King's New House. "Whitaker's Almanac," the famous English year book, which is almost as well known here as in its native country, has caused some sensation by recording King Edward VII not as a ruler of the house of Hanover, but as the first British sovereign of the house of Saxe Coburg, thus making the late Queen Victoria the last ruler of a line which has given to the British empire six sovereigns.

The feeling in England is that "Whitaker" is almost disloyal, and that the change is wrong; yet a little study of British history shows that the almanac is entirely correct. The first change in the reigning house after the conquest came at the accession of Henry II, who claimed through his mother, the Empress Matilda, and was the first of the Plantagenets. After the Wars of the Roses, Henry, Earl of Richmond, who claimed the crown by right of his mother, Margaret Beaufort, great-granddaughter of John of Gaunt, became the first of the Tudors, his father being originally a Welsh gentleman named Tudor.

The Stuarts came in through a woman, the daughter of Henry VII, and did not carry on the Tudor line in name; nor did George of Hanover, when he gained the British throne by right of his grandmother Elizabeth, daughter of the first English Stuart, continue to represent the house of his grandfathers; he was the first Hanoverian to reign in England. Each incoming house, though claiming through a daughter of its predecessor, gave its own name to its sovereigns; it is strictly correct historically, therefore, that the line should change with the death of Queen Victoria, and that the succession of foreign Kings of Great Britain should be continued by a ruler of the house of Saxe Coburg, the name of the German house to which the father of the new King belonged.

A Marvellous Medicine Having a direct and combined action on both the liver and kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will positively cure many complicated ailments which cannot be reached by any other medicine, and hence its extraordinary success and popularity. A Joke that Cost Five Dollars. Mr. Lee Fairchild, who is coming to the front as a humorist, visited San Francisco not long ago and, like many literary pilgrims to the West, determined to pay a visit to Mr. Joaquin Miller, Poet of the Sierras, who lives in a charming villa in the Contra Costa Foot Hills across the Bay from the Golden Gate.

"What will you charge me to drive to Joaquin Miller's?" Fairchild asked of an Oakland cabman.

"Five dollars," was the response. The humorist got in and started away over the long, rugged road leading to the poet's side-hill hermitage. It was evening when he started; the night had settled and the moon was up when he arrived. He paid the driver and was about to open the rustic gate to the famous house when the cabman said dryly:

"I suppose you know that Joaquin is not in California at the present time."

The humorist thought quickly, and, smothering his indignation, replied: "Oh, yes, of course; I merely wanted to see how his place looked by moonlight."

The Cause of Nervous Headache. This most distressing and common malady doubtless has its origin in some unbalanced condition of the nervous system. Probably the simplest, safest and most efficient remedy is Polson's Nerviline. Twenty drops in sweetened water gives immediate relief, and this treatment should be supplemented by bathing the region of pain with Nerviline. To say it acts quickly fails to express the result. Sold everywhere in large 25c. bottles.

Declined the Privilege. Jepson: "I notice that you always speak well of me to my face, Jobson, and while I have no reason to believe that you do otherwise behind my back, I think it does not harm a man to be criticised by his friends—to be told his little faults. I know I'm not perfect, and I would be glad to have you remind me of the fact sometimes."

Jobson: "Tell you of your faults?" Jepson: "Yes; criticise me, tell me what your honest private opinion of me is. That's what I want."

Jobson: "Jepson, you are six foot two and I am five feet four, and you want me to give my honest private opinion of you? No, sir!"

BE SURE YOU GET THE KIND YOU HAVE ALWAYS HAD.—Owing to the great popularity of "The D. & L." Menthol Plaster, unscrupulous makers are putting up one like it. For rheumatism, neuralgia, etc., nothing is better. Made only by Davis & Lawrence Co., Ltd.

Generals Who Have Never Been Defeated. It is curious and interesting in reading the lives of great military commanders to observe among the large number of generals who have held independent commands how few have had careers of uninterrupted success. A man who can go through a long campaign and fight many battles and never suffer a reverse must, indeed, be a commander of the first order. Yet this has been done by some generals.

The Duke of Alva, one of the most eminent soldiers of the sixteenth century, never, throughout his long and eventful career, lost a battle. The Archbishop of Cologne, who

A Sufferer For Years From Weak Heart, Exhausted Nerves and Sleeplessness Cured by Five Boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Whether weakened and wasted by overwork, worry or disease, the result of exhausted nerves is felt in neuralgic pains, nervous headache and dyspepsia, serious functional derangements and ultimately in paralysis, epilepsy, locomotor ataxia, prostration or insanity, the remedy is found in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, as is proven in the case referred to below:— Mrs. Ches. H. Jones, Pierceton, Que., writes:—"For years I have been a great sufferer with my heart and nerves. I would take shaking spells and a dizzy swimming feeling would come over me. About a year ago I would never close my eyes, and my head would ache as though it would burst. At last I had to keep to my bed, and though my doctor attended me from 1891 to 1893, his medicine did not help me. "I have now taken five boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and it has done me more good than I ever believed a medicine could do. Words fail to express my gratitude for the wonderful cure brought about by this treatment." was struck by his efforts to avoid a conflict, having on one occasion urged him to engage the Dutch, "The object of a general," replied Alva, "is not to fight, but to conquer; he fights enough who obtains the victory."

Oliver Cromwell throughout his military career never lost a battle, though he very nearly sustained a reverse at Dunbar. The Duke of Marlborough affords an excellent example of a successful soldier: he combined all the qualities necessary for a great commander, and although he fought several battles against the most experienced generals in Europe he was never once defeated.

The famous Russian general, Suwaroff, was another commander destined never to suffer defeat. He gained several victories against the Turks and against the Poles, and in Italy he was opposed by Moreau and, being completely out-numbered, he effected a brilliant retreat over the mountains of Switzerland, through Germany, into Russia. He was held in great respect by his soldiers, and although he showed himself to be an exceedingly able tactician, he used to say that the whole of his system was comprised in the words, "Advance and strike."

The Duke of Wellington, throughout his brilliant campaigns, both in India and in the Peninsula, has preserved to himself a remarkable record of uninterrupted success from the first battle in which he was vested with supreme command throughout the Peninsular War, in which he defeated the ablest of Napoleon's marshals, until the eventful day of Waterloo, when he defeated the greatest soldier of modern times, and won for himself everlasting fame.

It is generally poor economy to give up the use of the land for a full year in growing a crop to plough under, yet sometimes this seems advisable. There are few crops that can be sown late in the summer which will live over winter and make a heavy growth for ploughing under before time for planting the regular crops the next spring. Our common red clover is probably the best adapted for this purpose. If it is sown among corn or tobacco, or after rye or oats are harvested, it will generally make a growth of from four to five inches before winter.

At the New Jersey experiment station heavy crops of corn have been grown each year for the past four or five years, by sowing crimson clover in the corn at the time of the last cultivation, and then ploughing it under the following spring and again planting the field with corn. Hairy or winter vetch is a crop which seems to be fairly well adapted to the cold climates and yet this crop frequently winter-kills, unless it is sown as early as July and is able to make a vigorous growth before winter. This is a valuable crop to grow on soils producing bearing fruit trees. A protecting crop like oats sown with the vetch in August would probably help to prevent the plants from being "thrown out" during the winter season.

One objection sometimes offered to cow-peas is the difficulty in ploughing the vines under completely in the fall. We are trying the experiment of growing rye among the pea vines. The rye was sown before frost came and will be allowed to grow through the winter, while the pea vines have died down where they grow. The thick shedding of peas holds the moisture at the surface, so that the rye germinates without being covered with soil. When frost comes the leaves of the pea vines drop off, and as they decompose they serve as plant food for the rye. In this way it seems probable that most of the plant food made available by the decay of the pea vines will be taken up by the rye, while considerable of it would be lost were the pea vines allowed to die and decay on the soil with no other crop to replace them. The rye will also tend to hold the leaves of the peas, many of which would otherwise be scattered by the wind. The rye and the dead pea vines will plough under together, with little difficulty, next spring. In this way the soil will be held and prevented from washing, there will be little, if any loss of plant food, and the additional expense will only be the rye seed and the time used in sowing it. These crops should be ploughed under quite early in the spring, so that there will be plenty of moisture to cause them to decay.—[Prof. C. S. Phelps in American Agriculturist.

Nervous and Sleepless

Two horrors crowded into one life, the product of poor digestion, and the poisons that are thereby formed within the body. There's just one method of cure for this terrible condition—plenty of food, but mind, food properly digested. That's the difficulty—the digestive power of the stomach must be improved. Rich, red blood formed, strength given to the organs to drive out poisons; then comes strength, vigor and endurance. Ferrozone does all this and more: it makes sick people well; weak people strong. Sow Ferrozone and you reap health.—Sold by Garden Bros.

Tramp drinks it, smacks his lips, stamps twice on the floor, and walks towards the door. The milk-dealer shouts to him to come back. Tramp returns.

"What do you want?" "My stamps, of course." "Didn't I give them to you?" "No; of course not."

"Well, here they are again." (Stamps twice more.) "Ah, I see; ah! Well, that's a pretty good joke, but I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll give you a penny to try that on that fellow across the street there."

"Oh! Why, he just gave me twopence to try it on you."

Bent Nearly Double With Bright's Disease.

A Severe and Torturing Case of Bright's Disease—A Justice of the Peace Certifies to the Cure by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. James Dellhunt, a much respected resident of Concession, Ont., states:—"I was a sufferer from Bright's Disease for several years, and at times the tortures of mind and body were almost beyond endurance. The pains were in my head, between the shoulders and down the whole spine, concentrating across the kidneys, where I was never entirely free from pain. When I got up in the morning I went about bent over nearly double. It gave me great pain to urinate, and at times the water was very scanty. Medicines seemed to have little or no effect in my case, until I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The first dose relieved me, and five boxes entirely cured me. I have no pains in my kidneys, and can do as good a day's work as I ever could."

Mr. J. J. Ward, J.P., of Concession, certifies that he knows Mr. Dellhunt's statement of his cure to be correct and true and without exaggeration. It seems foolish to trifle with new-fangled medicines when you can get the tested and proven kind.
