

Cures Coughs, Colds, Lung and Bronchial affections that other remedies won't touch.

Mr. T. J. Smith, Caledonia, Ont., writes: "A year ago I had a very severe cold which settled in my lungs and in my throat, so that I could scarcely speak louder than a whisper. I tried several medicines, but got no relief until I used one and a half bottles of Norway Pine Syrup, which completely cured me."

How Torture Was Abolished in France.

Up to near the close of the eighteenth century the laws of France were barbarously severe. When the celebrated jurist Le Page was appointed president of one of the highest courts he endeavored to have the rigor of these laws mitigated, and especially he sought to have abolished the statute permitting torture to be applied to suspected or accused persons.

His colleagues, however, were for retaining the torture and employing it as often as occasion required. This stirred up bad feeling between M. le President and his associates, who did not hesitate to accuse him of seeking popularity at the expense of duty. The result of this quarrel was that the laws were enforced even more rigorously than before, and as it was M. le President's duty to pronounce the harsh decrees formed by his colleagues, he found himself in a position racking both to his pride and his sympathies. But he was resolved that torture should be abolished, and at length he hit upon a plan to save France from a continuance of this disgrace.

M. le Page had a foster-sister, Francoise, a beautiful young girl, who about this time had come to Paris and been installed in his house. One day after she had been there a few weeks M. le Page missed a gold snuff-box ornamented with diamonds, an article he set much store upon as a family heirloom. A great stir was made over the loss, and at length the public prosecutor was called in to make a thorough search. He did not have to go far; the missing snuff-box was found concealed in the bottom of the foster-sister's trunk. Her guilt was plain. She was arrested and haled before the judges for trial. M. le Page's colleagues, relying as they said on his absolute impartiality, caused him to preside, as though the case were any other.

Francoise, being examined, denied everything. With pale, tearful face she told them of her innocence, declaring that she had not even the thought of such a crime, and calling upon her foster-brother to save her from the disgraceful imputation. But M. le Page remained apparently unmoved by her pleading, and coldly commanded that the torture be used to extract the truth from her. This was immediately done. The girl's arm was bared and the terrible instrument applied to her hand. As the screws were tightened, crushing her poor fingers, she shrieked with agony. Still M. le Page let the fearful ordeal go on, though great drops of sweat upon his face showed how he was suffering.

At length the unfortunate girl could stand no more. She cried out that she was guilty and then sank upon the floor unconscious.

That evening there was a ball given at court. M. le Page appeared there and sought an interview with His Majesty Louis XVI.

"Sire," said he, kneeling before the king. "Sire, this day my foster-sister has been accused of theft, and being put to the torture has confessed the crime."

"Very well, she must suffer for it."

"But, sire, this theft was an invention of my own."

The king recoiled with horror.

"How! What means this?" he exclaimed.

"Sire, I wish to prove to France that the torture is a source of the most frightful injustice—the destroyer of truth and innocence. To this cause I have sacrificed the being whom I love best on earth. 'Oh, let her trials, sire, be not in vain!'"

The king placed his hand on his forehead; his great officers stood by. Turning to them, he said:

"From this hour let torture no more disgrace the laws of France."

In the Jaws of the Fire.

The risk that firemen take are an everlasting wonder, even though almost every paper contains stories of their bravery. But the man behind the fire-engine—apparently he has only to keep his machine going, and is as safe as the man who pulls the lever of an upright "donkey." The story of Bill Brown, as told by Mr. Cleveland Moffett in "Careers of Daring and Danger," shows that the engineer's bravery is sometimes put to tests as severe as those which the hoseman or the ladderman even has to endure.

What happened was this: Engine 29, pumping her prettiest, stood at the corner, so near the drug-house that the driver thought it wasn't safe for the horses, and led them away. That left Brown alone, against the cheek of the fire, watching his boiler and keeping his steam-gage at seventy-five.

As the fire gained, chunks of red-hot sandstone began to smash down on the engine. Brown ran his pressure up to eighty, and watched the door anxiously where the four firemen from his squad had gone into the furnace.

Then an explosion of chemicals in the building sent a flame wide as a house curling across the street, enveloping engine and man, and setting fire to the elevated railway station overhead. Bill Brown stood by his engine with a sheet of fire above him. He heard footsteps on the pavement and voices that grew fainter, crying, "Run for your lives!" He was alone, and the skin on his hands, face and neck was blistered.

Brown knew why everyone was running. There would be another explosion. It was tolerably certain that he must die if he stayed. But his four chums were in the fire and needed the water. If he quit his engine the water would fail.

He stoked in coal and ran the gage up another notch, easing the running parts with the oiler. He was offering his life for his friends.

In a few minutes the four firemen came out of the building. Then Bill Brown ran for his life with his comrades. A second or two later Engine 29 was crushed by the falling walls.

Neuralgia Almost Drives People Mad.

Only those who have suffered it, know of the darting, distracting pains and aches neuralgia inflicts. Ordinary remedies don't even relieve. It requires an extraordinarily strong, penetrating liniment to drive out the pain. To get relief rub Polson's Nervine into the spot. Pain can't resist Nervine which has five times the strength of any other liniment. Drives out neuralgia in half an hour. Never fails! Never harmful! Always successful. Try a large 25 cent bottle.

Not New.

Don't think our Vapo-Cresolene is something new, for it isn't. For more than twenty years it has been extensively used for all forms of bronchial and throat trouble. Mrs. Ballington Booth said of it, years ago, that "No family where there are young children should be without Vapo-Cresolene." You breathe-in the vapor, it goes all through the bronchial tubes, soothing, healing, curing. It's pleasant, safe, economical.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. The Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a lifetime, and a bottle of Cresolene complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cent. Illustrated booklet containing physicians' testimonials free upon request. Vapo-Cresolene Co., 120 Fulton St., New York, U.S.A.

"Joshing" the Pork Packers.

English jokers have been having fun with a number of Chicago men and women by distributing invitations to King Edward's coronation. They are beautifully engraved, bear the royal arms and postmark of London, and read in part: "The royal family of Great Britain and Ireland and of Imperial India greeteth thee, and commandeth thy presence at the Abbey of Westminster, in the ancient city of London, on the occasion of the solemn ceremony, the coronation of the son and heir of the house and prince of the blood royal, Albert Edward George Plantagenet William St. Leger Henry Guelph James Bittinger Gower Wettin Fitz Maurice, Knight of the Garter and possessor of numerous and various most noble, most exalted titles. Haec Pro Amicitia Nostra." The document was believed to be genuine until in small type in a lower corner there was discovered an intimation that "Americans" could appear in the adorning costume of the North American Indians. It is reported that several society leaders have received the cards.

A RELIABLE OFFER

Honest Help Free to Men.

We are authorized to state by Mr. Carl Kunz, Second and Brady Streets, Davenport, Iowa, that any man who is nervous and debilitated or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from overwork, excesses or abuse, such as nervous debility, exhausted vitality, lost vigor, unnatural drains and losses, lack of development, etc., can write to him in strict confidence and receive, FREE OF CHARGE, full instructions how to be thoroughly cured.

Mr. Kunz himself was, for a long time, a sufferer from above troubles, and after trying in vain many advertised remedies, became almost entirely discouraged and hopeless. Finally he confided in an old clergyman, whose kind and honest advice enabled him to speedily obtain a perfect and permanent cure. Knowing to his own sorrow that so many poor sufferers are being imposed upon by unscrupulous quacks, Mr. Kunz considers it his duty, as an honest man, to give his fellow men the benefit of his experience and assist to cure. Having nothing to sell, he asks for no money, the proud satisfaction of having done a great service to one in need, he rightly considers an ample reward for his trouble. If you write to Mr. Kunz, and follow his advice, you can rely upon being cured and upon absolute secrecy as well.

Address as above, enclosing a stamp. No attention will be given to those writing out of idle curiosity, therefore state that you really need a cure.

Ice Will Stay Up.—Housekeeper—"Ice will be very cheap next summer, won't it?" Ice Man—"Well, I don't know, mum. You see, we've got a good deal of dear ice left over from the year before, and we'll have to sell that first, because it might spoil, you know, and I'm afraid by the time the old stock is gone the cheap ice will all be melted."—[New York Weekly.

The medicine dealers in this place say that there is no preparation on the market today that has anything like such an enormous sale as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Would this extraordinary demand for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills continue and gradually increase if people were not being benefited and cured by their use? Certainly not. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box.

A Toronto man, father of an unusually numerous family, was visited by a Westerner. I never saw anything like it, old man," remarked the stranger over the cigars, "every time I come you have a new baby." "Oh, don't mind it, my dear fellow; it isn't your fault," was the quick reply.

This is the Page Standard II Bar Fence, made of "Page" wire which is twice as strong as common wire. The continuous coil, note wavy appearance, allows for expansion and contraction which is important owing to Canadian climate. Our upright wires are in one piece and have strength of about 800 pounds. If made of pieces spliced at each horizontal, they would have a strength of only about 300 pounds. We also make gates, ornamental fences, poultry netting, nails and staples.
