The New York Times talks some very plain English in regard to Russian methods. "She advertises," it says, "that she has not a shred of national honor, and that whoever hereafter accepts a Russian official assurance will be a fool for his pains. Mankind will accept the notification. And mankind will sympathize with any nation which undertakes to bring this hardened national perjurer to her senses and teach her that national faith is not to be broken with impunity. The spmpathy of honest plain-dealing men and honest and plain-dealing nations will be with Japan as against Russia, and with the sympathy will go the hope that Japan will give Russia a lesson that at least the present generation of Russian 'statesmen' and diplomatists will not forget." We believe that is the sentiment of the English-speaking world. If they only took the step of saying that they would assist Japan at sea Russia would in all probability back down.
