A New Use For Skim-Milk.

At odd times and at different seasons the farmer has sour milk on his hands, which usually finds its way into the hog feed. It is of course all right for that purpose, but that same curd, if dry, has a cash market value. There is a constant demand for this material. Many large creameries produce it, and are bound by contract to deliver all their product to a single company that makes it into marketable products.

To the farmer, the process of drying the curd is nothing but what he can accomplish, and when once dry it can be stored any length of time until disposed of. For the successful production of dry curd, no plant is necessary, no apparatus except what an intelligent man can make for himself, to care for the waste of the sour skim-milk of three or four cows.

The better skimmed, or the more the fats have been abstracted, the better the finished product will be. Naturally soured milk, by the fermentation of lactic acid, makes the better curd, but takes the longer time. Milk curdled by rennet comes second. It can also be curdled by tannins, seed of wild cherry, dogwood, or sumac. Acetic acid and vinegar gives quick results and leaves the curd in good order after washing. Mineral acids operate the quickest, make the poorest quality, and are usually used by the creameries, and give a variable product.

After the curd is formed, the whey is drained. This whey contains the sugar of milk and should be added to the hog feed. Put the curd, which is now insoluble in water, into a boiler with cold water, and gradually heat till it is unpleasant to keep the hand in the liquid, when remove it. A second such washing adds to its improvement. Then drain, spread on canvas or any kind of screen to dry in the sun in summer time, giving it attention by shaking it up from time to time. Once dry, it can be stored any length of time without deterioration.

While there is no market at present for the sale of dry curd, plans are being formed looking to the organization of a company which will buy the product direct from farmers and small creameries. The curd is largely used in the manufacture of paper and in cold water paints.—[American Agriculturist.]

RHODES AND KIPLING.

How the Empire Builder "Got Even" With the Poet—A Rich Yarn as Told in the London Clubs.

Cecil Rhodes, the South African magnate, had a bone to pick with Rudyard Kipling, the poet, and succeeded in doing it to his complete satisfaction. This is how the story is told in the London clubs:

Kipling and Rhodes were fellow-passengers on a Cape railway train bound toward Kimberley. Up to the moment of departure from Cape Town Rhodes had been busy sending despatches and it fell to the lot of the poet to book their seats and berths. The author is a man of boyish build; the Empire builder is a ponderous man and has a decided aversion to sleeping in a top berth. Knowing this, the poet determined to have fun at the expense of the man of destiny. When that night the ex-premier found that he had been assigned to an upper berth his rage was great. He pleaded with the agile Kipling to exchange with him, but the poet with a sardonic smile, assured Rhodes that he could not think of exalting himself above so mighty an Imperialist, and so the bulky statesman had to climb laboriously to bed.

After midnight the train stopped at a small station on the desolate karroo and the wife of a colonial officer got aboard. When she discovered that, notwithstanding her telegram, no reservation had been made for her she lifted up her voice in loud protest. The commotion awakened Rhodes, who thrust his head out between the curtains and demanded to know the cause of the disturbance.

"I am the wife of Colonel—," she exclaimed, "and although I wired for a berth none has been saved for me."

"That's all right," thundered the Colossus, "my little boy is occupying the berth just below mine; turn in there with him."

The lady was appeased and proceeded to take advantage of the offer. Presently there was an insurrection in the lower berth.

"Now don't cry and make a fuss," the lady was heard to say, "your father told me I might sleep here."

"Madam," grasped the author of The Jungle Book, "do you know who I am?"

"You are the little son of the gentleman in the upper berth, are you not?" faltered the now startled woman, peering into the dark compartment.

"Nothing of the sort," roared the poet. "I am Rudyard—"

Before he could confess further the frightened woman fled to another car. The upper berth shook with convulsive appreciation as the poet, with a mingling vocabulary of several tongues berated the South African statesman.

"Ring of on the cuss words and swear," exclaimed Rhodes from his altitude of mirth, "and give us something about a rag and a bone and a hank of hair."

But with picturesque wrath Kipling stuck to his impromptu program.

An Unofficial Order.

Thomas, tenth Earl of Dundonald, at his death vice-admiral in the English navy, and an ancestor of the new commander of the Canadian militia, tells in his "Autobiography of a Seaman" of an incident on board the "Hind," on which he served as midshipman. The pet of the ship was a parrot, the aversion of the boatswain, whose whistle the bird learned to imitate exactly.

One day a party of ladies paid us a visit aboard. By the usual means of a "whip" on the yard-arm several had been hoisted on deck. The chain had descended for another. Scarcely had its fair freight been lifted out of the boat alongside when the parrot piped, "Let go!"

The order was instantly obeyed, and the unfortunate lady, instead of being comfortably seated on deck, was soused in the sea.

Luckily for her, the men were on the watch and quickly pulled her out, and luckily for the parrot the boatswain was on shore, or this unseasonable assumption of the boatswain's functions might have ended tragically for the bird.

Lasts a

That is just what they say of Vapo-Cresolene. The vaporizer is practically indestructible, and the Cresolene is certainly not expensive. This way of treating affections of the throat is most economical, and is also most effective. Our little picture illustrates how it's used. You put some Cresolene in the vaporizer, light lamp beneath, and then breathe in the soothing, healing vapor. For whooping-cough and croup it's a perfect specific.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. A Vapo-Cresolene outfit, including the Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a lifetime, and a bottle of Cresolene, complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. season, says American Agriculturist. It gives the circulation of air through the soil that keeps it light and friable, so that the roots penetrate the soil to find the moisture they need. The soil does not pack after a rain, partly owing to the coming up of air from the tiles through the very channels that the water followed when it passed down to them. Some noticed that the rows, particularly of corn, which were almost directly over the line of the drain kept green longer and produced a better crop than those which were between the drains, and the poorest rows or parts of the field were those farthest from the drain. Some say the yield doubled in the close vicinity of the drains, in which case we should think the drains were too far apart for a very dry or a very wet season. But this is not all the value of drainage. Land that is properly drained can be worked much earlier in the spring and is much less affected by the frosts in spring or fall because it is drier. Wheat and clover are not so often lifted and the roots broken during the freezing and thawing of the winter and are thus liable to winter kill.

Permanent Cure for Neuralgia.

Experienced sufferers state that no remedy relieves neuralgia so quickly as a hot application of Polson's Nerviline, the strongest liniment made. Nerviline is certainly very penetrating and has a powerful influence over neuralgic pains, which it destroys almost at once. Nerviline is highly recommended for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, and Toothache. Better try a 25c. bottle, it's all right.
