Make Weak Hearts Strong.
Make Shaky Nerves Firm.

THEY CURE

Nervousness—Sleeplessness—Palpitation of the Heart—Nervous Prostration—Faint and Dizzy Spells—Brain Fog—After Effects of La Grippe—Anemia—And all Troubles Arising from a Run-down System.

Read what T. L. Foster, Minesing, Ont., has to say about them:—I was greatly troubled with palpitation of the heart, a sudden blindness would come over me, and floating specks before my eyes caused me great inconvenience. Often I would have to gasp for breath, and my nerves were in a terrible condition. I took MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS, and they have proved a blessing to me. I cheerfully recommend them to all sufferers from heart and nerve trouble.

Price 50c. per box, or 3 for $1.25; all dealers or The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NEW RIFLE FOR BRITISH ARMY.

An Improvement on the Lee-Enfield in Many Ways.

The army is shortly to have a new universal rifle—universal in the sense that the arm in its shape, form, weight, length and energy is to be identical for all branches of the service—horse, foot and departmental. The new weapon is a modification of the present rifle, the Lee-Enfield. (It is incorrect to speak of it as the Lee-Metford, as is the common error. The Metford, barrel was discarded some years ago, and a new one, the produce of the Royal Small Arms Factory at Enfield, substituted.)

The chief lesson of the late war in South Africa is the enormous power of adaptability still lying before troops who receive an access of mobility by the employment of horses, either for riding purposes, as draught animals attached to the so-called "galloping" carts or wagons, or by means of mechanically propelled transport vehicles. The present rifle has been deemed inconvenient, more especially on horses or ponies. Comparatively few shots fired through it make the barrel so hot that it cannot be conveniently grasped by the soldier in case he should, as emergency might dictate, have to regain his mount, either to push forward or to make a "strategic movement to the rear." The experience of the campaign showed that the "sighting" of the Lee-Enfield rifle was capable of improvement. And that, compared with other magazine rifles, its loading arrangement, by which each cartridge has to be handled singly, was possibly the slowest—that is, of course, equivalent to saying the worst—in the world. The war also proved conclusively—and this is a point to be noted above all others—that there was more good, accurate shooting in the Enfield barrel than any other the most accomplished and trust worthy experts had submitted to them.

A DOUBTFUL ADVANTAGE.

It is, after all, the barrel of the rifle that in the main makes for good shooting of the complete weapon. This is so self-evident a proposition that it needs no elaboration, and, like other people, the authorities must have been aware of it. Yet what has happened? For the somewhat doubtful advantage of supplying mounted troops with a rifle that it is hoped they will carry with perfect ease, a barrel that was in so many ways superior to all others has been shortened in length, and, to avoid diminishing its effective and accurate range, given an extra "twist," so as to increase the velocity of the bullet as it emerges from the muzzle at the end of its passage through the truncated barrel. The sights on the modified rifle are believed to be a great improvement upon those which were carried by the victorious army of the empire through South Africa, but they could as well have been fitted to the Lee-Enfield. The magazine of the new rifle has been so arranged that with one effort it will "load" seven or ten cartridges from a metal "clip." This again is a plan that could have been carried out equally well with the old rifle as the new. Again, in the new rifle the barrel has been entirely clothed with wood from the breach to the foreband, in order to permit of its being grasped in any position after any number of shots have been fired from it. This very desirable improvement could, doubtless, have been added to the Lee-Enfield with relative ease.

CONDEMNATION OF LEE-ENFIELD.

The infantryman is in future to carry a similar rifle to his mounted comrade. He never raised a complaint against that which he is shortly to discard, so it comes to no more than this. That a perfectly satisfactory shooting weapon, the few accessory defects of which are fully granted, but which might have been easily remedied, has been discarded for the purpose of affording some degree or quality of relief to mounted troops, troops who must necessarily always be fewer in number than the marching troops, who are, and ever will remain, so far as human prescience enables any one to see, the backbone of an army. The advantage is, we think it will be allowed, a very shadowy one indeed. At any rate, the fiat has gone forth that no further quantities of the Lee-Enfield rifle are to be made at the government factories, and that such contracts as there may remain unfilled by private firms shall be terminated as speedily as possible. Then, after new machinery and "tools" have been made and adjusted, the manufacture of the "improved" rifle is to be begun at once, and the issue to the troops will follow as soon as possible. It is to be hoped that the question of a bullet for the new weapon has not escaped the attention of the authorities.—Pall Mall Gazette.

To See How it Feels.

We have been used to wonder or to laugh at the innocent ignorance of the farmer, who, when asked for payment of an account declared it to have been paid already. "Why, great goodness!" said he, "I paid that last summer—I gin my note for it." But perhaps some of us did not quite believe the story, thinking that the farmer knew better than to consider the giving of a promissory note as extinguishing a debt. There are others however, who seem to know as little about it as he did. A few days ago a large concern in Ontario received a letter from a tavern-keeper, an extract from which ran as follows:

Dear Sir,—If you will make up my account to date, and will send me some blank notes, I will fill them in and return to you as before, as I would like to get out of debt just once to see how it feels." Yours truly,

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

To understand paralysis and its causes it is well to remember that every movement of the body of its members is due to the contraction of muscle, which can only take place under the influence of nerve force.

As this all-important nerve force is created in the nerve centres of the brain and spinal cord, and conducted along wirelike nerve fibres to the various parts of the body, any derangement of the brain, spinal cord, or nerve fibres may result in paralysis or loss of the power of movement.

Paralysis, then, is the natural result of all neglected nervous diseases.

If you find yourself nervous and irritable, over-sensitive to light, sound, and motion, addicted to continual movement or tapping of the fingers, twitching of the muscles, sudden startings and jerking of the limbs during sleep; if you have nervous headaches or dyspepsia, are unable to sleep or rest, feel down-hearted and discouraged, and unfit to fight the battles of life; if your nerves are weak and exhausted, and your blood thin and watery, you have every reason to fear paralysis of at least some part of the body, and consequent suffering and helplessness.

Mr. James A. Deal, a respected resident of Bridgewater, N. S., writes:—"About a year ago I suffered a stroke of paralysis, which left me in a very bad state of health. To add to my troubles, last winter I took la grippe, which completely exhausted my nervous system. I could scarcely walk or talk, my legs and arms were partially paralyzed, my blood did not circulate properly, and I could not do any work. In fact, I was so bad that the doctors gave me up, and thought I could not live through the summer."

"I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and persevered in the treatment, until now I am at work again. The change in my condition has been most remarkable. It is a surprise to everyone to know that I am able to be around again. My nervous system has built up wonderfully by this remedy. I am able to rest well, my circulation is normal, and my general health good. My appetite is first-class, and I have gained considerably in flesh."

"The results I have obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food have been most gratifying, and I have no hesitation in stating that I believe I owe my life to this preparation. I am willing that you publish this letter, with the hope that it may be the means of helping others to regain their health."

A Useful Art.

It will be a dull world if the time ever comes when women are too busy to be pleasant.

"Is your wife entertaining this winter?" said one man to another.

"Not very!" replied his witty if disconsolate friend.

Under the brilliant repartee lies a melancholy confession. Unhappy the busy man whose wife is not "entertaining" this winter and all the winters!

The empty-headed woman is certainly a trial. She grows less common every year. But her place is too often taken by the woman with head and heart filled to overflowing with the problems of modern life, and she may not be much more skilful than her silly sister in dealing with the every day needs of husband and children.

A tired doctor, coming home from fourteen hours of tussle with a typhoid-fever epidemic cannot be refreshed by conversation on civic reform, or on the enrichment of the high-school course, or even on the latest German theory of the Homeric authorship. If he is not heartened wisely for his next day's work he is too likely to become himself a victim of the disease, and he may well have as his epitaph at the hands of his inconsiderate wife, "At rest—till we meet again!"

Intellectual grasp and moral enthusiasm are glorious possessions for any woman. But there are others not to be despised by her, and one of the chief of them is the power of being amusing.

A man who does not know how to learn from his mistakes turns the best school-master out of his life.
