What Famous Doctors Earn.

The leading surgeons of London as a whole have, during the past year, increased their fees considerably. One of the best-known West-end practitioners, who formerly asked 150 guineas; for an operation, now wants 200 guineas. The most popular surgeons for appendicitis-an operation that takes perhaps four or five minutes-were formerly satisfied with 100 guineas; now they ask, in more than one case, 150 guineas.

The few men at the top are so overwhelmed with work that raising their fees is their only defence. They openly say that there are many men who can do the work as well as they. But they have the name, and the public flock to them.

The surgeon who is generally reputed to be the first among his fellows in England -etiquette prevents the mention of his namehas a steady minimum income of £20,000 a year from his operative work, an income going up in some years to £30,000. His ordinary fee is comparatively moderate, 100 guineas for an abdominal operation; but he can get through many operations in a morn.

This surgeon lies in strict training. He gets up about five o'clock, and works steadily before breakfast with a secretary, at his books. He goes early to bed, and refuses almost every social invation. His one recreation is a trip to Switzerland. Yet for many years, while overwhelmed with demands from the rich, he gave a large part of his time to work among the poor of the slums, going down to an East-end hospital almost every day.

An income of £20,000 a year is by no means uncommon for a great surgeon. Sir five guineas and in his second £26, made in Garden Bros. one single year, when he had got to the height of his fame, £21,000, and a general average for several years of £15,000. He once received a fee of 1,000 guineas.

This fee, however, was left far behind by a record sum of £20,000 paid to Dr. Dimsdale, a Hertfordshire physician, for inoculating the Empress Catherine of Russia and her son. Besides this fee, a life pension of £500 a year was granted to the lucky man. Sir Morell Mackenzie received £12,000 for his attendance on the Emperor Frederick. Mackenzie was famous alike for his high fees and for his generosity in treating people for nothing. Those who could pay had to pay, and pay well, but artists and literary people, and any whose purses were small, he charged

There is no more striking contrast than between the early and later earnings of a great doctor. Sir James Paget, whose life, recently published, attracted so much attention, was an instance of this. During the first few years he scarce earned enough to buy bread. For seven years his largest income was £23 13s. Until he had been a surgeon sixteen years it never exceeded £100. After 1851 his income rose steadily till it reached £10,000 a year. Then he gave up operating, and it fell at once to £7,000, and then slowly

Sir James Simpson earned nothing at first. Yet when he was thirty the hotels were filled with his patients, and his practice was worth thousands a year to them.

Sir Erasmus Wilson, the famous skin specialist, was so well off that he could spend £10,000 on a hobby like bringing over Cleopatra's Needle to this country, and £30,000 on a charity like the new wing and chapel for the Sea Bathing Infirmary at Margate. Sir Erasmus Wilson died in 1884, leaving £180,-

Sir Andrew Clark is said to have seen 10,-000 patients annually, and in his time had practically every famous man under him. He always took what was offered as a fee, sometimes £500, sometimes two guineas. He is said to have once received £5.000 for going to a patient at Cannes from London.

He was Mr. Gladstone's physician. Great docters have a recognised fee of a guinea a mile for travelling to see patients outside their usual radius. One of the present King's late physicians, when the King was Prince of Wales, received for four weeks' attendance at Sandringham, when the Prince had typhoid fever, a baronetcy and £10,000. American millionaires are fond of having their own physicians and they pay them all manner of fancy prices, from £12,000 to £20,000 a year. One physician received £17,600 for attending the daughter of a millionaire for two months, and another £12,000 for a yaching cruise of less than six

A Life Insurance Problem.

A unique life insurance problem was presented to the manager of a British company recently. He received a letter from the holder of a policy for $20,000, saying that his physician advised him that an immediate operation for appendicitis was necessary, involving, with hospital expenses, an outlay of $800, which the writer had no present means of paying. The letter continued: "I am sensible that I owe it to you, who have so large a pecuniary interest in my life, to give you the option to pay the cost of this operation to save my life, that I may continue to pay you the yearly premiums on my policy (I believe that I am otherwise strong and healthy), or in the alternative to pay the £4,000 to my beneficiary within a few weeks."

At last accounts the manager was debating whether it would be a good investment to advance the money to the policy-holder, and perhaps postpone the payment of a larger sum to the beneficiaries.

The Creation of Eve.

Little Agnes had been a regular attendant at the Sunday school last winter. The other day the school opened again after the vacation, and the teacher decided to have a general review of all the ground covered by the primary department. She started, very properly at the beginning.

Children, said she, after Adam was created, how was Eve brought into the world? A half dozen hands went into the air

Willie Smith may answer, said the teacher. Made outen a bone from Adam.

Now children, that is correct. And from what bone was woman created?

There was an awful silence in the classroom. Finally little Agnes' hand went up like a shot.

You may answer, Agnes. Her decision came quickly. "The jawbone," said she.

Reputation Pays in Cheese-Making.

One significant remark was made at a recent meeting of a Farmers' Institute when one of the makers present said buyers have confidence in a factory that has a good report from the local instructor, and will pay better prices for the product of that factory than they will for another of which so good a report is not made.

This is perfectly true. A clean, well-equippea, up-to-date factory, with a good report from the local instructor, can sell its produce at a better price, and with less difficulty, than can an inferior factory, of which a good report is not made.

This view appears to have been generally endorsed by the board, too, because the Watchman-Warder says it was decided at the meeting spoken of to have an instructor appointed for the purpose of visiting the different factories within the board's jurisdiction.

Wrong Kind of Turk.

At a meeting of a society, the members of which are exceedingly loyal to their native country and to each other, one of the after dinner speakers told a story of something which happened in one of Great Britain's Eastern possessions.

An English soldier saw a big, raw-boned Turk on his hands and knees, drinking from brook. The soldier, in pure wantonness, gave him a kick. The Turk jumped to his feet, and without a word struck the English soldier square on the face, felling him to the Three other English soldiers made for the silent Turk and prepared to take a hand; but two Irishmen came up, and seeing that the fight was uneven, insisted on fair play. The Turk whipped two of the Englishmen, and as he gave the third one a finishing touch, exclaimed:-

"Now, ye villains, whin ye tackle a Turk again, be sure he doesn't come from Tipper-
