Catching a Convert.

Among the many experiences set down in "John Wesley's Journal" is one which richly shows the humor, forbearance and determination with which the great Methodist carried on his work.

One day, on one of his missionary rides over the country, he overtook "a serious man," with whom he soon engaged in conversation.

"He presently gave me to know what his opinions were," wrote Wesley; "therefore I said nothing to contradict him."

But that did not content the serious man; he was quite uneasy to know if his companion held the doctrine of the decrees, as he did.

"We had better keep to practical things," recommended Wesley, "lest we should be angry at each other."

So they did for two miles, when the man caught Wesley unawares and dragged him into the dispute before he knew where he was.
He grew warmer and warmer.

"You are rotten at heart," he shouted.
"I suppose you are one of John Wesley's followers."

"No," said the preacher, with full appreciation of the situation, "I am John Wesley himself!"

Upon this the man would gladly have run away outright; but being the better mounted of the two, Wesley rode him down.

"Then, keeping close to his side, I showed him his heart," Wesley says, with fine simplicity; and so forcefully and persuasively, it seems, that when at length when they rode into town together the man was ready to declare himself a follower of the John Wesley he had sneered at earlier in the day.

Purchasing By-Products.

The farmer who has a high-grade class of animals, if he knows how to feed them for greatest gains or growth, need not be afraid of investing in some by-products to balance his farm foods. If the manure is saved, its value is greatly improved by feeding rich foods. The cottonseed meal, the wheat bran, or gluten meal, makes a good profit when fed to well bred animals. In addition to this profit, these by-products add largely of nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash to the fertilizer from the stables.

Increasing the fertility of the land increases the income from the farm. Where farms are getting richer, their owners are becoming educated. They surround themselves with the comforts and even with the luxuries of life. They are progressive and feel contented upon the farm.—[Indianapolis News.

THE DAIRY COW.

Three Phases to be Considered in Choosing Members of the Herd.

There are three phases to be considered in this choosing a cow, said Prof. F. S. Cooley, at a recent institute at the Massachusetts agricultural college. First, I would select the cow as an individual without reference to antecedents and records. The most important indication of a good cow is her udder. No cow can make much milk without a capacious udder. This is not measured so much by its vertical diameter as by its length as measured by the attachment to the body. It should extend well forward and far back or upward between the legs and should be wide at the same time, but not necessary pendulous. The next point to be considered is the barrel.
The cow must have a big body which is her workshop or laboratory.

Those features that indicate a good breeder or mother, should come next. She should be wide through the hips and large and roomy in the hind quarters. The fourth point to be considered is the forequarters, and here she should be rather thin and sharp, of spare flesh, loosely put together with chine a little sharp. The neck should be sharp and rather loosely put on the shoulders and the head long. Lastly should come the superficial points such as good milk veins, escutcheon, fine hair and loose skin. The udder, barrel, pelvic region, fore quarters and superficial points should be considered in this order, but most buyers begin with the last and seldom get as far as the udder.

The second phase of the selection has to do with the pedigree. A pedigree of the right sort should be a record of ancestry that includes animals of superior merit close up.
The mother of the cow should be a superior animal and of the type which you wish to perpetuate. The mother of the cow's sire should be the same. If they are mediocre, you have a poor pedigree to start with. The farther back you can go with good animals, the better the pedigree. The next point is uniformity and similarity of animals on both sides.

In the selection of a herd, the third phase is to choose a few each year from among those cows you have and weed them out selecting a few from outside, superior to those you propose to let go. To make selections in your own herd, it is necessary to keep a daily record and to make frequent tests of the milk. Dispose of those not making a satisfactory profit. At the Connecticut experiment station it costs about $42 a year to keep a cow, here about $60. In order to pay for this feed, a cow must be capable of making 300 pounds butter per year. The average of the herd ought to be 350 pounds, and 400 pounds is possible with care and selection.
Too many farmers don't know which cows are making a profit and which a loss.

License in New Hampshire.

The example of Vermont seems not to be lost upon New Hampshire. The progress of the license bill through the Legislature at Concord, while not unobstructed, is sufficiently clear to indicate a probable change in the traditional policy of the State. It cannot be made too quickly or too emphatically.

In New Hampshire, no less than in every other State where the attempt has been made to suppress by law the traffic in intoxicating liquor, that policy has proved a demoralizing failure. The records of the United States internal revenue show more than 1400 liquor dealers in New Hampshire. In proportion to population, this is about 50 per cent. above the average in States where the traffic is not forbidden. Prohibition in New Hampshire, in short, has produced its usual result, namely the increase of illicit selling and, undoubtedly, the increase of secret drinking.

One by one, the States which have made the experiment of prohibition have swung around to the more rational and truly moral policy of regulation. Here in New England, the State of Maine holds out obstinately for the discredited policy, and stands as an awful example of hypocrisy. If New Hampshire makes the reform which now seems likely to find support in the Legislature, the "Maine law" will be restricted to the State of its origin.—Boston Post.

The Intercontinental Railway.

Mr. Charles M. Pepper has been appointed by Secretary Hay to investigate the feasibility of a railway connecting the railways of the United States and Mexico with those of South and Central America. Congress has appropriated $2,500 toward the expense of the investigation, and members of the railway committee appointed by the Pan-American Congress in Mexico have contributed $10,000 additional. Mr. Pepper will inquire into the resources of the countries to be traversed, the condition and location of existing railways, the amount of traffic that the new road might expect, and the extent and character of concessions that the various governments would give. To connect New York with Buenos Ayres about 5,000 miles of road will have to be built, at a cost of not less than $175,000,000.

With his string of bells a-jingling, through the country-side he slams.
There are lots of calls to make, and he's always on the tear,
A-loomng in his cutter like an amiable bear.

And it's, "Hi-i-i, there, Johnny, don't you care, Though it's aching something awful and is most too much to bear.
Just—be—gay!
As soon as it is day,
The pain will go a-flyin', for the Doctor's on the way."

There are real, true saints, there are angels all

But there isn't one that's welcomer than he is, I'll

And it's, "Chirk, cheer up!
Mother, bring a cup!
You're going to like this famous when you take a little sup.
There—there—why,
There's a twinkle in your eye!
You'll be out again to-morrow, bub; giddy, gid-day, good-bye!"
Holman F. Day, in "Pine Tree Ballads."

The Policy of Non-Interference.

The minister of the Argentine Republic in Washington asked the United States, last month, to approve the principle "that a public debt cannot give rise to an armed intervention, and much less to the material occupation of the soil of American nations by any European power." He said that this was in accordance with the Monroe doctrine, which his country approved. Secretary Hay replied that the general position of the United States was set forth in the President's messages, which it was declared that it behooves each American nation "to main-ain order within its borders and to discharge its just obligations to foreigners; when this is done they can rest assured that, be they strong or weak, they have nothing to dread from outside interference."
