C. L. SMITH, postmaster at Woodstock, has at last been able to get the new lock boxes for this office. They are now on their way here and J. B. Brewer is at work on the new frames for them. At present there are installed at the post office 360 boxes, while the new ones will number only 324. It is true that about 100 of the present boxes are not in use owing mainly to the fact that the locks are broken. The new ones will probably all be taken up at once and with the increasing volume of business it is not unlikely that they will be found insufficient.

On Monday the sale of postage stamps was $54.80, the largest day's sale ever made in the office.
