

Asthma.

You've tried almost everything for it, haven't you? And we presume you are about discouraged. Now what do you think of our idea of breathing-in the medicine, bringing it right up to the diseased part? It looks reasonable, doesn't it? And it's successful, too.

When you inhale Vapo-Cresolene your breathing becomes easy, the wheezing ceases, and you drop to sleep. For croup and whooping-cough it's a quick cure.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. The Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a lifetime, and a bottle of Cresolene complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. Illustrated booklet containing physicians' testimonials free upon request. VAPOR-CRESOLENE CO., 130 Fulton St., New York, U.S.A.

A Huge Salary From Working Overtime.

Saturday Evening Post: The story printed by one of the New York papers that the salary of John A. McCall, president of the New York Life Insurance Company, is to be raised an additional $25,000 a year, recalls the incident that proved a turning point in Mr. McCall's career. It reads like a chapter from the books that used to be published for good little boys, and incidentally shows that it pays to do more than your mere duty.

In the seventies, Mr. McCall, then a young man with a wife and two children, received an appointment in the New York State Insurance Department in return for work done for his political party. When he entered upon the duties of his position, which was that of a clerk at $1,200 a year, he dropped politics and attended strictly to business. This fact did not save him from being marked for dismissal when a Republican Insurance Commissioner was appointed to succeed the Democrat under whom Mr. McCall held office.

Things looked pretty black for the young clerk. Out of his salary he had been able to save little or nothing after providing for his family, and the prospects for getting another another place were almost hopeless.

But the fact that he was going to lose his job did not apparently interfere with Mr. McCall's conviction that he ought in the meanwhile to earn the salary he was till drawing. Therefore it happened that the Insurance Commissioner, in passing the Capitol late at night, noticed on half a dozen occasions that lights were still burning in a room of the Insurance Department. This made him curious, and he concluded to investigate. So he went upstairs and found young McCall bending over ledger and record, and working away as though his term of office were to extend forever.

"How is it you are working here so late when everybody else has gone home?" the new Commissioner asked.

"Well," was the response, "there is a lot to do, and when I go out I want to leave everything cleaned up."

"Was it you that was here last night, and night before, and the night before that, burning the State's gas?"

"Yes, I was here."

"Are you in the habit of working nights?"

"Whenever it is necessary, I am."

"And have been in the past?"

"Yes; whenever there was anything to do, I have always thought it a good scheme to get it out of the way, because it proves troublesome if I let it accumulate."

"H-m!" grunted the new Commissioner.

"I am glad to see that somebody is anxious to earn his salary. Good night."

The next day the Republican Commissioner saw the Republican Governor and said:

"I guess that fellow McCall is all right. He is the sort of chap I want, even if he is a Democrat."

As a result, the notice to Mr. McCall, advising him that his services were to be dispensed with, was withdrawn, and he remained in the Insurance Department, in various successive capacities, until 1883, when he was appointed by Governor Grover Cleveland as Insurance Commissioner. After his term expired he accepted an offer from the Equitable Life Insurance Company to act as Controller, and when the New York Life was reorganized he was, by the unanimous vote of its directors, elected as president.

Gave Himself Away.

An old soldier who had served his 21 years was discharged at Portsmouth. He went to the station with his wife and children, and lemaned three half-fare tickets for his three youngsters.

"How old are they?" asked the looking clerk, suspiciously.

"Elivin years, all av thim. They're thripets," was the answer.

"Fine youngsters," said the clerk. "Where are they born?"

"Patrick was born in Cairo, Bridget was born in Bombay, an' Mickey was born in Madras," was the proud reply.

Strange Disappearance of a Fruit Car.

Los Angeles Herald: Santa Fe car 4849 had left a well-known fruit packer's establishment in the San Gabriel Valley during the later days of March of the present year, loaded with select oranges consigned to a commission firm in one of the great Eastern markets. It was a bright, fresh-appearing car, with all the modern cold storage appliances, recently put in order for the fruit-shipment season, which was just at its inception.

Car 4849 was but one of a ponderous train similarly equipped, loaded and destined. The journey had an uneventful beginning and had progressed to a point in the distant Rockies without special incidents.

For days the heavy laden train, manned with a sturdy crew, wound its way on its long journey over the Sierra Madre and Sierra Nevada Mountains, up the gradual slope, east-bound, across the continental divide, through numerous villages, over sage brush plains and sandy deserts, faithful to its mission and its destination. The great train, with its precious cargo of golden fruit, drawn by double-headers, had toiled through eastern California, Arizona, and a portion of New Mexico; it had climbed the rugged steep slopes of the Rockies, plunged into and through the great tunnel at the crest of that range, and started on its flight to Trinidad, nor far to the east, when the sensational incident of the journey transpired.

Car 4849 had mysteriously and strangely disappeared. At Baton, a division station on the Santa Fe, that particular car, with others, had been noted in the conductor's report and turned over to a new crew.

Strangely this car did not appear in the train reports when Trinidad was reached. The ill-fated car had dropped from sight, as if swallowed up by the earth, and its miraculous disappearance could not be explained by the train crew. The mystified trainmen were "called upon the carpet" and subjected to a searching inquiry as to the whereabouts and magical disappearance of No. 4849. The bewildered conductor could offer no solution of the mystery that surrounded the lost car.

After many days of perplexity, confusion, and annoying investigation, a cowboy in charge of his herd reported a strange discovery, which cleared away the mystery. No. 4849 was lying at the base of a precipitous embankment in a thicket of underbrush, with its sides distended, its roof bulging and a confused mass of choice oranges appearing through the clefts of its wrecked outlines.

The car was lying on its side, dismounted from its trucks, a mass of ruins, with its contents preserved by the crisp mountain air under a cloudless sky.

The train in its rapid descent at a sharp curve had broken the flanges of a set of wheels and the ill-fated car was derailed.

Bumping over the rough roadbed and ties had detached the couplings at either end and the disabled car rolled down the steep embankment to the valley, hundreds of feet below. The train being on down grade, the rear section soon closed up the gap, and by means of automatic couplers had again become attached to the front section, all unknown to the train crew. Thus No. 4849 dropped out of account, leaving its disappearance shrouded in deep mystery.

Upon its discovery the cowboy was suitably rewarded, the train crew reinstated, a major portion of the cargo was recovered, and the shippers reimbursed.

The wreck of 4849 lies deep in the gorge into which it plunged, the monument of one of the most singular accidents in the annals of the Santa Fe road.

To Keep Furs.

At this time of year, when muffs and tippets and other fur goods of the winter are consigned to rest for the summer months, the use of a little precaution in their packing may result in untold saving. While it is true that most insects have strong antipathy to tobacco, camphor and certain other substances with a strong smell, nevertheless such precautions often prove ineffectual in some degree. Just why it is that in some instances in which fur articles are thoroughly sprinkled with snuff, tobacco leaves or camphor the moth is still found in the articles when again taken out for use, while in other cases these simple precautions prove most effective, is a question which furriers have been unable to answer. The fur dealers, however, realize that it is a fact, and do not use any substance of the kind, but depend entirely upon close coverings, and frequent whipping with rattans. In most of the fur stores and shops the large fur skins are packed away in large square pine boxes in March, and once in two or three weeks taken out and beaten with sticks, by which method the moth worms are brought out and fall to the ground. Smaller and finer articles, like muffs and tippets, are wrapped in newspapers and laid in bandboxes, often with another

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

Those who have used Laxa-Liver Pills say they have no equal for relieving and curing Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Coated Tongue, Foul Breath, Heart Burn, Water Brash or any disease or disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels.

Mrs. George Williams, Fairfield Plains, Ont., writes as follows: "As there are so many other medicines offered for sale in substitution for Laxa-Liver Pills I am particular to get the genuine, as they far surpass anything else for regulating the bowels and correcting stomach disorders."

Laxa-Liver Pills are purely vegetable; neither gripe, weaken nor sicken, are easy to take and prompt to act.

newspaper laid over the box, and shut in by the cover. Every two or three days they are taken out, whipped and replaced in a different position. They are turned with the 'other' end or 'other' side up, to prevent matting down the fur. Sometimes the corner of the bandbox is further secured by pasting the paper around it, but even then it must be often opened. Of course it is unnecessary for the private individual, with her one or two or half a dozen fur garments to undertake such extensive precautions as those of the furrier with his store full of perishable fur goods. Nevertheless the method he has adopted to prevent the destruction of his furs is undoubtedly the best, and, in a somewhat modified form, can be followed by the individual in preference to the old-time method of camphor and tobacco, which leaves the garment with such a strong smell when again taken out for use. The war against the moth should now be taken up in earnest.—Catholic News.

Almost Consumption.

Mr. J. J. Dodds, of Pleasant Ave. Deer Park, Ont., writes:—"I have suffered in my head and throat and all over my body since last summer from a very heavy cold, which I could not get rid of. I have tried several of what are considered good remedies, but none seemed to be of any avail. I began to think that my cold was developing into consumption, as very many have to my knowledge. I am thankful now to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has worked a complete cure, as I am now entirely free of the cold."

How Roberts Won the Victoria Cross.

Roberts noted that a sower of the squadron with which he rode was in great danger from a sepooy with a fixed bayonet. The contest of sword against bayonet would have ended disastrously had not Roberts intervened and disposed of the bayonet. That was barely done when he noticed in the distance two sepoy fleeing with a standard. He galloped after the rebels and overtook them, and then he had a close fight for the possession of the standard. He cut down its chief bearer. While wrenching the staff from the man's grasp with both his hands the other sepooy turned his musket on him and fired. The muzzle was within a few inches of Roberts' person, and there would certainly have been an end of him had not the musket refused to go off. As it was, he rode away unhurt with the standard, and for those two courageous and gallant acts in close succession Roberts got the Victoria cross.—Cobban's "Life of Roberts."

An elderly gentleman was hurrying to catch a train. He was rather short of stature and stout of body; but notwithstanding that, he was making great headway, and moved at a rare pace. A friend, happening to see him, yelled out in a good humored way: "Now, Mr. Green, where are you going? Are you training for a race?" "No," shouted Mr. Green, "I'm racing for a train."
