SECRET POLICE AT BIG HOTELS.

Walters as Detectives.

It will probably come as a surprise and, perhaps, as a little shock to many readers to learn that when they stay at one of our large London hotels—those enormous caravanseries each of which is almost a small town in itself—they are surrounded by a police network as perfect and cunningly devised as will be found anywhere. And yet it is the simple truth; and it is well for the security of guests and their belongings that it is so.

Each of our mammoth hotels has its staff of secret police, at the head of which is one of the cleverest detectives whose services money can procure. He is invariably a man who has a very wide experience of rogues and their methods, and not only rogues of the home-made description, but the cosmopolitan swindler and thief who makes the whole world his playground. To-day he may be seeking spoil in London; next month he will be in Paris, Berlin, or New York—anywhere where victims can be found.

But wherever he goes he may be sure that one man is prepared for him and knows all about him, and that is the hotel detective, who is quite a match for all his artifices and disguises. And an excellent berth this prince of detectives has; for he is often paid as much as £1,000 or even £1,500 a year, with the best of quarters and board, and he is usually a man of good appearance and culture, precisely the man you would take for a flourishing guest rather than for a salaried spy on the nomadic swindler.

Not a single guest ever enters the hotel without coming under his eye; and if there is anything shady about him you may trust the detective to see it, when, of course, he becomes an object of special, but quite unobtrusive, attention. If the guest should be a professional hotel "crook" (as they are called)—a man who, under the very plausible guise of a genial, gentlemanly, well-to-do visitor, makes large hotels the happy hunting-ground for every kind of roguery—then his shift is short.

There is no fuss, no exposure. Our detective simply seizes a convenient moment to speak a few words to him, and in an incredibly short time there is one guest the less in that hotel. Of course, the "crook" knows resistance would be worse than useless. He and his record are too well known to court investigation, and it is his policy to pack up and seek fresh quarters as quickly as he can.

The mere knowledge that such a detective is at any particular hotel is quite sufficient to scare away these undesirable guests; and it is only, as a rule, the less wide-awake of them who need a reminder that more comfortable accommodation will be found elsewhere.

Of course, the hotel detective does not work alone, nor is his duty confined to keeping the professional swindler and thief away. He has a numerous staff of subordinates, all recruited from the employees of the hotel, all pledged to secrecy and all unknown to each other. The very waiter who hands you your soup may be a detective under his orders; the porter who sees to your luggage or the chambermaid who makes your bed.

In fact, neither you nor they know who may or may not be an authorized spy; and, as you can see, in this state of uncertainty and with the knowledge that eyes are everywhere, there is very little temptation for anyone to annex what is not his. This is, to a certain extent, why the honesty of hotel employees is usually above suspicion—unless a man or woman has exceptional facilities or temptation, he or she simply dare not act dishonestly; for so perfect is the system of espionage that the very walls almost have eyes.

Of course, at times mistakes are made, but very rarely, I assure you. One of these detectives once told me how near he was to making a terrible blunder—and a laughable one, too. A guest who came to stay at his hotel bore a most suspicious resemblance to a well known "Cook" who was wanted in half-a-dozen countries. My friend, you may be sure, had a very careful eye on him, and on getting into confidential conversation with him and finding that he knew quite as much as himself about the ways of hotel thieves and swindlers, his suspicions amounted to certainty.

Luckily, while he was debating what steps he ought to take, the man, who was quick enough to recognise my friend's true character, revealed himself as M.—, one of the very smartest of Paris detectives, who was on a professional mission to England.

"It was a narrow escape," my friend laughingly says, "of an awkward professional blunder—and not by any means the only one I have had."

DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS CURE CONSTIPATION.

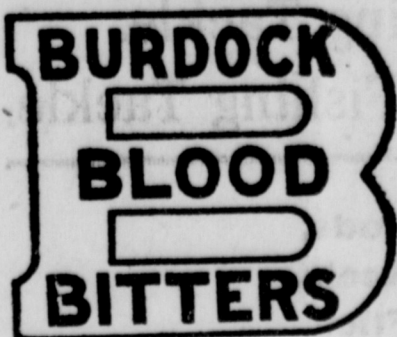

The British Ambassador at Washington.

Lord Pauncefoot has been succeeded by the Hon. Michael Henry Herbert as Ambassador of Great Britain to the United States. The new appointment has been received with the warmest expression of approval both in Washington and London. Mr. Herbert is forty-five years of age, is the son of the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, and is the brother of the Earl of Pembroke. He entered the diplomatic service in 1877, was stationed in Paris two years later as an attaché, in 1883 was made Second Secretary of the British embassy, and transferred to Washington in 1888, where he was in charge of the embassy for four months, and was promoted to Secretary of the Legation in 1892. In the succeeding year he was transferred to a similar position at The Hague; there he remained two years, when he was again transferred to Constantinople, and was in charge of the British mission during the critical time of the Armenian massacres, discharging his duties with such skill and judgment as greatly to advance his reputation and to secure honors at home. In 1897 he was made Secretary to the embassy at Rome, and a year later was transferred to Paris. He is regarded as one of the most thoroughly trained men in the British diplomatic service. He is already widely acquainted in this country, having not only lived here but having married an American, and it is expected that he will fully sustain the relations of cordiality and frankness which have for a number of years past obtained between the two governments. The position of British Ambassador in Washington, like that of American Ambassador in London, is social quite as much as it is diplomatic, the Ministers of the two countries being interpreters of the feeling, the spirit, and the attitude of these nations toward each other.—The New York Outlook.

Thomas A. Edison thinks that in six or seven years horses will have disappeared from the streets as beasts of burden, and automobiles will be made so cheap as to be within the reach of all who wish or need vehicles. He declares this revolution will be brought about by a storage electric battery which he has invented. "The man that cannot quite afford to keep a horse and carriage is the man that I am trying to provide for," he said the other day; "the automobile will be the thing for him. Its first cost will not be great, it will not require care, and the cost of maintenance will come far below the cost of keeping a horse."

Mrs. Everby: "But what's all this talk about woman's rights?"

The Professor: "It's an effort to place woman and man on an equality."

Mrs. Everby: "But what's woman done that she should be brought down after that fashion? No, sir; I don't want anything to do with your woman's rights."

Sister: "Oh, Bob that Dr. Scrimp is a mean fellow."

Brother: "What's up with him?"

Sister: "You know he attended me when I was ill. Well, he began to call regularly after that for another reason—till at last he proposed and I rejected him. And now he has charged all those love-sick calls as professional visits!"

ALFONDLY 0149.

Alfondly is a very handsome bay stallion, standing 16 hands high and weighing 1150 pounds. He was bred by L. H. Smith, of Arcanum, Ohio, in 1892. Alfondly has the kindest of dispositions, and in addition to his speed, he has characteristics which render him a particularly valuable "all-round" horse. No one could wish a more nearly perfect driving horse than Alfondly. His gait is the poetry of motion, and he is faster than any other horse for scores of miles around. He is also a great campaigner, and, as an illustration of his powers in this direction, we may cite a few instances from his work as a three-year-old. In his first race, on May 28, before fairly in condition, he came out second in 2:20. Out of the next eight races in which he took part, he won seven, six in straight heats, and in the other took the first heat, and was then drawn on account of an accident. On August 2, at Middletown, Indiana, he went up against a field of twelve competing horses. There he distanced, or caused to be drawn, five of the number, and won the race in straight heats, as usual. His crowning glory was his performance at Richmond, Indiana, on September 12, 1895, where he again carried all before him, lowering his record to the remarkable figure of 2:12. All these races took place over ordinary half-mile tracks. He has trailed a half-mile track in 2:07, which comes very near being as fast as any horse in the world ever paced such a track. In a six-year-old form he started ten times winning five firsts and never behind the money but once, and that was for not getting a heat in five, but he was second to Ada P. who got her mark of 2:09 in that race. Alfondly's sire was Potosky, by George Wilkes, the world's most famous sire, with 23 in the 2:30 list. Alfondly is a double cross Blue Bull with 64 in the list. He will stand at the owner's stable, Centreville, from Friday noon to Wednesday noon, and will be at Woodstock at Gallagher Bros. stable every Thursday. Terms: to warrant $15. $2.00 to be paid at time or first service. For further information write or telephone the owner.
