Hardships of the Educated.

Expatriating upon the hardships of the educated youth, a contemporary intimates that this is a bad time for the college man who goes out into the world to find something to do. Taking into consideration the fact that this is what is popularly known as the "silly season," it is not surprising to find intimations of this nature in ordinarily sane quarters. Viewed, however, as a proposition worthy of serious consideration, it is not difficult to substantiate a claim to the contrary effect, and to say positively that for the man who is really educated there has never been a time richer in opportunities than this. Of course it a man spends four years in college storing his mind with useless knowledge it is not at all likely that his B. A. will help him much in getting himself established in life, and the chances are that without material assistance from his parents he would stand an excellent chance to be reckoned among the idlers. But the other man, the man who knows what he wants to do and fits himself for it, and is persistent and conscientious in his work, need have no fear that the world will be lacking in rewards for him when the harvest time comes. The melancholy fact that our colleges are turning out schoolboys by the dozens, men who half know a lot of things that have no practical value in the pursuit of fame and fortune, does not alter the other fact that the well-trained student who has gone at his work seriously, and with a particular object in view, finds always a ready market for his energies. The whine that we get from the so-called "educated" man is not from educated men at all, but from those who confound the possession of a degree with education; who think that because they have fulfilled the academic requirements of the college they are therefore educated. These men may possess a vast amount of information, but they are no more educated necessarily than a man who possesses a complete tool-chest is by virtue of that possession a good carpenter. To have the finest set of tools in the world is a hollow mockery to the man who does not know how to use them; and these wailing youngsters who plunge into the whirl and a life of life with a store of information that they do not know how to avail themselves of are in an equally sad case. But the fault is not with their times: it is with themselves—or perhaps with their parents, who have failed at the proper time to observe their bent, and to direct their energies in the channels most fit for their fullest development.

The Policeman's Evidence

Policeman Peter Morris, Toronto, says that for years he was troubled with habitual constipation, and though he spent much money for medicine, was only disappointed with the results. He now recommends Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to his friends because it cured him of his troublesome ailment. You can be cured of constipation by this treatment. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box.

GEOGRAPHY AND MORALS.

A Traveler who Relies on Business Promises According to the Latitude.

"Moral obligation appears to be a geographical question," said Mr. Jacob Wright, an English engineer, who was in the city last week, while chatting with a few chance acquaintances in the reading room of a downtown hotel. The odd remark called for an explanation, which Mr. Wright gave:

"It's true," he continued. "I have had lots of experience in the northern hemisphere of this world of ours, and I rely on promises being fulfilled under the power of moral obligation according to my latitude. When a business promise is made to me, I turn to my map and see what latitude I am in, for the markings on the map give me a moral thermometer that for general purposes can be relied on.

"At the equator we have zero, where I never found moral obligation to exist; and as we go northward from there we find a sense of moral obligation to increase degree by degree until we reach the Arctic circle.

"This is no theory, for I am speaking from experience. Some of my first engineering work was done away up in northern Norway, and I learned, to my gratification, what it was to deal with Scandinavians. Never once did I have a man among them violate his promise. When an agreement is made, they appear to feel it is absolutely binding, no matter what the effect of its performance may be. Ask others who have been there and they will tell you the same thing.

"As you come down the scale and approach zero at the equator you notice that present interest more and more takes the place of moral obligation. Conditions are good in the British Islands, Canada and the northern United States, but every now and then you find a contract violated because the violator feels that it is to his interest to violate it. As you work on toward the South you find the heat is evaporating the moral element from obligations more and more and the proportion of absolute selfishness and concentrated indifference increases.

"When you are at the equator you have reached zero. There is no trace of obligation to be found. I have just come from there, and my last experience is fresh in my mind. My final contract was made with two natives of Villa Nova, at the mouth of the Amazon, for a boat that they were to put at my disposal the next morning, and it was made in good Portuguese, too. The next day, when the boat did not come, I hunted up the other parties to the contract, and they coolly told me that they had a better offer for it."

Fell Exhausted and Unconscious

Mrs. R. W. Edwards, 33 McMurray St., Brantford, Ont., suffered for five years with nervous exhaustion, headache and dyspepsia. "The pains in the head would almost drive me crazy, I could not sleep nights but would walk the floor in agony until I fell exhausted and unconscious. For the past nine months I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and from a mere skeleton this medicine has built me up in flesh and weight until I am strong and well." It would be scarcely possible to produce stronger evidence of the wonderful power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

PREHISTORIC MAN.

A Human Skull Found That Belonged to the Glacial Period.

Thirty-five thousand years ago, or thereabouts, a race of human beings roamed thru the central part of what is now the United States. These prehistoric people may have inhabited other parts of what later became the American continent, but of that there is no proof and scientists are able only to theorize.

The evidence that the central west was inhabited in glacial times has just been obtained after months of study of a skull found on March 22 of this year. Two farmers, Thomas and Joseph Cancannon, were digging a tunnel at Lansing, near Leavenworth, Kan., far into the earth. It was to be used as a great storage room for apples and fruits. They dug directly into the side of a hill. Sixty-five feet back and 35 feet under the surface was a solid bed of rock. Much of this had to be removed by heavy blasting. In the midst of this rock, so closely imbedded that it seemed at first part of the solid rock, was found a skull. This skull has become known as the famous "Lansing skull," and this with several small bones furnishes a proof that a race of mankind, altho a peculiarly formed race, once lived and died on American soil before the mound-builders or American Indians roamed its hills.

When the skull was found it was not thought to have any scientific value. Several days ago M. C. Long, curator of the Kansas City Public Museum, and Edwin Butts, civil engineer for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company of Kansas City, both enthusiastic archeologists, went to the place of the discovery and secured the fragments of the skeleton, and brought them to Kansas City. Both Mr. Long and Mr. Butts are enthusiastic over the discovery. From the appearance of the skull and its position in the earth, they are convinced it is that of a glacial man. If this fact be established it will be the first proof of the kind found on the North American continent. In a short time the skull will be placed on view in the public museum. The facts of the discovery have been communicated to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Aside from the interest the discovery is causing among scientists none is able to look upon this skull without a kind of wonderment, for the sight of it carries the fancy back into the mists of centuries to a contemplation of the veriest infancy of mankind. The skull is that of a man with hardly any forehead! Directly back from the eyes recedes the frontal bone. The fragments found show that he had an immense jaw. The phrenologists aver that the development at the back of the skull shows an abnormal animal nature. But there is no noble dome, no high and rounding forehead that shows the present era of intelligence.

Despaired of Being Cured

Mrs. W. E. Jeffries, 44 Hicks Ave., Kingston, Ont., states: I suffered agony with itching piles. In fact, I don't believe that any person who has not had piles can realize what I endured. The first application of Dr. Chase's Ointment brought relief and it has since entirely cured me. I hope that this testimonial will be the means of bringing comfort to other sufferers by making known the great power of this ointment.

The British Empire as Slave Buyer.

A Queer anomaly came under our notice a day or two ago in perusing some State paper in which the British Government appears in the novel position as slave buyer. It was fifty years ago, and Lord Palmerston was in command at the Foreign Office. The slave buying came about in this way: A poor slave-girl, an Abyssinian Christian—apparently dying and too weak for the brutal dealer to carry off with him—was thrust into the house of an English resident in Cairo, the dealer departing on a journey to Morocco.

The Englishman and his family treated her well and restored her to health, she gratefully serving them meanwhile for wages. In course of time the trader returned; found the girl in marketable condition, and promptly claimed his property. Naturally the Englishman refused to surrender her. But the dealer appealed to Mahomet Ali, who allowed his claim and threatened to send a company of soldiers to enforce it. The Englishman came in disgust to Sir Charles Murray, the Consul-General, who, burning to interfere, yet dreading to make an international row, wrote off to Lord Palmerston for instructions.

Old Pam's reply was a marvel of astuteness. He pointed out that the girl was not at the Consulate, which might be considered British soil, but at the house of a British subject liable to the laws of Egypt. The Viceroy's reading of those laws was that the dealer was entitled to have back his slave or be paid for her. "But," concluded Lord Palmerston, "it would be impossible to sanction the surrender of the slave. I therefore hereby authorize you to pay a fair price for the girl, charging it in your accounts with this office. It seems to me the price should be the value of the girl when left behind, not according to what she is now. Fifteen or twenty pounds is quite enough in my opinion. But settle it as best you can." Sir Charles did settle it.

Medical Use of Cold Water.

"I am beginning to think that cold water is more beneficial than drugs," a friend said to me recently. "When I am sleepless, as I frequently am, I wet a cloth with cold water and hold it alternately at the back of my neck, the pit of my stomach, on my wrists, and across my forehead. This lowers my temperature and leaves me so refreshed that I am usually sure of falling asleep very soon after the application.

"For constipation I know of no better remedy than a couple of glasses of cold water taken upon retiring, and also the first thing in the morning.

"Rheumatism also is said to flee from a persistent deluging of the system with this simple fluid. A gallon of water should be taken daily, two quarts in the morning, before breakfast, and the other two between meals during the day. Of course this quantity cannot be taken at first, but must be attained to gradually. Neither must it be bolted down as one gulps a glass of soda, but taken slowly, with intervals of rest.

severe attack of rheumatism in four weeks, by simply drinking cold water, and carefully regulating her diet, which consisted mostly in abstaining from sweets, and red blooded meat, beef in particular.

Rheumatism, constipation and sleeplessness are three formidable foes. If nature's beverage can successfully grapple with them, is it not well to avoid drugs, and to cleanse the system with pure water, free to all, and unfailing in its supply?—N. Y. "Observer."

The Beggar and the Lady.

Mr. Henry Norman, M. P., in his recent work on Russia, says that "heretofore in Russia there has been practically no middle class, the people being divided into governing and governed. If a man was not an official and had no right to wear a uniform he was of the people and belonged to the governed. This state of affairs had the effect of causing the intercourse between these two classes to resemble rather the relation of parent and child than of official and servant. To illustrate this Mr. Norman tells the following charming story: One day a miserably ragged man begged alms at a railway station from a prosperous looking passenger. At that moment a general—and it must be remembered that in Russia a general is a very great personage—with his pretty young wife, came upon the platform. "I will give you five roubles," said the man, heartlessly, "if you will kiss the general's wife." The beggar went straight to the lady, fell upon his knees, and told her of his plight. She listened, and then, getting her husband's permission, held out her cheek.
