A BAD CASE

KIDNEY TROUBLE

CURED BY

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Kidney Troubles, no matter of what kind or what stage of the disease, can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of these wonderful pills. Mr. Joseph Leland, Alma, N.W.T., recommends them to all kidney trouble sufferers, when he says:-I was troubled with dull headaches, had frightful dreams, terrible pains in my legs and a frequent desire to urinate. Noticing DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS recommended for just such annoyances as mine, it occurred to me to give them a trial, so I procured a box of them, and was very much surprised at the effectual cure they made. I take a great deal of pleasure in recommending them to all kidney trouble sufferers.

Price 50c. per box, or 3 for $1.25; all dealers or The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

NOTICE TO FARMERS!

We expect to resume our business of slaughtering lambs this season as usual. We shall buy our lambs by the pound, weighing when taken away, which has proved very satisfactory. We shall con tinue to pay one cent per pound more for ewes and wethers than we do for buck lambs.

We advise weighing all lambs before selling by the head, to see if we are not offering more by the pound for good lambs than they will bring by the head.

LOUIS E. YOUNG, Woodstock. THE LISCOMBE DIAMONDS.

"You dare to insinuate---" "I insinuate nothing; the facts are sufficiently patent. I can even show you the empty cases."

"There's some mistake-some infernal mistake!"

"I'm afraid not. Mrs Chester happens to be an old acquaintance of mine; she and her husband are not unknown to the police," "Her husband!"

"I have every reason to believe he passed as her maid tonight."

The colour had ebbed, leaving Liscombe's face very white.

"Good heavens, Morton!" he cried; "you must be mad to bring such an accusation."

"I should deserve the imputation if I had no proof to offer you." He held out a photograph. "Do you recognize it?" "It is Mrs Chester, of course."

"Quite so; but unfortunately, it also represents Mrs Luard, who was implicated in that affair of Lady Gunning's diamonds some years ago."

Liscombe moistened his dry lips. "If you knew so much, why did you do nothing?"

"To be candid with you, my dear boy, your mother feared you were too much prejudiced in the lady's favor to credit anything but the most uncompromising of facts. It was with the object of opening your eyes to Mrs. Chester's character that she decided to risk losing the imitation diamonds."

"Imitation! What on earth do you mean?" "Your mother would certainly not give the real Liscombe diamonds to be worn at a theatrical performance when she had had an exact copy of the complete set made some years

"A sham set? I never knew it," muttered the unforturate young man.

"So your mother tells me," answered Mr. Morton, composedly.

"And you suggest that Mrs. Chester has stolen the jewels and taken them with her to Sunny-lawn? The thing is absurd."

"Pardon me I never suggested anything of the kind. I discovered some time ago that Mrs. Chester was renting Sunnylawn by the month; also that the house was furnished on that most convenient plan-the nire-system. From which I infer that, had I not wired for a detective, Mrs. Chester and her husband would by this time be miles away with what they considered to be the Liscombe diamonds, to say nothing of the other less valuable jewels, which were not imitation."

"You have had them-arrested?"

"Certainly; just as they were driving off with their booty. It was very neatly done, added Mr. Morton, complacently.

'Liscombe's complexion had turned a sickly

"I'm sure I ought to be very grateful to you," he faltered, "for all the trouble you have taken, but I think I've heard enough for tonight, if you don't mind."

And Mr. Morton discreetly withdrew to join Lady Liscombe in her boudoir, where she was pacing up and down in a fever of impatience.

"Come in," she cried, sharply, in answer to the knock. "Well, how does he take it?" "Very well on the whole, but it was touch and go. However, the awkward fact of the husband saved us, and I don't think he'll give any more trouble."

Six months later society was set in a flutter by the announcement that Sir Edward Liscombe was engaged to Miss Emmie Vincent, the popular American heiress. But whether this happy sequel was due to Lady Liscombe's tact or to pique on the part of her son, who shall say? As a parti Miss Vincent was irreproachable, despite the fact that her hair was of the colour of the palest straw and her eyes of a nondescript hue.

"Quite a love-match, I assure you," declared the radiant Lady Liscombe to her manifold friends and acquaintances, while to Mr. Morton she murmured, "Once the dear boy is married, he may flirt as much as he

And I have lately had it on excellent authority that Sir Edward Liscombe, although the most exemplary of husbands, is known to have a profound admiration for the gipsy type of feminine beauty.

Mr. Forget's Threat.

Thanks to the preferential tariff English cottons have standing room in Canadian trade, and farmers, the largest consumers, are thus given a show against the cotton

As the business outlook brightens the combine's fever for bigger profits rises. Hence the attempt last month at working the "private and confidential" scheme on Mr. Fielding. But it did not work, and the combine is now in a desperate mood.

In fact, so desperate is its mood that the Montreal Journal, the paper of Lucien Forget, one of the cotton combine, says the next move will be to cut down the wages of the mill hands-a pretty threat in these piping times of prosperity.

Mr. Arthur Dansereau has been telling the public that Mr. Forget is a resourceful operator on the stock exchange. With all the shrewdness such praise implies, the wily stockbroker may yet have to learn that it is poor tactics to threaten a strong Government.

For Moving Day.

One of the greatest trials to the housekeeper, on the day that sees her entry into the new home, is the preparation of a meal for the newly arrived family, usually hungry and tired, and with tempers easily ruffled. Anyone who has experienced a moving day, and helped to unearth from their careful packing dishes enough to go round, at the last minute having to send to the nearest grocery to eke out a cold supper eaten off the kitchen table, will feel lize trying the advice of 'picnic,' as given by 'Good Housekeeping.' Take a good-sized basket, line with white paper, invest a few pennies in paper napkins and wooden plates, and some knives and forks, a bottle of vinegar, one of mustard, and a jar of butter, plenty of coldsliced meat, ham or whatever your people like best, a dish or a can of beans (don't forget the can opener), plenty of good bread or biscuit, hard-boiled eggs, crackers and cheese, and cookies and doughnuts. If you can have hot water then put in sugar (buy a pound of loaf or block-it's easier to handle) and a bottle of milk. Put the tea in a little bag made of thin muslin, and don't forget a jar of beef extract, with salt and pepper, for the one who is sure to be too tired to eat. Much of this can be arranged the night before, and if you try it once you will not go back to the old way.'

The Art of Looking and Keeping Well.

The carriage and position of the body, during both the day and the night, have much to do with one's figure, health and appearance. How quickly one can distinguish an army or navy officer on the street, though he is a stranger! How many would give a fortune to possess such a figure and bearing! And yet almost anyone who has not some natural deformity can acquire it by observing a few simple rules and practicing a few easy exercises. As you know, it takes but a few weeks, or months, of discipline and drill to change uncouth, slouchy, raw recruits, into fine, erect, and dignified soldiers.

Always, when standing or walking, hold yourself as erect as possible; throw the shoulders back and down, elevate the chest a little, and draw the chin in a trifle. When standing, the weight of the body should fall upon the ball of the foot, neither upon the heel nor the toe.

No one can have a good figure without throwing the chest well forward, the shoulders back and down, and carrying the body in an erect position. Follow these simple rules strictly, and you will greatly improve your figure and bearing.

Do not bend the legs too much when walking, and let the weight fall slightly more on the heel first. Swing the arms naturally, but not too much.

Be careful not to bob up and down when walking. A graceful walker seems to glide easily along. Curves are always graceful, and an angular, jerky movement is always ungainly. Grace is an acquirable quality, but we must remember that Nature abhors angles and spasmodic movements; she always uses curves which are most graceful and delicate.

The reason why woman is more beautiful than man is because her form is made up of graceful curves. There are no angles whatever in a model female figure.

Most people, when sitting, slouch at the waist; in fact, this fault is very nearly universal, except in those who have been trained. It is impossible to slouch about on chairs or on a sofa 'all day, and then expect to have a good bearing and poise when standing or walking. Again slouchy positions will very soon react upon the mind, and produce mental shiftlessness and slouchi-
