The MacLachlan Concert Company.

The sale of tickets for the MacLachlan concert company is now on at Graham's store. All intending purchasers should procure good seats at once. Judging by the great audience which came out two years at $1.00 a seat to hear Miss MacLachlan, it is reasonable to expect when the prices have been reduced to 75, 50 and 35 cents, this much superior attraction will draw the largest house ever seen in Woodstock. Mr. Douglas Young is a tenor quite equal to Harry McCluskey; while there is the additional feature of a great cellist in the person of Mr. John Linden. This talented company have been touring the provinces the past two weeks and have met with great success everywhere. They will be heard here in Woodstock next Monday evening, October 3rd.

The Sizes of Books.

The projector of a new book has a right to make it of any size, says Theo. L. DeVinne in the September number of The Printing Art. "Neither law nor custom forbid. If he is economical he selects a size that will not waste paper unduly; if he wants to show his independence of accepted forms he orders a leaf of peculiar shape. This accepted size or shape, he says is too narrow and tall; that is too short and equatty. If his book is unlike any other in dimension it is an exhibit of his superior taste. It follows that a collection of miscellaneous books on the shelf presents a sorry sight to the lover of order and proportion. One so called octavo will be 9 1/2 by 6 inches, another of the same name 8 3/4 by 6 1/2 inches. Between the catalogued 12mos and post 8mos and the 16mos and 18 mos is no accepted line of distinction. Variations of an inch in height are common in books labelled by the same name. The names that are used to describe the sizes are absurdly indescriptive. In the infancy of printing publishers tried to define sizes by giving to each size a numerical name, intended to show the proportion that the leaf bore to the full sheet on which the leaf had been printed. A sheet folded to two leaves of equal size made a folio leaf; to four leaves a quarto; to eight leaves an octavo; to twelve a duodecimo. If all books then and afterwards had been printed on sheets of the same size, and had been folded in a uniform way, the numerical names would have been descriptive, but sheets were of many sizes and folding was done in many different ways, even before printing was invented."

Our Own Flavoring Extracts.

These we make at frequent intervals from fresh selected materials. Our idea is not to see how much profit we can make, but how good an extract we can produce.

We believe that our flavors have qualities not possessed by most of those on the market, and that once used by housewives they will secure permanent favor.

Our Vanilla

is especially fine. It is in a class by itself. Sold in bulk.
