BABY'S HEALTH.

Mothers all over the Dominion will be spared many an anxious hour if they will keep always at hand a box of Baby's Own Tablets and give them to their little ones as occasion may require. These Tablets have saved thousands of little baby lives and grateful mothers everywhere acknowledge the good they have done their little ones.

Mrs. E. J. McFarland, Wylie, Ont., writes: "I cannot praise Baby's Own Tablets enough. When I got them my baby girl was very bad with whooping cough, and cutting her teeth besides. With both these troubles at the same time she was in a bad way and slept but little either day or night. After the second dose of the Tablets I found there was already a change for the better. She slept well through the day and nearly all night, and this was a great relief to me, as I was nearly worn out losing so much rest at night. She cried almost incessantly before I began giving her the Tablets, but in a short time the cough ceased, she cut six teeth, grew cheerful and began to gain wonderfully. In fact, I believe I owe her life to Baby's Own Tablets, as I do not think she would have pulled through had it not been for them. I can recommend the Tablets to any mother who has a cross, fretful, sickly child."

These Tablets will cure all the minor ailments of little ones; they are guaranteed to contain no opiate, and can be given with advantage to the youngest and most delicate child. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail at 25c a box, by writing to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Obtaining Eggs in Winter.

Going among the farmers, I notice a great laxity in keeping their hen houses in a decent condition as regards cleanliness. The droppings are allowed to pile up beneath the perches at least a foot high, and if the building is at all close the pile ferments and throws off a disagreeable odor. The floor, nest boxes, and everything on which the hens can stand are besmeared with manure.

The nests are likely to contain more manure than straw. Hens will not enjoy staying in a place so vile that the owner dreads to enter. For the attendant's sake let the room be kept clean and odorless. Eggs laid in a filthy nest box are not fit for human consumption. The manner of feeding the hens often displays as great carelessness. Apple and potato skins that should be chopped small enough for the hens to swallow are thrown in whole, and most of them are tramped in the manure. Soft feed is given them in unclean pans or troughs, and loose grain in scattered on the dirty floor, where the hens cannot avoid picking up their own filth. Yet such people complain that they do not get eggs in winter. Contrasting with the above, I went into a hen house the other day where there seemed a chance for obtaining eggs. I made inquiry and found that during January the owner had received 259 eggs from twenty-four hens, and in the first ten days in February he had received 90 eggs, or a daily average of ten. In December he made no record, but estimated the product at 144 eggs. Looking about, I saw some of the essential things to profitable poultry keeping—a dusting box of coal ashes, litter to scratch in, a head of cabbage, a bone cutter, etc. The morning feed for the twenty-four hens and three cocks is a quart of wheat and a little fresh cut bone. For the noon feed, a mixture of oats one quart, bran one quart, some clover, and enough water to moisten, are heated for an hour before feeding. This is a bulk food, and the hens work at it until supper time, when they get a quart of shelled corn. The loose grains are scattered in litter, and some work for the hens is required to obtain them. The fowls kept are mostly of the light breeds—Leghorns, buff and white. There are a few white Wyandottes. So far as my experience goes, and from observing the breeds kept by others, the light, active breeds are fully as good winter layers as the heavy ones. I think the Leghorns will exceed the Rocks in this respect. The Leghorns make up in activity what the Rocks exceed them in weight and close feathering, and so are able under good treatment to withstand cold in fine shape. But no fowl can stand cold weather and be profitable without a warm building and plenty of good food.—(Steuben County, N. Y., Correspondence Country Gentleman.)

A Question of International Trade.

One of the unsettled questions of international law now troubling the repose of the Great Powers is whether an American heiress shall pay cash down for a foreign nobleman before the wedding, or shall be allowed credit till after the ceremony. The general principle applicable to all such cases is that of justice to both buyer and seller. The prevailing custom is to allow reasonable credit—say, sixty to ninety days—to brides whose financial standing is unquestioned. Our large importers agree that their trade would be seriously hampered were they forced to a strict cash basis; and that when the European shipper demands payment in advance they generally suspect his solvency. On the other hand, the seller is entitled to protection against feminine whims. So many heiresses have, in the course of a year or two, declared the article damaged, and have applied to the courts for permission to return it, that honest dealers have sustained heavy losses. Although brokers, when making the sale, usually stipulate that the nobleman is to be accepted "as is, not returnable on account of mistakes in description," they find that women are exceedingly capricious. A duke will be plainly advertised and delivered as second-hand and much soiled, but the lady, with charming inconsistency, will declare she supposed it was new. A lien on the goods is hardly practicable. We suggest, therefore, as a compromise, that when cash is not obtainable, the period of credit be cut down to thirty days.—New York Post.

The Educational Review.

The Educational Review whose editor and manager is Dr. G. U. Hay, St. John, N. B., has just completed its sixteenth year. It has been published continuously since the first of June, 1887, under one management and in this respect is the oldest educational journal in Canada. The secret of its success has been its energetic management, its whole-some tone and the excellent influence it has exercised in stimulating teachers to greater individuality in teaching.

During the coming year the Review will be enlarged and new features added to make it still more useful. Such a journal should receive the support of every teacher.
