

WHEN YOU GO INTO A STORE TO BUY GOODS
 No matter in what line, it is with a desire to get the most and best for the least money. If it be goods for wall-tinting and decorating, it is that is wanted, because it certainly does give the best returns for the money expended, and possesses many superior advantages over paint, kalsomine or wall-paper.

CHURCH'S COLD WATER

ALABASTINE beautifies and purifies the wall. Anyone can do plain-tinting. Any degree of decorating can be done with it. ALABASTINE is permanent. When applied to any firm foundation, it can be repeated at a less cost than to scrape off wall-paper or kalsomine, which is necessary before re-tinting.

Your hardware dealer sells ALABASTINE. In packages only—never sold in bulk. Send your address and get full particulars by return mail. Address

A Canadian Marchioness.

Society in London feels assured it will not be long before the Marchioness of Donegal marries again. The Marquis died the other day in his eighty-second year, leaving her with an only son, seven months old, who enjoys the distinction of being by far the youngest marquis in Great Britain. Blessed as she is with youth and good looks, prophets of Mayfair expect that the Marchioness's second match will be of great brilliancy, and they say it will not again take the form of a union between May and December.

She was Miss Gertrude Violet Twining of Halifax, N. S., and an orphan when, in December, 1902, she was married to the Marquis of Donegal, whose family motto, it is interesting to note, is "Honor follows though unsought." She was 22 then and he was verging on 80. She was reputed to have a snug little fortune. He was short of cash and his Irish estates were much involved, but he was rich in titles. In addition to being the Marquis of Donegal he was Hereditary Lord High Admiral of Lough Neagh, Governor of Carrickfergus Castle, Viscount of Chichester and Earl of Belfast, which made him a lord several times over. So, despite the disparity of fifty-eight years in their ages, it was regarded as an eminently appropriate match in aristocratic circles.

It was the Marquis's third matrimonial venture. His first wife—a Miss Oliver, daughter of Henry Holt Oliver of Western Priory, Somerset—he married in 1859. He then was merely Captain Chichester, a fine figure of a man with a handsome face but slender prospects. An unexpected turn in fortune's wheel, however, placed him in possession of the ancient titles and what remained of the ancient property. At one time it embraced a large portion of the County of Donegal and almost the entire site of the prosperous city of Belfast, but the early Chichesters were great spendthrifts and made sad inroads on their once large possessions. The first marriage of the Marquis did not turn out well. There were some queer circumstances connected with it—what they were never was disclosed—but they sufficed to procure an annulment of the marriage four years after it had taken place, and the first Marchioness was sent adrift. Old, feeble, friendless, and destitute, she turned up some thirty-five years later at a London Workhouse and ate her Christmas dinner there. She vanished again soon afterward and is supposed to have rest and oblivion in a pauper's grave somewhere.

The Marquis married his second wife in 1865. She died in 1901, childless, leaving the Marquis's only brother, Lord Henry Fitz Warrine, heir to the titles and property. Nobody imagined when the aged Marquis married a third time that the succession in the direct line would be retained, and many were the congratulations he and the Marchioness received when a son was born to them. The history of the peerage in recent years furnishes only one parallel case. Viscount Bolingbroke had no heir until he was 76 years old. He married when he was 73 years old a daughter of Robert Howard, and the present Viscount, now 8 years old, was born three years later.

The marriage of the Marquis of Donegal to the Canadian girl was a fortunate one in various ways. He lacked a head for business and she took the management of his property into her own hands. He was on the point of selling the bulk of it to his tenants, through the agency of the Irish Land Court, but she fixed up the troubles over the rents, with the result that the property has been retained along with the ancient family name, Chichester Castle.

When the conventional period of mourning ends the young Marchioness intends to take a town house and enter society.

Father and Daughter
Were Great Sufferers From Kidney Disease and Pains in the Back—Now unite in Praise of
DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Those who are best acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills do not wonder at their immense popularity as a family medicine.

In thousands of cases they have cured where physicians and ordinary medicines have failed. This is the test by which they have been proven.

Here is a letter we have just received from Prince Edward Island.

Miss Kate Doyle, lot 1, postoffice, P. E. I., states:—"About three years ago my father was seized with a severe form of kidney disease, which caused him much suffering, as well as anxiety lest the ailment should become chronic or prove fatal. We immediately obtained Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and he began at once to improve under this treatment, the symptoms gradually disappearing, until he became quite well again. Since then we always keep these pills in the house for use in the case of sickness of this kind.

"For some time I suffered from pains in the small of the back and accompanying ills, and though I was treated by a doctor at considerable expense, I could obtain no lasting benefit until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which seemed to be exactly suited to my ailment. Father and I are greatly pleased with the excellent medicine and wish to recommend it to others."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box of his remedies.

The Booze that Will not Jag.

Science, which is ever concerning itself with experiments in the line of extracting something from something else, and corralling it for the benefit of the public, is now at hand with a booze that will not jag—not even though it be dished with from morn till dewy eve and reverse again. So declares Professor De Loire of the University of Paris proudly claiming to have discovered a process by which the germ of intoxication—the very worm of the still, in fact, is captured, annihilated, and knocked into a desuetude so innocuous that not even a search warrant nor a Bristow investigation would find him says the Cincinnati "Commercial Tribune."

But what of it? Where would be the charm of the beady Bourbon, the foamy lager, the exhilarating ale, the festive fizz, the hock, the sherry, or champagne, if notwithstanding the inhibition of quarts and stems or schoppens of the stuff, there would be merely a distension of the diaphragm, and neither a merry thought nor a hip! hip! hurrah! nor a won't-go-home-till-morning? Thanks, awfully Professor. But when the day of the annihilation of the germ jag comes and liquor is as innocent of effects as the breath of the gentle kine in the clover pastures, that day will witness a diminution of internal revenue collections to a degree that will make Unk' Sam's pocketbook look like an elephant had camped on it for sure.

The jagless booze may point a moral or adorn a tale, but when it comes to the doctrine of natural selection it will be the booze that jags every time and never the jagless booze!

Topics in Brief.

An observer remarks that "the Japs seem to have learned everything from Europe except to be afraid of Russia."

What legislators those Japs would be? They will risk their lives to seize a pass.—The Philadelphia North American.

It is said that beef commands fabulous prices in Port Arthur, which goes to show that Port Arthur is no better off than the cities of this country.—The Kansas City Journal.

"The Daily Paper at Sea," which we hear about, is probably the Democratic paper that is trying to figure out what its party platform is going to be.—The Kansas City Journal.

General Kuropatkin said that not a Japanese that landed on the continent would ever return to his native land. It does seem as if the Japs were there to stay.—The Indianapolis News.

Some of the German officers and men invalided home from Southwest Africa are giving some interesting details of the campaign against the Hereros. They speak most respectfully of the intelligence and the tactics of the savage enemy. They say that his mobility, his partiality for individual sharp-shooting, together with the originality displayed in his methods of attack, combine to make him an opponent against whom "European tactics" are perfectly useless. The deliberate way in which the German officers have been singled out and shot by invisible marksmen recalls episodes of the Boer war. In view of the well-known keen-sightedness of the natives, doubts are expressed as to whether the light colors of the German uniform and equipment and the glittering buttons are not far too showy for the conditions of colonial warfare. With regard to the internal administration of Southwest Africa, the outbreak has revealed a number of defects. The hospital at Windhoek, which is the chief hospital in the colony, is a decaying shanty erected in 1892. It is built of native bricks, and has no adequate water supply, insufficient accommodation, and no ventilation except through cracked walls and broken windows. In the operating theatre the floor is rotten and threatens to give way at every step. This structure, which in ordinary times is barely adequate for the needs of the civil and military patients who require attention, is now expected to accommodate between forty and fifty cases of typhoid fever as a first instalment from the front. If the epidemic should be severe, it seems certain that many must perish for lack of adequate sanitary arrangements.

A Difference.

Phyllis' arms are white as snow;
 Golden is her head;
 Deftly move her hands below—
 She is making bread.
 Flour white from sifter bright
 In a steaming doth flow.
 'Tis a vision of delight
 When Phyllis kneads the dough.

Now she's ready for the street,
 Gowned quite a la mode;
 From her head down to her feet,
 As per Fashion's code,
 There's a rap upon my door
 (She's my wife, you know),
 Seems to me an awful bore,
 When Phyllis needs the dough.

Something Like a Farm.

"Yes, sir," resumed the Dakota farmer; "yes, sir, we do things on rather a sizable scale. I've seen a man on one of our big farms start out in the spring and plow a straight furrow until autumn. Then he turned round and harvested back."

"We have some big farms up there gentlemen. A friend of mine owned one which he had to give a mortgage on, and I pledged you my word the mortgage was due at one end before they could get it recorded at the other. You see it was laid out in counties."

"And the worst of it is it breaks up families so. Two years ago I saw a whole family prostrated with grief—women yelling, children howling and dogs barking. One of my men had his camp truck packed on seven four mule teams, and he was going round bidding every one good-by."

"Where was he going?"

"He was going half way across the farm to feed the pigs," replied the Dakota man.

"Did he ever get back to his family?"

"It isn't time for him yet. Up there we send young married couples out to milk the cows and their children bring home the milk."—Stray Stories.

Teacher—If you had eight pennies and Billy had four, and you took his and put them to yours, what would that make?

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The old reliable remedy for Spavins, Ringbones, Splints, Curbs, etc., and all forms of Lameness. It works them out of cures annually. Cures without a mess, as it does not blister.

Complete Cure for Bone Spavin.

Russell, Manitoba, Jan. 20, 1904.

Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., Gentlemen: I had to treat a young horse of nine months ago which had a Bone Spavin and got kicked on the same leg and was very badly swollen; so bad that I had to bathe it in warm water, then applied Kendall's Spavin Cure. I had Typhoid Fever the same winter and only gave the Kendall's Spavin Cure half a chance, and it only took one and a half bottles to cure his leg with very little treatment, and it did so completely that you would never know that he had a spavin; he never has gone lame since.

Very truly yours,
 GEO. S. HARRIS.
