecting among sufferers with piles and itching skin diseases. It is by word of mouth, from friend to friend, that the fame of this great Ointment has kindled the globe. It stands today as the only actual and guaranteed cure for every form of itching, bleeding and protruding piles.

MIXED HOG BREEDS.

Not so Satisfactory as Those of Pure Blood.

The Kansas experiment station tested the feeding of some pure bred Poland-China and Berkshire hogs along with some hogs of mixed breeds, such as are kept by the average farmer, and they found it required from 10 to 30 per cent more of food to make 100 pounds of gain on the mixed breeds than on the pure bred.

While some of the mixed breeds would stand heavy feeding and give good returns for their food, there were some good in hind quarters, but too low in front and with weak heart action. They would not stand heavy feeding, got off their feed easily, did not have strong constitutions and easily succumbed to disease. Others were short fine boned, blocky chunks that fattened quickly, but would not eat enough to make a profitable gain. Those that made the best gain were well boned, with both fore and hind quarters well developed, rather rangy, large through the heart and with legs of fair length.

Contentment—Giles—"A very happy New Year to you marm, and hope you'll be as lucky this year as I was last." Lady—"Oh, thank you very much, Giles; but you surely forget that you lost your wife in the spring, and broke your leg in the summer." Giles—"Yes, but neither leg's all right, and as for my marm, it might have been I that was the fool instead."—[Punch.

Every Mother A Doctor

It is an anxious time for mothers when the little ones get their feet cold and wet, and come home hoarse and coughing, or awaken in the night victims of deadly erup. Then it is that mothers turn gratefully to Dr. Chase, who, through his great Recipe Book and famous family remedies, has time and again saved the little ones and older ones, too, from suffering and death. It is truly surprising how promptly Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine brings relief when the throat is sore and inflamed, when the cold is tight in the chest, and the cough painful and distressing. It allays the inflammation, heats the sore and torn membranes, soothes the nerves and clears the air passages.

People who know of the singular virtues of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine do not think of accepting the cheap substitutes which many druggists offer in its place; 25 cents.
