

Asthma.

You've tried almost everything for it, haven't you? And we presume you are about discouraged. Now what do you think of our idea of breathing-in the medicine, bringing it right up to the diseased part? It looks reasonable, doesn't it? And it's successful, too.

When you inhale Vapo-Cresolene your breathing becomes easy, the wheezing ceases, and you drop to sleep. For croup and whooping-cough it's a quick cure.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. The Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a lifetime, and a bottle of Cresolene complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. Illustrated booklet containing physicians' testimonials free upon request. VAPOR-CRESOLENE CO., 180 Fulton St., New York, U.S.A.

The Second Mile.

Many men dislike to serve on a jury. The work is arduous, the pay is small. Government demands this for the public weal. Enforced duty under modern rule, however, is exceptional. It was not so in the days of ancient Rome. She demanded public service from everybody, and especially from her conquered colonies. Did a Roman soldier need a guide? The law allowed him to compel any man to accompany him on his journey, not only to show the way, but to bear his burden. In his sermon on the Mount Jesus is talking to some whose feet had been weary and whose shoulders had ached under Roman exaction. Did he say, "The service is hard, resist to the utmost?" On the contrary, He bade them do a double duty. "Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." Do the required task joyously; yea, if possible, do twice as much as you are asked to do. Go not one mile, but two. The law, then, of life and service is briefly comprehended in the phrase, "The second mile."

Much of service is forced service. The necessity of providing food, raiment and shelter drives us weary miles, oftentimes against our will. Circumstances beset us, behind and before. For example, a young lady wishes to become a teacher. She looks forward to this as her life work. She studies hard. Her hope seems in a fair way of realization, when mother is taken sick. Necessity compels the daughter to leave school and to toil in the household nursing the invalid parent. Instead of reading Latin she washes dishes; in place of algebra she bends over the ironing board. Such is God's ordering. Again, a loving wife is deprived of her husband. Her home is broken up and her heart is left desolate. She is forced to toil for her bread. It may be that a business man loses his property; at fifty or sixty he finds himself at the bottom of the ladder, forced to serve where he has been accustomed to command. In what spirit shall we meet reverses? The powers that be ordained of God. Circumstances are His appointed angels. It is foolish to resist; it is wicked to murmur. We are compelled to go the first mile. Whether we toil, or, like Milton, "only stand and wait," is not for us to choose. Is there nothing more? Yes, Jesus teaches that reward and joy consist in going the second mile. There is no special virtue in doing the things we must do. The daughter must leave school when mother becomes sick; the widow must learn to live without her husband; the business man must begin anew when he fails. The first mile in the journey is compulsory. It comes to saint and sinner alike. Virtue begins when the girl, forced to leave her studies, performs her new duties with smiling face and cheerful heart. Love manifests itself when she does not simply the one mile necessary, but adds a second mile in brightening the home, in keeping her sacrifice out of sight, thus gladdening the heart of father and causing mother to say: "Daughter, you are such a comfort to me that I can almost thank God I am sick, for otherwise I might not have known the sweetness of your love."

This precept of the second mile should govern all the relations of life. Every true man should be willing to do more than his legal duty. Service begins to be precious and takes on new value the moment it goes beyond the first measured mile. If an employe says: "I will do what I am paid for and nothing more," if he never takes a step when he can help it, if he grumbles concerning extra service, he will get his wage and nothing more. His employer says:—"Yes, he does what I tell him to do, but he never hurries, is always ready to anticipate the time to leave, and has no interest in the business. I think I will let him go as soon as we get over the rush." If, on the other hand, he sees one always on the lookout to help along, taking an interest in his work, doing as opportunity offers even more than is required, he is not going to dismiss that man if he can avoid it. The second mile, the service that is neither compelled nor paid, this it is that helps one's career and in a large measure determines success.

This same principle obtains in religious life. The things which we do from fear of displeasing God are the necessary mile. Our Heavenly Father wishes more. He seeks extra service from loving hearts. Love never counts the cost of the spikenard. Love is willing to do its whole duty and then ask for larger service. Love says, "Where were I if Jesus had refused to go beyond the measured mile of duty or justice?" Love is grateful, and as she thinks of all God has done she cries:—

Love so amazing, so divine
Demands my soul, my life, my all.

Definitions of a Kiss.

Some years ago the following definitions of a kiss were published:

A kiss is an insipid and tasteless morsel, which becomes delicious and delectable in proportion as it is flavored with Love.

The sweetest fruit on the tree of love. The oftner plucked the more abundant it grows.

A thing of use to no one, but much prized by two.

The baby's right, the lover's privilege, the parents' denison, and the hypocrite's mask.

That which you cannot give without taking, and cannot take without giving.

The food by which the flame of love is fed.

The flag of truce in the petty wars of courtship and marriage.

The scene of agony to a bashful man.

The only known "smack that will calm a storm."

A telegram to the heart in which the operator uses the "sounding" system.

Nothing divided between two.

Not enough for one, just enough for two, too much for three.

The only really agreeable two-faced action under the sun, or the moon either.

The sweetest labial of the world's language.

A woman's most effective argument, whether to cajole the heart of a father, control the humors of a husband, or console the griefs of childhood.

Something rather dangerous,

Something rather nice,

Something rather wicked,

Though it can't be called a vice,

Some think it naughty,

Others think it wrong,

All agree it's jolly,

Though it doesn't last long.

A kiss from a pretty girl is like having hot treacle poured down your back by angels.

The thunder-clap of the lips, which inevitably follows the lightning glance of the eyes.

A report at headquarters:

Everybody's acting edition of "Romeo and Juliet."

What the child receives free, what the young man steals, and what the old man buys.

The drop that runneth over when the cup of love is full.

That in which two heads are better than one.

What Happened in Singapore.

Some days ago the players in a billiard-room at a Singapore hotel noticed with no small interest that a tiger measuring seven feet eight inches from nose to tail, was lying under the table. A player was chalking his cue at the time, but he immediately desisted, and chalked his stumps instead. The others took the cue from him. The boy who acted as marker alone kept his head. He walked out of the room, and (in a moment of brilliant inspiration) shut the door after him. That boy should make his mark. Eventually one of the players potted his opponent through the window, and the game was resumed.

To Prolong Human Life.

A discovery in relation to the prolonging of human life has just been announced by Prof. Jacques Loeb, of the University of Chicago, says a Chicago despatch. Salt and water, the "elixir of life" discovered by Dr. Loeb two years ago to be efficient in making turtles' hearts beat again with rhythmic throbs, has been found to be a powerful restorative for dying mammals and the professor thinks he is a step nearer the goal of prolonging human life indefinitely.

The experiments of which Dr. Loeb spoke to his class, were made by Assistant Professor Edwards P. Lyons in the laboratories at the university. Dr. Lyons began his experiments with the lowest forms of mammal life, mice, then dogs and cats. Taking the animals kept in the University of Chicago laboratories for experiment, he gave them such treatment as would bring them to a condition where life was practically extinct. Then by injections of sodium and calcium solutions into their veins he was able to restore for varying periods of time the heartbeat in its normal rhythm and strength.

The experiments were completed several weeks ago, but not until Dr. Loeb spoke of the matter in illustrating a point to his class in physiology last week was it given to the public.

Power of a Poem.

Will Carleton, whose new volume of poems "Songs of two Centuries," has just issued from the Harper press, tells the following incident which occurred in a hotel some years ago. Mr. Carleton asked for his bill. "There is no charge to you, Mr. Carleton," said the proprietor. The author naturally inquired the reason for such an unusual treatment, and asked again for his bill, but was again refused. "But," protested Mr. Carleton, "I don't know you." "Mr. Carleton," said the landlord, "some years ago my wife and I had serious differences, and finally decided to separate. We had been married a good many years. I sent for a lawyer and he drew up an agreement about our property and how it would be divided. Just about that time I read your poems, 'Betsy and I Are Out,' and 'How Betsy and I Made Up.' I was struck hard by the poems, and I took them to my wife and read them to her. She cried, and—well we've been together ever since, and there'll never be a bill for you in this house, Mr. Carleton."

Minister Wu-Ting-fang promises to write two books on America when he returns to China, whether he has been called to take charge of the work of revising and codifying the laws of his country. His experiences in the United States have been many, and some of them unique. On one occasion he and Carl Schurz were both to make addresses before a university audience. Schurz had spoken to the students before, and when they saw him on the platform they called out, "Schurz!" "Schurz!" The Chinese Minister, conscious that his silken blouse, worn outside his trousers, might have awakened what he knew to be the easily provoked irreverence of undergraduates, mistook the salutation for "shirts." Whereupon he rose, bowed and smilingly adjusted his robes, displaying the evident comfort he enjoyed in wearing them. Now the students took up the cry in earnest, and "Schurz" readily became "shirts." The uproar of their merriment rang lustily throughout the auditorium. Even the bland and philosophic Minister Wu began to display embarrassment. "Don't pay any attention to them," whispered Mr. Schurz; "they mean me." "Oh, is that all!" exclaimed the Chinese Minister, and sank back into his chair, vastly relieved.
