THE NEW BRUNSWICK EXHIBIT.

The New Brunswick exhibit at the Sports-men's Show at Chicago was a perfect success as an advertising venture. It taught the sportsmen of Illinois that at the present day, the very best place on this continent to look for big game is in the New Brunswick woods. Shooting and Fishing, a New York paper devoted to sport, enthused by New Brunswick's exhibit says: "Perhaps there is no hunting region in America to-day that is attracting the interest of big game hunters more strongly than that of the gentle, bounteous wilderness of New Brunswick."

The interior of the province is a land of shining streams that run through a forest fairland. . . . One of the most widely known American Amateur hunters and a man of rare literary talents is Frederick Ireland, of Washington. When emerging from his latest hunt in this province with the finest moose he had ever shot, Mr. Ireland's statement was: "I believe if you were to measure off a block of land in the region where I hunted, five miles square, it would contain not less than 250 moose." The province is not only intersected everywhere by a wonderful natural system of water communication, opening up a limitless perspective to the camper and canoeist; it has railways in every section that bring the sportsman within a few miles of the virgin wood.

The principal big game centres, or outfitting stations of the province are Edmundston, Andover, Fredericton, Boiestown, St. John, Newcastle, Bathurst and Campbellton, all of which are located on the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway or its connections. This magazine goes on through a long article of alternate description and rhapsody about this province as a hunting ground.

The American Field and Forest and Stream and Rod and Gun, other sporting periodicals devote a large amount of space to the same subject.

The guides who had the exhibit in charge made as many engagements for the coming season as they dared hope they could fulfill, and many sportsmen will now come our way who have never been here before.

The Imp.

Appearances are deceitful; sometimes they are deceitful than women. This is probably the first time this has ever been said, and like all new and original ideas it is likely at first to be unpopular, but I ask you to think it over and consider the evidence before scorning it. I used to think that a man who walked very stiff and straight and held his shoulders back was proud or was in the army. This is not always true. Did you ever notice, boys, that when you have holes in the seat of your trousers, if you stand up very straight and bend back a little you can make your coat tail cover them? This is a true bill, I've tried it. This being the case, when you see a man standing very erectly, don't be sure it is pride or a military career, it may be just holes. Give the erect man the benefit of the doubt.

There are other problems in life beside this that can't be settled on mere outward appearances. The fireman who makes the most noise at a fire is not always the chief of the department.

Death of Bishop Sweeney.

Bishop Sweeney died on Monday morning at St. Patrick's Industrial School, Silver Falls, St. John Co., in the 80th year of his age. Bishop Sweeney will be greatly missed as he was held in the highest esteem not only by the members of his own church, but by people of all denominations.

The Bristol Roller Mill.

The Bristol correspondent of THE DISPATCH writes that H. H. McCain M. P. P., and Hon L. P. Farris Commissioner of Agriculture, were at Bristol last Saturday looking over George A. Brittain's roller mill. It is expected that the matter of the bonus is now being considered by the Government and if granted it will be a popular move.

Lost Three Fingers.

A. W. Harmon, of this town, met with an accident last Friday, at Millinocket. While running a planing machine his hand got caught in the knives causing the loss of three fingers. Mr. Harmon came home Monday.

The April "New" Lippincott.

The April "New" LIPPINCOTT MAGAZINE opens with a Complete Novel, as usual. This month it is a stirring detective story by Mrs. Schuyler Croninshield, wife of Admiral Croninshield, which keeps the reader guessing up to the final pages. "Mysterious Miss Dacres" is the title, and Josephine Dacres, the heroine, well deserves the designation. Among other things which puzzle her landlady is Josephine's undeviating habit of walking on the grass beside the path,—never on the path itself,—but this is only one of many of her peculiarities, though it is a straw in the wind which points in the right direction. With a good strong plot to start with, Mrs. Croninshield makes the most of striking situations and sprinkles plenty of humor through her diverting story.

Cyrus Townsend Brady's College Tale (fourth in the series) takes up the seasonable subject of hazing at Annapolis. It is called "A Hazing Interregnum," and is as full of sport and as clever as anything which even this popular writer has published.

"The Enterprise of Flora," by Francis Dribble, a leading English author, is a very brilliant little romance which opens in a dancing academy and ends—where many romances do not,—but to mention the place would be to tell Mr. Dribble's story.

Literary Note.

The April number of "Success" contains Governor Benjamin B. Odell, Junior's first magazine article. That rising young statesman, who delivered ice from his father's wagons for a number of years in Newburg, New York, and who has now attained a rather formidable position in American politics, chooses for his debut in literature, the subject, "Politics and the Demands of Good Citizenship." This is a well sustained argument in favor of active participation in current political movements by all young men, without regard to social status or business cares. The governor argues that it is as much the duty of a young man to enter politics, in the sense of participating, as to go into business; but that he should not seek political office until after he has won success in business.

Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, Bishops Potter and Vincent, and a host of other distinguished writers, assist in making this Easter issue of "Success" a notable one.

HUNT FOR ERRORS IN MAGAZINES.

Every Article is Carefully Read Fifteen or Twenty Times Before its Publication.

Editorial vigilance is the only safeguard against errors in magazine-making. Every article that is published in The Ladies' Home Journal, for instance, is read at least four times in manuscript form, and all statements of fact verified before it goes to the printer. Then it is read and revised by the proof-readers; goes back to the author for his revision; is re-read by the editors three or more times, at different stages; and again by the proof readers possibly half a dozen times additional. Thus each article is read at least fifteen and often twenty times after leaving the author's hands until it reaches the public eye. But with all this unremitting vigilance errors of the most obvious kind occasionally escape observation until perhaps the final reading, but it is rare, indeed, that an inaccuracy hides itself in the page securely enough to go through a magazine's edition.

Japan and Russia.

Yokohama, March 25.—Replying to a question in the House of Peers today, the minister of foreign affairs said Japan had not communicated with Russia in regard to the Manchurian agreement.

The matter of the dismissal from office of Mr. McLeavy Brown, director general of Korean customs, announced yesterday from Seoul, reported to have been settled.

As this action of the Emperor, undertaken at the behest of Russia, goes far to wipe out the integrity of Korea, according to the estimate of the officials here, it will not be allowed to pass without a remonstrance on our part. The officials are convinced that Russian domination of Korea would mean the extinguishment of American interests in that quarter and these in recent years have become important.
